McCarl Blocks FERA's Project To House Needy

Labor Head Calls Decision Calamity

Projects of PWA for District Are Not Affected.

The proposed FERA low-cost housing development in the District as a means of relieving unemployment was halted abruptly yesterday by a ruling of Comptroller General J. R. Raymond McCarl, and a legal threat was raised against FERA's national program of building rural-industrial communities.

McCarl held that relief funds could not be used for the purchase of land as sites for the development. While the ruling was directed specifically at the District project, it immediately raised the question of whether it might stop the plan of Harry L. Hopkins, Federal relief administrator, to build rural villages for the destitute.

FERA officials expressed the opinion that the national program would not be affected, but District officials were inclined to interpret the ruling as being applicable nationally. The ban does not affect the PWA housing division's low-cost housing developments, two of which are planned for Washington.

McCarl, in a letter to Hopkins, said that the District project would involve an undertaking of a more or less permanent nature, contrary to the spirit of the emergency relief act. His letter suggested that such activities be limited to the PWA.

Three FERA rural villages are now under construction, and a dozen more are contemplated.

Allen's Plan Disrupted.

McCarl's decision was aimed directly at the FERA low-cost housing plans which had been developed for the District by Commissioner George E. Allen, District relief administrator and head of the District Rehabilitation Corporation.

An allotment of $393,484 had been made by Mr. Hopkins, head of FERA, for the work. There were to be three projects in the Northeast section of the city. Two were to be for white residents and one for colored. There were to be 146 units of three-room row houses.

Employables on relief rolls were to be used in constructing the houses. They were to be paid union wages. It was estimated that five months' work would have been afforded to 2,662 men on relief rolls. Their dependents numbered 7,986. Plans for launching the projects had been pushed to the point where only the approval of McCarl was necessary to start steam shovels at work within 24 hours. Verbal options had been obtained, drawings had been made and the work machinery organized, it was said.

The McCarl ruling upsetting the plan was described as a "calamity" by John Locher, president of the

Mexico City, Nov. 20 (AP).—Reported rebel activity between Laredo and Monterrey tonight recalled recent reports that revolution would break out November 20, anniversary of the 1910 rebellion.

A proclamation circulated in northern Mexico over the purported signature of Gen. Antonio Villareal, twice defeated candidate for the presidency, called for rebels to rise to oust the present government and reestablish "true revolutionary principles."

The Mexican Telephone Co. reported its communications between Monterrey and Laredo, Tex., were severed early today, apparently by insurrectionists.

Later the war department announced at Monterrey that federal troops were pursuing rebels who cut the wires and burned two railroad bridges between Lampazos and Rodriguez, but described the rest of the country as quiet.

Telephone wires were repaired before noon and work was started immediately on the railroad bridges.

Telephone officials at Washington confirmed reports the wires had been cut but said they had no further information. State Department officials also had no reports from Mexico.

Reports received there said Gen. Villareal, who has been in exile in the United States but recently was said to have returned to Mexico, was the nominal head of the revolt.

In Washington, too, Gen. Juan Andreu Almazan, military commander at Monterrey and one of Mexico's strongest and most conservative military leaders, was said to have disappeared some time ago en route from Monterrey to Mexico.

Chest in Need Of $269,844 On Final Day

Workers Set for Big Push; Group Unit Leads as Drive Nears End.

To reach its goal by deadline, 7:45 p. m. today, the Community Chest needs $269,844.09.

Reports yesterday added $163,273.50 to the total already subscribed. Gifts now stand at $1,405,155.91 with 124,310 givers—the greatest number in any District Chest drive.

Final exhortations to workers were made at the luncheon by H. L. Rust, jr., campaign chairman; Henry L. Roosevelt, Assistant Secretary of the Navy, and the four unit chairmen; Maj. Gen. Frederick W. Coleman, Governmental; Charles Carroll Morgan, Special Gifts; Joseph D. Kaufman, Metropolitan, and Walter B. Clarkson, Group.

The largest unit report made was that of the Group Solicitation Unit, $66,813.58. This was the best report from this unit in the campaign and places it within striking distance of its quota.

A "Navy Day" program was given at the luncheon, with Assistant Secretary Roosevelt as the chief speaker, Chest workers from the Navy Department as guests and with the Navy Band playing for the occasion.

Col. Roosevelt praised the response of the Navy Department to the drive, it having passed its quota by 5 per cent. He predicted the entire Governmental unit would make its quota.

This was evident with the report of Maj. Gen. Coleman. The Governmental added $34,896.94 to its total. This means that the unit is within less than 2 per cent of reaching its quota. Today's report will see the

Gang Threat Scared Hoff Into Hiding

Thugs Abducted Weiss After 'Boo Boo' Fled, Police Think.

Note and Calls Received by Captive's Family Are Reported.

Max (Boo Boo) Hoff, Philadelphia racketeer, who is believed to have been the intended victim when William Weiss, his pal, was kidnaped, was hiding in fear of his life three weeks ago, when a Washington Post reporter tried to interview him, it was recalled yesterday as Justice Department agents sought the abducted Weiss.

Hoff, who is reported to have fled to California just prior to the Weiss kidnaping, is well known to Washington gamblers and its underworld. The Post reporter had been assigned to interview him regarding the local gambling set-up.

An indirect contact was made with Hoff, but at the suggestion of an interview the racketeer uttered an emphatic "No." Then came the reason. Two gangland characters, who had been released from the penitentiary on September 30, it was said, were out to "get" Hoff.

Unable to find him, they apparently kidnaped his friend, Weiss, instead. And one report has it that, after getting $100,000 in ransom, the kidnapers murdered Weiss.

The ransom money for Weiss, according to dispatches from Philadelphia, was put up by a big gambling syndicate headed by "Dutch" Schultz, notorious New York racketeer, who is a fugitive from the Federal Government because he dodged his income tax.

The syndicate headed by Schultz, The Post representative was told in Philadelphia, extends along the eastern seaboard from Brooklyn to Washington, and its profits, particularly from the "numbers" game, are enormous.

Interested in "Jimmy's Place."

That Philadelphia gamblers have a heavy interest in "Jimmy's Place", just across the District line in Prince Georges County, Md., is generally understood, but whether they belong to the Schultz syndicate is not known.

The word has been passed around recently that "Jimmy's Place" will close shortly afetr the new year. That means apparently that the owners have taken seriously the statement of Gov.-elect Harry W. Nice of Maryland that he will investigate and determine why the place is allowed to run.

Nice will succeed Gov. Albert C. Ritchie early in January.

Kidnapers' Demands To Family Reported

Philadelphia, Nov. 20 (U.P.).—In a copyrighted story the Philadelphia Record tonight revealed the negotiations and ransom notes in the William Weiss kidnaping.

It was at 11 p. m. Friday, October 26, that Weiss, sporting character, was "snatched" from his automobile as he attempted to drive into his garage.

Mrs. Weiss Answers.

Negotiations were started by his kidnapers within 24 hours. Here are their messages:

October 27—A voice on the telephone late in the afternoon asked for "Lena" (Mrs. William Weiss), but the person hung up before she could reach the telephone.

Fifteen minutes later the telephone rang again. Mrs. Weiss an-

Hull Is Groomed For Nobel Prize

Stockholm, Sweden, Nov. 20 (AP). Reports here today said Secretary of State Cordell Hull of the United States was a possible candidate for the Nobel Peace Prize, to be awarded December 10 by the Norwegian Parliament.

Secretary Hall, it was reported, has been strongly recommended by certain groups in America.

John R. Mott, of New York, noted for his Y. M. C. A. work and his writings on world religion, also was regraded as a possible choice for the prize.

Alliance Plan Given States By President

Suggests Alignment on Regional Lines to Speed Work.

(Post Staff Writer).

Warm Springs, Ga., Nov. 20.—President Roosevelt tonight proposed a new formula for cooperation between the 48 State governments and the Federal Administration in a conference with the Governors and Governors-elect of five Southeastern States.

Applauding the idea that led to a joint meeting of the Governors in Atlanta this week, he suggested that other States group themselves along regional lines and name one representative, presumably a Governor, to act as a liaison officer with the National Government.

In this manner, the Chief Executive explained, Washington could be kept in close touch with the regional associations of States with a minimum of effort. At present, he pointed out, the large number of States makes it virtually impossible to confer individually with Governors, or to assemble them at one meeting.

Problems Discussed.

Mr. Roosevelt discussed a wide variety of social and economic problems with the Governors, dealing particularly with unemployment insurance and relief. The meeting was strictly informal, it was explained, and no conclusions as to united action were reached, beyond a general understanding to obtain a closer cooperation than in the past.

The governors were interested chiefly in what the Administration proposes to do with relief, they said, adding that Mr. Roosevelt outlined generally the objective he has in view, namely, the completion of a well-rounded plan to substitute work relief for the present system of dispensing largess.

Such a program has not yet taken shape, he told them, but the broad outline calls for drastic overhauling of the relief setup to provide more jobs on self-liquidating projects. Also the Administration hopes to devise new ways to eliminate grafting and "chiseling" on relief.

Talmadge at Conference.

Final Insull Plea Begun by Counsel

Attorney Declares U. S. Charges 'Absurd.'

Chicago, Nov. 20 (AP).—Assailing the prosecutors for producing only "absurd theories," Defense Attorney Charles S. Lounsbury told the Insull mail fraud jury today that Samuel Insull and his aids had proved their innocence by their own losses.

Lounsbury opened the final fight by the Insull defense after the jury had heard a half day of closing arguments by Prosecutor Forest A. Harness.

Day sessions of the trial were extended, and night sessions were ordered today by Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson, who announced he hoped to instruct the jury Friday afternoon so that the case could go to the jury Friday night.

Marie Hoping For U. S. Trip With Boy King

Wants to Enrich Monarch's Education by Travel.

Belgrade, Yogoslavia, Nov. 20 (AP). Dowager Queen Marie of Rumania hopes to visit the United States again some time soon, bringing her grandson, young King Peter of Yugoslavia, with her.

The queen said today when she visits America next she wishes to travel not as a reigning queen, as she did last time, but as a private person.

If arrangements can be made with the Yugoslav government, she said, she will take the 11-year-old king with her to enrich his education by travel. The dowager queen plans to start her world tour, in which the United States will be included, as soon as she completes the fourth volume of her life.

"One can have so much more fun moving about as an humble mortal, especially in America where democracy is supreme," Marie said.

"As a crowned head your life is hardly your own. So many of your generous and gracious Americans wanted to entertain me last time that I had hardly a moment to myself. From every side they tried literally to snatch me.

"There is such a thing, you know, as killing even a queen with kindness. Although I am 59 years old, I should still like to live a few years more."

Queen Marie has received hundreds of letters from Americans who read an earlier volume, of her autobiography, most of them complimentary, but some critical. A few correspondents offered suggestions for improvement of the Queen's English.

Early Breakdown Of Parley Is Seen

Guarantee of Chinese Integrity Rejected Also by Power.

(Copyright, 1934, by the Associated Press.)

London, Nov. 20.—While naval and diplomatic circles forecast an early breakdown of the tri-power naval conversations here, it was learned tonight that Japan will decline to enter any separate agreement guaranteeing peace in the Pacific and the integrity of China.

A separate pact to that effect was proposed by the British to save the principles of the nine-power and four-power treaties should they be junked. This would occur if no naval agreement were made to replace the Washington and London treaties which Japan intends to denounce.

The Japanese delegates to tri-power naval conversations here rejected the proposal because, they claimed, it would further complicate the negotiations which are at an impasse because of Japan's insistence on equality in naval armament.

Japanese Silent on Issues.

It was learned the Japanese did not say they would not discuss some agreement to guarantee China's integrity and the peace of the Pacific at some future time, nor did they say the nine-power and four-power pacts would be junked.

The prediction of an end to the discussion came as America's delegates, Norman H. Davis and Admiral William H. Standley, sat back waiting for Great Britain or Japan to make the next move to end the present impasse, resulting from Japan's insistence that she be allowed equality in naval armaments.

Consequences of the breakdown, observers said, might be serious. They listed these possibilities:

The negotiations might be adjourned until prospects for agreement are brighter.

One or more of the participating powers might start hurried building up of its naval strength at the end of 1936, the effective date of Japan's expected denunciation of the Washington treaty.

Early Showdown Likely.

An early showdown, at any rate, was considered probable, with the British faced with the problem of making new compromise proposals or asking the Japanese to reconsider their refusal of previous proposals which embodied equality for Japan in principle but not in fact.

A new naval treaty, the object of the conversations here, must recognize full equality for Japan,

NRA State Units May Seize Eagles

Authority Decentralized in Case of Restaurants.

NRA yesterday authorized its State compliance directors to remove Blue Eagles from restaurant code violators, the Associated Press reported.

It represented the first step since the Blue Eagle was hatched to decentralize control over its use. Up till now, only the highest NRA authority—formerly Hugh S. Johnson and now the recovery board—had the right to deprive a code member of NRA insignia.

The board said all removals must be based on adequate evidence and must be prompt. Such removals may be appealed to NRA's compliance division.

State compliance directors also were authorized to restore the right to use NRA insignia when restitution is made and evidence of compliance furnished.

U. S. to Push Plan to Check Arms Traffic

To Be Offered at Geneva; Designed as Curb on Munition Storage.

Geneva, Nov. 20 (AP).—A broad American plan designed to halt secret arming of nations and prevent international terrorism—both of which are threatening Europe's peace—will be brought before committees of the disarmament conference in January.

The proposal to turn greater publicity on the arms traffic was put before today's meeting of the disarmament conference by Hugh R. Wilson, United States Minister to Switzerland.

Before the session adjourned Arthur Henderson, president of the disarmament conference, was authorized to convoke committees to consider the plan.

Proposed by Wilson.

Wilson, asking that light be shed into "murky corners," indicated in presenting the drastic proposals that the Roosevelt Administration at Washington hopes that the nations will make new year's resolutions to return to Geneva ready to act on the American scheme.

"The plan would tend to lessen the increasing fear of the unknown," Wilson said, adding that it might be "the turning point in a deplorable situation."

Russia, Sweden and Spain expressed approval of the American idea. Capt. Anthony Eden, British representative, welcomed it cautiously, but reserved comment. France was reported "sympathetic," while Italy regarded the plan as impractical.

American Attitude.

The American disarmament expert made what was interpreted as an effort to dissipate the belief of Europe that the United States has abandoned hope for success in disarmament when he said:

"My Government firmly believes that without disarmament there is no sound basis for peace. It has never wavered from that conviction

Distress Call Radioed By Russian Steamer

San Francisco, Nov. 20 (U.P.).—The Russian steamer Sverdlovsk radioed at 4:15 a. m. Shanghai time (12:15 P. S. T.) that she was in distress about 120 miles off Cape Patience, Sakhalin Island, the Globe Wireless reported tonight. Nature of the ship's trouble was not revealed.

Chance for Okada Is Asked in Article

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Keen interest was manifested by official circles here yesterday in an article in the current Christian Science Mointor's weekly magazine by Viscount Admiral Makoto Saito, former premier of Japan, pleading for agreement in the London naval conversations and assailing the propagandists and jingoes in his own country.

Admiral Saito's article flays big navy propaganda in all lands, but particularly in Japan, where he accuses members of the armed services and patriotic societies of being "extremists" and possessing an enthusiasm "beyond the point of fair play."

He expresses the opinion that, if left alone, Premier Keisuke Okada might be counted on for "honest fair play," but points out that army and naval officers have been increasing pressure on the premier and that the Seiyukai, major political party in Japan, "is seeking to ride the wave of propaganda so that it can gain control of the politics of Japan."

Tries to Reflect Ruler's Mind.

Viscount Saito furthermore does the unusual thing of undertaking to reflect the Emperor's mind. Describing Emperor Hirohito as "assiduously scrutinizing the finances of the country," the former premier, in effect, contended that the monarch would not "tolerate an unbridled program" in the future for the Japanese navy.

One of Japan's foremost statesmen, Viscount Saito, served as premier from May, 1932, until last July. He served as minister of the navy in three cabinets, has been attached to the Japanese navy since 1873, for ten years was governor-general of Korea and was one of the Japanese delegates at the abortive 1927 Geneva naval conference.

According to the Christian Science Monitor, Viscount Saito "has been prominently mentioned as possible head of the Japanese delegation to next year's naval conference." The article, although under Viscount Saito's name, is marked in that newspaper "as told to Herbert H. Hilscher, F. R. G. S.," who is identified as an "American writer and steamship executive to whom Viscount Saito made the significant remarks contained in this article."

Ideas His Own, He Declares.

The 76-year-old Japanese, in the article states that "lest there be some misunderstanding or that some might misconstrue this article, I should like to say that the ideas which I advance here are solely my own," and that "they are not intended as a smokescreen nor to sound out opinion in other countries."

If the 1935 naval conference fails and "a devastating naval building race becomes inevitable," Viscount Saito asserted, it will be because "so much opinion, conjecture and outright misinformation are being given to the public of all nations today that by the opening of the meetings none will be able to think and act rationally."

"Propaganda—outright propaganda—in all nations," he asserted, "is complicating the problem even more. And I fear that the great welter of half information, misinformation and the backlog of propaganda may foredoom the conference to failure."

Are Extremists, He Says.

He recalled that while he was premier, men in the army and navy and "agents of patriotic societies" came to him to talk about the naval situation.

"These visitors," he continued, "are invariably extremists and propose the strongest kind of action. They want Japan to serve notice of the abrogation of the Washington treaty at once and to start building the world's largest and most powerful fleet in all categories.

Drug May Prolong Man's Life By Easing Worry, Says Doctor

Cleveland, Nov. 20 (AP).—Human life can be lengthened, at least a little, by use of a drug that is claimed to reduce worry and increase resistance to disease, Dr. Wilder D. Bancroft, of Cornell, predicted before the National Academy of Sciences today.

He has not tried it on humans yet, but based his prediction on preliminary tests on rabbits and chickens. The drug is sodium rhodanate, used in other experiments by Dr. Bancroft to treat drug addicts, and which he declares have been successful.

Sodium rhodanate is not a specific cure or preventive for any disease, he emphasized, but in the case of rabbits and chickens, at least, it reduced their nervous irritability and made them more healthy and able to resist disease.

"In the last 25 years," said Dr. Bancroft, "the probable length of human life has increased materially, thanks to medical science; but the change has been due largely to a decrease in mortality among infants and children. The probable length of life of a man of 45 has not been increased appreciably in the last quarter-century. Medical science has failed so far as such men are concerned.

"If every human being of 45 or over for whom sodium rhodanate is not contraindicated (harmful for some special reason) would take sodium rhodanate regularly for the rest of his life, we predict an average increase in the probable length of life of at least two years, provided the medical profession will cooperate."

Tragic Secret Hinted Of Island's 'Empress'

Explorer Soon to Investigate "Terrible Happenings" in Galapagos; Mystery Continues to Veil Bodies Found on Beach.

Los Angeles, Nov. 20 (AP).—A hint that something too terrible to write about had happened in the Galapagos Islands, home of strange life and equally strange voluntary exiles, came to light here today as an exploring party was making ready to head for the spot.

The only clue to the mystery was the assertion it involved the "empress" of Charles Island, otherwise the Baroness Eloise Bonsequet de Wagner, 38.

The possessor of the secret is Dr. Friedrich Ritter, who with his mate, Frau Dore Strauch Koerwien, voluntary exiles from German society, has been living nudist fashion on Charles Island for years. A letter from Ritter months ago mentioned it.

Still another Galapagos mystery was revealed last Saturday when the emaciated bodies of two persons were found on another forbidding island of the Galapagos group by the crew of a fishing boat.

These happenings were far apart both as to time and distance. Ritter's letter reached here during midsummer. The islands involved in the two cases are 120 miles apart and there is no means of transportation or communictaion between them.

Stirred by word of strange happenings on Charles Island and finally by the mystery veiling the identity and circumstances of the persons found dead on Marchena Island, Capt. G. Allan Hancock, explorer, said he would leave southern California soon for another expedition to the scene of mystery.

Ritter hinted at the secret in a letter last July 30, in which he informed a Los Angeles patron of science that the "empress," together with Robert Philopson, her mate, and Alfred Rudolph Lorenz, of Paris and Vienna, had left there mysteriously July 16.

It became known today that Dr. Ritter's letter had to do with something so unusual that he did not put

Mrs. Rockefeller 3d Assails Socialites' 'Empty Charities'

New York, Nov. 20 (AP).—Mrs. John D. Rockefeller 3d struck out vigorously today at wealthy blue-bloods whose chief interest in charity seemed to her to be self-glory.

Mrs. Rockefeller, attractive wife of the aged oil king's grandson, criticized sharply "the arranging of benefits along with a large amount of publicity, the use of influential names without much spirit behind them, and continual buying of tickets for one's friends' so-called pet charities."

It was her debut as a speaker. She addressed the conference on family life and national recovery.

Last spring she startled her friends by registering as a member of the Socialist Party, but later insisted the registration was a mistake—that she had meant to enroll as a Republican.

The "kind of social work where one group gives the money, another group time and experience, and the third group accepts both" did not find favor.

"All this," she said, "leads the conscientious person to wonder whether these things are not done for reasons far removed from the cause at stake.

"It is a fine thing to be known as a public-spirited citizen, and it is pleasant to read of one's activities in the paper.

"It is also much easier for some people to lend their names and subscribe a few dollars for tickets than to contribute time and thought."

Mrs. Rockefeller, four years out of Vassar College, is the former Blanchette Hooker.

By Douglas Warrenfels.

Decision to prosecute the Houde Engineering Co., of Buffalo, for alleged failure to bargain collectively with its employes was announced last night by the Department of Justice.

Plans to institute proceedings in Federal Court at Buffalo were revealed by Francis Biddle, new chairman of the National Labor Relations Board, and Golden W. Bell, of the Justice Department anti-trust staff, after a conference between Biddle and Harold M. Stephens, Assistant Attorney General.

Smiling broadly, Biddle predicted "speedy action."

The litigation probably will lead to a major test of New Deal policies in the United States Supreme Court, for both industry and labor regard the case as of paramount importance.

Delay Irked Leaders.

The National Labor Relations Board announced the epoch-making decision in August. Labor leaders soon became irked and alarmed over delay in prosecution by the Department of Justice after the Houde firm made known it would not abide by the principle of majority rule, laid down by the board.

Attorney General Cummings repeatedly explained no court action would be brought until the department had enough evidence to "make a case." In recent weeks, however, much data have been collected.

"We have enough to go on now," Bell remarked.

Observers believed the persuasive powers of the soft-spoken Biddle figured prominently in the department's decision to press the case. Though a newcomer to Washington—he assumed the chairmanship only Monday—he was familiar with the board's work under Lloyd K. Garrison, its former chairman, and thought its place in the scheme of things would stand or fall largely on the outcome of the Houde case.

Injunction Move Indicated.

While details of the exact legal procedure to be followed were not forthcoming, indications were the Justice Department would seek to enjoin the Houde company from failing to abide by the labor board's decision and would further insist that the company comply with all collective bargaining provisions of the recovery act.

Earlier, labor board members privately confessed their embarrassment at the unusual situation which arose when the Justice Department delayed taking the case to court while the NRA compliance division found the evidence sufficient to revoke the Houde Blue Eagle.

The House company, which manufactures automobile parts, has two organizations of workers a lodge of the Automobile Workers Federal Union, an American Federation of Labor affiliate, and a company-sponsored union, which has no name. Both groups sought to represent all employes in collective bargaining negotiations. The labor board ordered an election and found the A. F. of L. organization the stronger. The board ruled:

Defied Section 7(a), Charge.

"When a person, committee or organization has been designated by the majority of employes in a plant or other appropriate unit for collective bargaining, it is the right of the representatives so designated to be treated by the employer as the exclusive collective bargaining agency of all employers in the unit, and the employer's duty is to make every reasonable effort, when requested, to arrive with this representative at a collective agreement covering terms of employment of all such employes.

"The Houde Engineering Co. has violated Section 7(a) by interfering with the self-organization of its employes, impairing their right of collective bargaining and refusing to bargain collectively within the meaning of that section, in that, first, it negotiated without intending to reach a collective agreement, and, second, it negotiated with the association after the employes had, by majority vote, designated the union as their exclusive agency."

Meanwhile, the personnel of another Federal mediation agency was changed when President Roosevelt named Frank P. Douglass, Oklahoma City, as a member of the Textile Labor Relations Board, succeeding James A. Mullenbach, Chicago, resigned. Mullenbach will remain on the Steel Labor Relations Board, formerly composed of the same men as the textile group.

Douglass, prominent figure in the recent campaign of Gov.-elect E. W. Marland, formerly was a member of the Railway Labor Mediation Board. He as a graduate of the University of Oklahoma Law School and formerly commanded the American Legion in his State.

Operation Removes 70-Pound Tumor

Dallas, Tex., Nov. 20 (AP).—One of the largest tumors known to medical science was removed today from the abdomen of Sophie Johnson, 350-pound colored woman. The operation was considered a success.

Originally, the giant growth weighed 125 pounds, but by drainage during the last few weeks its size was reduced to about 70 pounds. The patient was on the operating table for almost three hours.

Brother Surrender On Murder Charges

Cooledge, Tex., Nov. 20 (AP).—Two haggard, hungry youths, Joe Averett and Roy Curry, of Hubbard, sought since last Saturday for a killing and the kidnaping of four persons, surrendered to Limestone County officers tonight.

The pair walked into the Reynolds Filling Station and asked Reynolds to notify officers they were ready to surrender.

Averett and Curry said the had not slept since Sunday and had been without food more than two days.

Between You and Me

Big, Brave New Dealers Assume Pinkish Hue Beside Minnesota Governor.

—By Raymond Clapper

RUMBLING of synthetic thunder on the left is being heard around Washington this week.

It comes from a tall, blond young Viking—Floyd Bjerstjerne Olson, Minnesota's Farmer-Labor Governor—and is calculated to make the gooseflesh creep up the spines of the big, brave, bold New Dealers who eat bankers for breakfast.

He's warning them that they'd better face left before it is too late. He is preparing to march on Washington after Congress returns to revive his proposal for price-fixing of farm products.

The last time he and four other Northwestern Governors were here with it, they found the New Dealers very, very cautious—afraid it would start a revolution among New York and Pennsylvania farmers. The Administration managed to duck it and continue on its more moderate AAA program.

When Congress returns, farm price-fixing will be dusted off and offered again. Roughly, the plan is to set up a board which would fix minimum prices on farm products. Farmers could grow as much as they wished. Minimum prices would be paid for products to be consumed in the United States. Surpluses could be dumped abroad at lower prices. Acreage control would be abolished. Olson figures that the temptation to raise large surpluses would be checked automatically by the fact that this portion of the crop would bring unprofitable prices. One purpose is to get rid of the processing tax, which, he says, is being taken out of the farmer's hide, especially in hogs.

At the moment ever Olson doesn't detect a great deal of discontent in the farm country. But the price-fixing idea will be agitated anyway. In politics, if you don't have an issue, one has to be created.

In general, Olson feels this way. He says the country as a whole is now further to the le. than Roosevelt. One of two things must happen. Either Roosevelt must move leftward in response to this sentiment, or a more radical party will spring up throughout the farm belt. As it stands now, he doesn't see any demand for such a party. But he thinks it will appear if the Administration plays too close to the industrial East in the next few months.

The interesting thing about that is that for the first time since any one can remember, the land of chronic discontent embracing the Dakotas, Minnesota, Nebraska, Wisconsin and sections of surrounding States, is finding very little to complain about. Inflation talk has died down, Olson says. There is still clamor for debt relief. But on the whole, the White House has them eating out of its hand—both ways.

* * * *

Olson is breezy and salty and says what he thinks without trying to talk like a presidential candidate. He can talk to the voters of Minnesota in their own language, including not only the Scandinavian.

Earlier this month he was re-elected for his third term and he knows other places to go from where he is. The next one he has his eye on is the United States Senate for 1936, when the term of Senator Thomas D. Schall, the blind Senator, expires.

Olson was 43 years old a few days after election, which makes him a mere kid, politically. He is young enough to get fun out of shocking his elders, having in him some of Paul Bunyan, and a lot of Peck's Bad Boy. He's radical in a section where you have to be quite pink to rate even as a conservative in politics.

But as he tells the story, his State Farmer-Labor convention pushed him in deeper than he had intended to go in the last campaign. He made a keynote speech to the convention declaring for public ownership of all key industries. But when the convention platform appeared the word factories was included. That was taking in more territory than Olson wanted. He gulped when he heard the news, but he made the grade anyway. Nothing will happen on this because his Legislature is more conservative. Olson will still have the issue in 1936 if he wants it.

* * * *

Something else a good deal more disquieting is going on in the farm country with which politicians have had little to do. It is the spontaneous spread of the Townsend old-age pension plan. In Minnesota, Iowa, the Dakotas and Wisconsin clubs are being organized and petitions gathered beseeching Congress to grant pensions of $200 a month to all persons over 60 who will agree to refrain from gainful occupation and who will spend the pension money within 30 days after it is received.

One farm belt newspaper printed an editorial denouncing the plan and was deluged with complaints. Not only elderly persons are agitating the plan. Those with elderly dependents want it even more desperately.

The movement is developing sponstaneously without the usual troc, of paid organizers. That is why it worries politicians. The bonus agitation will be soft in its pressure, compared with this. Its originator, Dr. F. A. Townsend, retired former city physician of Long Beach, Calif., has started something.

Mr. Roosevelt is aware of the underground strength of this movement and that is why he struck so vigorously at "fantastic" schemes in his recent address on economic security.

* * * *

That speech recalls a campaign incident in 1932. A group of women approached Mrs. Roosevelt seeking her help in swinging her husband into line behind old-age pensions and similar measures. She advised them to go directly to Mr. Roosevelt.

"We have discussed that time and again, but we can't agree so it is a subject that we do not discuss at all," she is said to have explained.

From which it is inferred that Mrs. Roosevelt is the left winger of the family on social security legislation.

Kenesaw Mountain Landis 2d, nephew of the colorful white-haired baseball arbiter, is expected to take the Indiana seat in Congress to which his father was elected November 8, only to die of pneumonia a few days later. When the father, Frederick Landis, became ill toward the end of the campaign, his 27-year-old son took the stump and brought his father, a Republican, through in the midst of the Democratic landslide.

* * * *

Another children's hour story. Young Rush Holt, Senator-elect of West Virginia, has infant trouble. Holt will not reach the constitutional age for Senators until next June 19. He was elected to take his seat January 3, but before he can take the oath from Vice President Garner he must swear to an election certificate in West Virginia that he is in every way qualified to assume the office.

If that doesn't stop him, there still is the American Liberty League, pledged to see that the Constitution is kept sacred. It would be worth money to see Al Smith, Wadsworth, du Pont, Raskob and Shouse rush Holt at the Senate gates.

Finland Alone Likely to Pay War Obligation

U. S. Formal Notes Will Bring in Scant Fraction of 13 Billion Debt.

(Associated Press.)

The United States yesterday went through its formal but idle semi-annual practice of drafting "please remit" notes to European war debtors—a gesture that will bring in only a fraction of 1 per cent of the $13,000,000,000 owed.

Confronted by an undeclared but effective world-wide moratorium on repayment of the billions borrowed by war-stricken nations, the Treasury and State Department nevertheless are going through the routine motions of forwarding the debit notes to keep the record straight. Only Finland has not defaulted.

Brief, formal communications will be dispatched within the next few days to the ambassadors and ministers of 12 European nations, notifying them that on December 15 they will owe the United States Treasury $630,122,354.35. Of that total $154,729,976 is in principal and interest payments becoming due on that date, and the remainder represents unpaid arrears.

The debtors are listed as follows: Great Britain, $379,461,776; France, $163,616,843; Italy, $30,570,196; Poland, $22,972,909; Belgium, $21,628,360; Czechoslovakia, $6,118,514; Rumania, $2,346,250; Latvia, $642,028; Lithuania, $490,501; Estonia, $1,844,185; Hungary, $202,249, and Finland, $228,538.

Amounts due on December 15 are: Great Britain, $117,670,765; Italy, $2,141,593; Belgium, $3,109,453; Czechoslovakia, $1,682,812; Estonia, $531,350; Finland, $228,538; France, $22,308,312; Hungary, $50,210; Latvia, $220,683; Lithuania, $121,466; Poland, $6,616,309, and Rumania, $48,750.

Only Finland has met promptly its war-time obligations by making principal and interest payments on the semiannual due dates in the past and only Finland is expected by Treasury and State Department officials to forward its check for $228,538 next month. None except Finland is expected to make payments falling due.

The prompt Finns gave another object lesson to defaulting debtor nations yesterday when the Finnish government made formal application to the Securities and Exchange Commission to register $10,000,000 in 4 per cent sinking fund serial notes for sale in the United States.

Provisions of the Johnson act make it impossible for any nation in default in its debt to the United States Government to float loans or issue bonds in this country. Finland is the first nation to take advantage of its A-1 financial rating—resulting from its prompt payments—to obtain financial assistance here.

Rate Changes Made in West

I. C. C. Shifts Zones and Shortens Distances in Schedules.

By shifting zones and shortening the distances over which rates apply, the Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday acted to increase revenues of Western railroads.

The commission authorized a small reduction in rates for short-haul traffic to meet motor truck competition and in effect increased rates for distances above 170 miles.

The increase was effected by reducing the distances over which certain rates apply.

The commission also ruled that rates to and from the Northwest territory, including St. Paul and Minneapolis, should be the same as the rates within the Eastern zone, which takes in the territory east of the Mississippi River and north of the Potomac and Ohio Rivers.

The commission decided, however, that Western trunk line rates should be charged for freight to and from Illinois territory. Probably more freight goes in and out of the Illinois territory to the West than any other similar section.

The commission's action was taken on insistence of the railroads that they were not earning sufficient revenues to carry on without bankruptcy.

Mundelein Marks His Silver Jubilee; 10,000 Pay Honor

Chicago, Nov. 20 (AP).—George Cardinal Mundelein's silver jubilee year celebration culminated today in one of the most colorful religious spectacles Chicago has seen in recent years.

Ten thousand persons—richly robed prelates, liveried priests and devout laymen—crowded the Holy Name Cathedral and neighboring thoroughfares to honor his twenty-fifty year in the Episcopacy.

They stood in a steady rain to witness a procession of 1,500 clergymen, and those who were able to get inside the edifice knelt while the cardinal celebrated a pontifical mass in thanksgiving.

Cardinal Mundelein sang the mass before an altar blanketed in green ferns and red roses. He paused at the gospel while Mgr. J. Gerald Keely read the congratulations of the Pope: "We can no longer delay in renewing and in making open declaration of the feeling of our heart toward you. Your ability and zeal are evident to all."

Patrick Cardinal ayes told his colleague: "Not only is Chicago proud of you, but also your native city of New York, which writes your name high among its illustrious sons."

Carrying out a mandate of Pope Pius, Cardinal Mundelein imparted the apostolic blessing to the congregation—the 2,000 within the edifice and the hundreds assembled outside the cathedral.

King Outlines Duties Faced By Parliament

Indian Problem Is Chief Task; Fog and Rain Dim Procession.

London, Nov. 20 (AP).—King George, his procession to Parliament shorn of its traditional brilliance by fog and piercing cold, today dedicated the legislators at the opening of their new session to heavy tasks, chief of which was the Indian problem.

With only brief respite after the glittering ceremonial opening, the two houses began debate on the address replying to the King's speech which will occupy them for several days before they plunge into legislative work.

The king pleaded for maintenance of world peace, telling Parliament Britain "will continue to make the support and extension of the League of Nations a cardinal point" of its policy. Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald expressed like sentiments.

Arms Situation.

Replying to the criticisms of George Lansbury, veteran labor leader, MacDonald in the opening debate alluded to the disarmament situation which he said is "certain-tainly not despairing but not too hopeful."

"At the beginning of next year," the prime minister said, "we are going to Geneva determined to try again to get something done.

"Meanwhile Britain has to consider means of defense. We have reduced our armaments. * * * If our armaments have to be strengthened it will be on account of the defensive needs of the nation."

Political Conditions.

MacDonald said there is no doubt that the political situation of Europe has become "rather jumpy."

Winston Churchill, former chancellor of the exchequer, tabled an amendment to the address submitting that national defenses, especially air defenses, were no longer adequate to insure British peace, safety and freedom.

Recommendations for Britain's new deal in India, which will be made public tomorrow afternoon, are expected to start one of the most bitter parliamentary battles in British history.

The joint select committee which has been studying the Indian problem for 20 months will announce its proposals for some types of home rule based on a federation of Indian states. The report is expected to form the basis of a bill which the government will attempt to push through both houses next year.

Wheat Industry Facing Crisis, Session Hears

Control of Production, Exports by Nations Called Vital.

Budapest, Nov. 20 (AP).—The worst crisis in its history faces the world's wheat industry unless inter-governmental control of production and exports is tightened, the international wheat advisory committee was told today.

Review of the world situation read to the committee, which opened its sixth session under the chairmanship of John V. A. MacMurray, American minister to the Baltic States, forecast increasingly adverse conditions for wheat during the next two years and a possible crisis two years hence.

An expose of high pressure sales methods employed by some countries also preoccupied the delegates, representing 16 countries. Those policies were held responsible for the recent slump in prices.

Argentina and France, it was learned authoritatively, were under fire, but no information regarding recent exports and sales was made public.

One of the "Big Four" delegates, however, said "the commission's report contained strong stuff and no names were spared."

In the face of heavy shipments from Argentina, Canada, which controls its sales, was reported getting an average of 20 per cent more for her wheat than Argentina, though normally Canadian wheat is worth only 5 per cent more.

With the prospective supply for the world export demand already placed at the subnormal figure of 600,000,000 bushels, the conference report showed that yields per acre in Europe were being increased steadily.

This was expected to reduce further the already limited market the "Big Four" of wheat—Argentina, Australia, Canada and the United States—have in Europe, unless former big importing countries restrict production.

Alice Brady Kidnaped? Shucks, Just a Snooze

Hollywood, Calif., Nov. 20 (AP).—Apparently it was just a nap, and not a kidnap, that caused Alice Brady, stage and screen actress, to be reported missing.

She was supposed to report for work at Warner Bros. studio yesterday morning, but she didn't. This led to fears on the part of the studio that Miss Brady might have been kidnaped. Some several months' old telephone threats were recalled. It developed that she was home all the time.

FACA Assumes Control of Wine

Choate Puts Trade Under Temporary Permit.

The wine industry of the Nation went under the control of the Federal Alcohol Control Administration yesterday.

Joseph H. Choate, jr., director of the administration, ordered all members of the industry, which has interests worth $300,000,000 in California alone, placed under a temporary general permit. Applications for permanent permits must be filed by January 1, 1935.

Five liquor industries are now under permits—the distillers, the rectifiers, the importers and wholesalers. Brewers, under a code, are not under FACA permits.

'Witches' Victim Is Found Guilty In Barn Burning

Westminster, Md., Nov. 20 (Spl.). Fear of becoming "bewitched," unless he burned the barn of his cousin, where "bewitched" horses were stabled, resulted today in the conviction of George Miller, of Union Mills, on a charge of arson.

In an alleged confession, Miller is said to have told Sheriff Ray Yohn he burned the barn because his sister warned him that his cousin's horses were "bewitched," and that in order to prevent the curse from falling on him he should destroy the barn.

Miller later denied the confession, charging that the officers "had me all scared and I didn't know what I was saying."

Moley Urges Mooney's Pardon; Says Perjury Tainted Trial

Two Commissions Uphold This Opinion, Says President's Friend.

New York, Nov. 20 (AP).—Raymond Moley, in an open letter to Gov. Frank Merriam, of California, recommends a pardon for Tom Mooney "before the Supreme Court is compelled to enter upon the task of establishing the legal justification for a review of the case."

The open letter leads off the issue of the magazine today to be published Thursday. Moley, close friend of President Roosevelt and one of the original "Brain Trust," is editor of the magazine. His letter says:

"I believe you should pardon him because it is more important that the processes of justice be maintained on an elevation untainted by error or corruption than that a 'menace to the peace of the State' be kept behind bars. A suspicion abroad in the land that justice is tainted is more dangerous to the public peace than the liberty of a thousand bad men."

Saying he wrote as a "professional student of criminal justice," Moley said he was forced to the belief that Mooney's trial "was tainted with perjury to such a degree that his conviction was unfair in the light of Anglo-American traditions of jurisprudence."

Two commissions, Moley said, have "substantiated this conclusion. This is a judgment no state can afford to ignore."

"The proper way to protect the Government of California from such a judgment," the open letter continues, "is to exercise the power vested in you to issue a pardon to Mooney * * *."

Bronze Tablet To Be Unveiled

Shepherdstown, W. Va., Nov. 20 (Spl.).—A bronze tablet will be unveiled at formal ceremonies here Friday night to the memory of Fred L. Weltzheimer, for many years secretary of Mt. Nebo Lodge of Masons, which is arranging the unveiling. Masons and Eastern Star members from eastern West Virginia and points in nearby Maryland and Virginia have been invited.

A public ceremony will follow in the auditorium of Shepherd State Teachers College here. Past Grand Master I. Wade Coffman, of Charleston, will make the principal address.

The public program will include music by the Masonic Choir of Hagerstown, Md.; invocation by the Rev. B. W. John, of Shepherdstown; address "The Man and the Mason," J. L. Welshans, Shepherdstown; "Masonic Ideals," Braxton D. Gibson, Charles Town; an address by a representative of Queen Esther Chapter, Eastern Star, Hagerstown, Md.; memorial address by P. G. M. Coffmann; benediction by the Rev. Joseph E. Guy, Shepherdstown.

Ruling Hits Estate Bid Of Peaches Browning

New York, Nov. 20 (AP).—Mrs. Frances (Peaches) Heenan Browning was held today to be a "stranger" as far as her claim to a widow's share in the fortune of her former husband, Edward E. Browning, is concerned. Surrogate James A. Delehanty ordered her appearance struck from the record.

The surrogate based his decision on an amendment to the decedent estate law which became effective only 42 days before Browning's death, October 12. It provides that a wife or husband who abandons a spouse is prohibited from benefiting from the other's property.

'Mystery' Teacher Is 3d Since Row Over School Flag

Syracuse, N. Y., Nov. 20 (AP).—A "mystery teacher" took Miss Esther de Lee's job in Pompey Hollow's 12-pupil school.

The third "schoolmarm" hired by James M. Armstrong, steeplejack, farmer and school trustee, since he fired Miss De Lee two weeks ago in an argument over the display of the American flag, bolted the door of the one-room building today with herself and the children inside.

Before sending the bolt home she declined to give her name, adding: "I am instructed to give no information."

Leaders Press Effort to Weld Aims of Trade

HOLC Firm in Stand on New Loans; Green Hails Housing Plan.

Efforts to weld the aims of orthodox business groups and the Administration together were continued yesterday with a harmonious meeting of the Federal Reserve Board and its advisory council, refusal of the Home Owners Loan Corporation directors to weaken their ban against accepting further loan applications and a plea to organized labor to support the Federal housing program.

The advisory council, comprising a representative from each of the 12 reserve districts, completed a two-day session here without issuing any statement, but it was emphasized that its meeting with the Reserve Board had taken place in a happy atmosphere.

The board, after adjourning its meeting here in September, sharply assailed Administration monetary and fiscal policies as creating widespread uncertainty and holding back recovery. Since that time, the Roosevelt Administration has taken steps regarded as reassuring to business.

Eccles' Statement.

Gov. Marriner S. Eccles of the Reserve Board, however, issued a brief statement to the effect that the board and council had "discussed questions relating to general business and banking conditions and the meetings of the two bodies were held in complete harmony and a spirit of cooperation."

"There was a willingness and a desire to cooperate on the part of the advisory council," Gov. Eccles added.

He said the only recommendation submitted by the advisory council dealt with regulations under the stock market control act to govern the making of collateral loans by banks. This matter is now under consideration by the Reserve Board, and the nature of the recommendation was withheld.

It was learned that members of the advisory council felt they should not issue any statement testifying to the new harmony in view of the sharpness of their September criticism of Administration policies and the blunt refusal of the Reserve Board even to accept their recommendations.

Meanwhile John H. Fahey, chairman of the HOLC, made it clear that despite protests from members of Congress and others, his agency intended to stand by its decision not to accept any more applications for refinancing of home mortgages. He revealed that many applications received prior to the order against receiving additional requests had been pigeon-holed.

The HOLC chairman in justifying the agency's action emphasized the fact that many more applications were now on hand than could be accommodated. He said he was conferring with the Federal Housing Administration and with private financial institutions dealing in mortgages in an effort to have the latter take over part of the demands being made on HOLC.

The question of whether the HOLC will seek additional lending authority from Congress must wait for about 90 days, during which the agency will make a minute survey of the home mortgage situation, Mr. Fahey explained. In the end, he asserted, the President and Congress must decide, on the basis of facts presented by HOLC, whether the available funds of the agency should be expanded.

Mr. Fahey explained that at the rate at which loans are being made now the approximately $1,000,000,000 the HOLC has on hand will be exhausted by the first of March. Demands now are pending before the agency for approximately $3,500,000,000. He said the directors were satisfied that approximately 300,000 of the applications on hand, calling for an aggregate of about $1,000,000,000, are ineligible under the law.

This would leave uncared for applications requesting about $1,500,000,000 beyond the funds of the agency. Mr. Fahey expressed the hope that private financial institutions would shoulder this load of refinancing. He pointed out that insurance companies, savings banks and mortgage banks now have available "a couple of billions of dollars" to lend on mortgages they consider sound risks.

Resources on Hand.

In addition, he recited, the home loan bank system has on hand about $150,000,000 to lend to its 3,000 member institutions which have resources over $3,000,000,000. He said neither the HOLC nor private institutions wished a recurrence of a wave of foreclosures and that he thought there were sufficient resources available to take care of the situation.

Mr. Fahey pointed out some foreclosures under any circumstances are inevitable, due to lack of equity in the property by the householder. But foreclosures, he said, are going down monthly the country over. Incidentally, he added that so far HOLC has had only 21 foreclosures, that better than 75 per cent of HOLC borrowers had met interest payments on or before the date due and that not more than 17 per cent were delinquent over 60 days. He called this "an excellent record."

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, appealed to "the men and women of labor to get squarely behind the Federal Housing Administration and the building trades in their efforts to revive building and to provide better and healthier housing."

Pointing out that the ramifications of a better housing program are almost indefinite in putting millions of jobless back to work and in getting money working, Mr. Green also urged that "it will be immense aid in reducing unemployment in the months immediately ahead if we can break down the unreasonable prejudice against building in winter."

One Got in Senate Under 30—Can the Other?

Hearing Is Set On Pay, Hours For Newsmen

NRA Calls Session for December 5; 40-Hour Week Proposed.

(Associated Press.)

NRA yesterday called a public hearing for December 5 on a proposed schedule of minimum wages and maximum hours for news employes of daily newspapers.

The schedule was submitted by the code authority of the newspaper publishing business and NRA said "none of the provisions contained therein are to be regarded as having received the approval of the National Recovery Administration."

The proposed schedule:

"Section 1. Publishers shall not work any news department employe for more than 40 hours per week in any city of over 50,000 population, nor more than 44 hours per week in any city of between 25,000 and 50,000 population, nor more than 48 hours per week in any city or town of less than 25,000 population; provided that in an emergency additional hours may be worked if compensated by an equivalent amount of time off.

"The provisions of this section shall not apply to persons employed in a managerial or executive capacity, nor to reporters on out-of-town assignments, nor to correspondents employed in cities or towns other than the city or towns of publication; provided, that in the case of such correspondents, where a bureau of a staff of two or more full time correspondents is maintained, then the provision shall apply.

"Section 2. No full-time salaried news department employe, other than office boys and girls and learners who are provided for in Article IV, Section Four, shall be paid less than $25 per week in any city of over 750,000 population; nor less than $20 per week in any city of between 500,000 and 750,000 population; nor less than $18 per week in any city of between 250,000 and 500,000 population; nor less than $16 per week in any city of between 50,000 and 250,000 population; nor less than $14 per week in any city of between 25,000 and 50,000 population; nor less than $12 per week in any city or town of less than 25,000 population."

Girl Holds Berth As Fourth Mate Of Russian Ship

Newport News, Va., Nov. 20 (AP). If you want to see the fourth mate and navigation officer of the Russian motorship Kalinin, now loading a cargo of iron here, you must ask for Miss Anna Tumanina.

Miss Tumanina, 23, is one of four women members of the ship's crew, others being motorist, first class, Tamara Chere Inichenoa; stewardess, Mario Semenova, who is married, and Stewardess Lidia Marchisk.

Presence of women among them is not regarded as unusual by members of the crew, who point out that the Soviets now operate marine training schools for both girls and boys.

Before becoming navigation officer and bridge mate of the Kalinin Miss Tumanina had three years' experience on ships in the Black Sea.

Marina Loses So Much Weight Her Trousseau Has to Be Fixed

Paris, Nov. 20 (AP).—Princess Marina of Greece could give some proven advice to young women who would reduce—prepare to marry a son of the King of England.

The princess, who leaves France tomorrow to be married to the Duke of Kent, fourth son of King George, November 29, in London, has lost so much weight from preparing for the wedding that last minute alterations have had to be made in her trousseau.

Social obligations, visits with her friends and shopping have so filled her days and nights that she has lacked time to eat and sleep properly, a friend disclosed today. As a result, she has become so slender that a number of her dresses have had to be refitted before they were packed.

From Belgrade, Queen Marie of Rumania wrote the princess, who is her granddaughter, that "not merely an English prince, but Troy itself would have fallen for your beauty."

Addressing the future Duchess of Kent as "my beautiful Helene," Queen Marie said she was sending her a solid silver embossed flower bowl by Prince Paul of Yugoslavia as a wedding present.

"When you receive this bowl, put into it the finest English roses you can procure, and may you and George feel their fragrance represents the sweet, tender friendship and love I have for you both," Queen Marie wrote.

A London newspaper offered the dowager queen a large sum of money to write a special article on Marina for publication on the wedding day, but she declined on grounds that she is still in mourning for her son-in-law, the late King Alexander of Yugoslavia, who was assassinated at Marseille last month.

Meanwhile, in London, last-minute touches under the personal supervision of Queen Mary, who prides herself on her housekeeping ability, were being given historic old Buckingham Palace in preparation for the arrival of her future daughter-in-law and other guests.

The three-room suite which the royal bride-to-be will occupy on the second floor of the palace received the special attention of the British queen. With her own hands she will arrange banks of flowers—mainly chrysanthemums—in the rooms.

Bolivian Army Turns Tables On Paraguay

Captures Control and Supplies Along the Northern Front.

Buenos Aires, Nov. 20 (AP).—Probability of new decisive engagements in the Chaco war was advanced here tonight with the announcement at La Paz that Bolivia's northern army today had captured Picuiba, controlling communications and water supplies of much of the northern front.

The Bolivian victory was taken as evidence that Bolivia, goaded by Paraguay's successes in the Canada El Carmen and Ballivian sector to the south, intends to push its northern drive in the hope that Paraguay will desist from her push along the Pilcomayo River.

Form New Lines.

The Bolivians, driven out of their southern defenses, were forming new lines on the Pilcomayo upriver from Guachalla, which they were forced to evacuate along with Ballivian Saturday.

The Bolivian recapture of Picuiba, culminating her drive to free important communications and supply centers from the enemy threat, meant that Paraguay had lost virtually all of the ground she gained in her bloody August drive, which started with the taking of Picuiba and its lake August 15. The fort is situated east of the sixty-second meridian between the twentieth and the twenty-first parallels.

Military circles here said that the situation in the Chaco, as developed in recent operations, holds potent possibilities of strategic coups by either side, on the northern or southern fronts.

May Meet Disaster.

If the Bolivians carry their northern drive too far they may meet disaster such as that inflicted at Carmen and Ballivian, in which action the Paraguayans announced they took 9,000 prisoners.

On the other hand, if the Paraguayans diverted too many troops to the Pilcomaya for their surprise push there, their position in the north may be dangerous.

Meanwhile, neutral observers expected little result from the League of Nations' pacification efforts, pointing out that Paraguay's reported flat refusal of the league's conciliation plan today augured the same fate for the Geneva efforts as met 16 previous neutral attempts.

Export Bank Spurs Trade

(Associated Press.)

The Export-Import Bank, silent almost since its inception, recorded itself yesterday as having taken a healthy stride toward revivifying a flagging American foreign trade.

Through the bank, a Texas firm has sold $100,000 in ginning machinery to Brazil. A number of other deals—involving millions—in Latin-America and Europe are expected to follow.

Blocked exchange was the major obstacle to the Brazilian transaction George N. Peek, president of the Export-Import Bank, said it had agreed to lend the American firm the major portion of the money due from the ginning deal until the slow process of settling the currency problem had been completed.

The Export-Import Bank was set up by the Administration to spur trade through loans to exporters and importers in the long interval of negotiating reciprocal trade treaties. Two banks were established, but the first, formed to deal with Russia, has been inactive because of the impasse with that country over old debts.

The second, headed by Peek, already has financed a $5,000,000 silver transaction with Cuba and a $1,000,000 tobacco deal with Spain. It was this bank that aided the ginning machinery deal.

Wheeler Calls Bloc on 16-1 Silver Accord

Treasury Is Expected to Oppose Any Move Toward Inflation.

By Robert C. Albright.

A meeting of the Senate silver bloc to harmonize differences on a 16-to-1 silver remonetization bill was summoned yesterday by Senator Burton K. Wheeler, Montana Progressive Democrat.

Dissatisfaction with the Administration's present silver-purchase policy was expressed by the Montana silverite, whose views clashed with the pro-Treasury stand taken by Senator William H. King, of Utah, chairman of the Senate committee which forced through last session's silver-purchase act.

The silver bloc meeting will be held as soon as a few more advocates of a silver standard return to Washington, Senator Wheeler said, predicting the group will present a united front for increased silver buying.

Although Senator Wheeler minimized inflation aspects of the move, Senator Elmer Thomas, of Oklahoma, stopping over in Detroit on his way East, bluntly urged that the President go farther in dollar revaluation, stressing White House expansion powers under the so-called Thomas amendment. A three-way split in the bloc seems imminent, even though Senator Wheeler confidently predicted that the group will vote as one.

The Treasury was silent, but the Administration apparently was preparing to oppose any amendment to existing silver legislation, and would attempt to ward off every congressional inflationary gesture. The $2,500,000,000 soldiers' bonus, rather than silver, appeared first of the expansion moves headed for a Capitol showdown, but the silver talk was not underestimated in official circles here.

King's Protest Ignored.

Senator Wheeler avoided all reference to Senator King, who last week opposed any change in existing silver money laws. Senator King declared a more rapid silver purchase plan "would ruin China, and discredit silver in the eyes of the world." Senator Wheeler's statement was interpreted, however, as a direct answer to the Senator from Utah.

"I see no reason at all why we should pay any attention to the protests of Shanghai bankers, who naturally object to our buying silver, he said. Neither Great Britain, France nor any other nation consulted us when they depreciated their own currencies. It is about time we looked on silver from an American standpoint."

He said that a rise in the price of silver would mean an increase in the price of Japanese and British manufactures at Hongkong and Shanghai ports. For this reason, he said, Japanese and British manufacturers "who wish to dominate the ports," are fighting it. He insisted that the Chinese as a people are not protesting.

The silver Senator said he would like to see an international agreement remonetizing silver. In such an event, any inflation that might take place would be a world inflation, he argued. Statements that he would like to see the country "flooded with silver money" he characterized as "ridiculous."

"Our silver purchase program has done some good, but it doesn't begin to go far enough," he said. "If we want an international agreement, we must launch out independently on a purchase program, and force the world to follow us. That is the only way we are going to get an agreement and that is the only way we are going to stabilize world currencies."

Eight Billions in Gold.

He estimated that there is only $8,000,000,000 of monetary gold in the world, and even with silver monetized at a ratio of 16 to 1 he "doubted" there would be enough metal for a stable money base.

Senator Wheeler's statement squared largely with earlier comment by Senators William E. Borah, of Idaho, and McCarran, of Nevada, expressing dissatisfaction with the present Treasury policy, and urging increased circulation of silver currency.

Varying from his silver theme, Senator Wheeler opposed immediate balancing of the budget, favored a $5,000,000,000 to $6,000,000,000 expenditure for public works and water conservation, and predicted that the country ultimately is "coming to old-age pensions, unemployment insurance and the 30-hour week."

According to Associated Press dispatches, Senator Thomas conferred in Detroit yesterday with Father Charles E. Coughlin, and both announced for further revaluation of the dollar and its subsequent stabilization at the 1926 level. Both said that they had conferred with Henry Ford in Detroit, but declined to say what resulted.

Indictment Charges Mining Stock Fraud

Cheyenne, Wyo., Nov. 20 (AP).—A Federal mail fraud indictment, based on sales of mining stock to Ohio investors, was disclosed today with the arraignment of Andrew J. Hull, of Laramie.

Hull, mining promoter, and six others, whose names were withheld pending arrest, were members of a syndicate later known as the Wyoming Platinum and Gold Mining Syndicate, now in receivership.

Patman's Bonus Bill No. 1 on Calendar

The Patman cash bonus bill will be bill No. 1 to be introduced in the next Congress, according to the Associated Press.

W. J. McDermott, bill clerk of the House, said yesterday the measure, to be introduced by Representative Wright Patman (Democrat) Texas, would be given the first number as it has been in the last two Congresses.

Stricter Clauses To Be Revived In Tugwell Bill

Sponsors Favor Drastic Advertising Curbs Which Were Sidetracked.

Efforts will be made to revive several of the most rigid provisions of the so-called Tugwell food and drugs bill when it is reintroduced in the new Congress, it was learned yesterday.

Senator Copeland (Democrat), New York, who championed the measure for Rexford G. Tugwell, Undersecretary of Agriculture, until it was stymied at the last session of Congress, is expected to sponsor the revised bill.

Friends of the proposal made known they are particularly eager to obtain favorable action on clauses which were stricken out in committee last year. Those provisions would prohibit advertising patent medicines intended to be used in treating diseases known to be incurable and labeling of unstandardized foods to disclose the ingredients by name, except colorings and flavorings.

Indications were that the revised measure would conform in its major elements to the bill as originally drafted. It is likely, however, that Prof. Tugwell, formerly one of its most outspoken proponents, will be less active in its support this session because of his past differences with certain members of Congress.

May Ban Dangerous Foods.

The new bill probably will seek to prohibit false advertising, call for regulation of the sale of cosmetics and prohibit traffic in foods which are dangerous to health.

One of the biggest fights on the legislation probably will center around clauses to require printing of standards of quality on labels. A move to accomplish the same purpose was instituted months ago by the NRA, but so far has failed to produce the desired results.

The National Canners' Association, one of the several large groups actively opposed to the Agriculture Department's proposals for an A, B, C system of grade labeling, has contended a large proportion of the raw product of the industry can not be made to rate A or B and that the grade C food would be so difficult to sell that the scheme, if carried out, would prove disastrous to farmers and to canners.

A recent report of the NRA Consumers' Advisory Board upheld the A, B, C method and assailed proposals of the canners for a system of descriptive labels.

Report Cites Label Proposals.

"The Consumers' Advisory Board," the report said, "believes that the canning industry, by recommending a system of descriptive terms on the labels of canned food products, has taken a first step which logically leads to eventual labeling of their products by quality grades.

"Out of practical consideration, however, the board urges the industry to apply the results of its recent research into labeling requirements to the immediate adoption of quality grading, instead of experimenting with the half way measure.

"The suggested attempt to give consumers information about canned products through descriptive terms involves agreement by canners on exactly what constitutes such factors as tenderness in peas, greenness in asparagus, etc. Obviously, unless such quality factors are to be measured by exact tests upon which all canners agree, one canner's conception of 'very tender' will disagree with another's and the system will prove meaningless to consumers. Further, a number of such tests would have to be worked out for every kind of canned product.

"The project, in effect, would be piecemeal grading, with a separate test worked out for each factor involving quality and a separate adjective put on the label to describe the results of the test.

"To the Consumers' Advisory Board it seems much simpler to sum up these separate objective tests for quality in one familiar designation, such as Grade A, Grade B or Grade C."

Mrs. Jack Dempsey Resting Comfortably

New York, Nov. 20 (AP).—Mrs. Jack Dempsey, wife of the former heavyweight boxing champion, was reported resting well today after a comfortable night. The nurse who is attending her said her temperature had dropped from 103 to 100 degrees.

Hopkins Attacks Wealthy Colleges On Student Aid

Without calling any names, Harry L. Hopkins, the relief administrator, thrust sharply yesterday at "overly-endowed aristocratic institutions" which he said had criticized Federal aid for poor college students, the Associated Press reported.

"Why in the world in America should we assume, merely because some one happens to have money, that they are the ones who shall have a higher education—and nobody else?" he demanded in an address before the Association of Land Grant Colleges.

Officials of FERA's educational program disclosed later that colleges failing to apply for student aid funds included Harvard, President Roosevelt's alma mater; Yale, which conferred a degree upon the President this year, and Williams.

Junior Cabinet For Air Urged

Bingham Would Create Posts to Coordinate U. S. Activity.

Appointment of junior cabinet officers to promote aviation and coordinate air activities of the Army, Navy and Commerce Department was urged by former Senator Hiram Bingham yesterday before the President's Aviation Commission.

Criticism of the Navy's aviation policy was voiced by the Senator, who said:

"Since there is no high official in the Navy Department devoted to aviation in the same way that high officials are devoted to navigation, we find that the Navy has been taking backward steps rather than going forward."

"Leaks" Cause U. S. to Cloak Data on Fleet

Swanson's Orders Aim to Prevent 'Unofficial Espionage.'

(Copyright, 1934, by the Associated Press.)

The United States, seeking a better bargaining position with foreign naval powers, was disclosed yesterday to have clamped rigid secrecy restrictions on information concerning new naval developments.

The Navy Department's move was prompted by word that "leaks" had occurred. At least one world power was known to have refused to cooperate in an exchange of naval data, claiming that it could get all the necessary information through so-called unofficial channels.

The new restrictions are contained in a series of orders issued over the signature of Secretary Swanson. They apply not only to the Navy but to Government and private shipyards where London treaty vessels are being constructed. Certain manufacturers of devices for warships and naval aircraft also are placed under the restrictions.

Radio Developments Cloaked.

Particular secrecy has been thrown around certain improvements in naval construction, radio developments, gunnery and additional safety factors of ships against torpedoes and aircraft.

The restrictions were authoritatively said to be designed to prevent so-called "unofficial espionage" and thus give United States naval attaches something to trade with in obtaining information from foreign powers.

The "unofficial espionage" channels were described as through certain congressional investigation committees, and those which consider War and Navy annual supply bills, as well as the Secretary's annual report to Congress, and through motion pictures of naval devices and activities.

Report to Omit Secrets.

Steps have been taken to guard against including in the Secretary's annual report to the next Congress any information that might reveal new secrets and developments. This report is now being prepared.

Efforts to obtain the orders issued by Secretary Swanson were blocked at the Navy Department.

Although the Navy always has taken certain precautions to guard its secrets, under the London naval treaty, certain information is required to be made public. It includes designed speed of vessels, tonnage and caliber of guns. However, in the past year and a half the Navy has found it difficult to get information from several foreign powers.

As a result, the activity of the war-time security section of the Office of Naval Intelligence was resurrected last June. Comdr. C. E. Van Hook was placed in charge. It was through his findings of leaks in information about the new treaty limit shipbuilding program that the new restrictions were issued.

Visitors Must Be Approved.

Under present orders, foreigners who desire to visit or travel on American naval vessels now have to obtain the approval of the Chief of Naval Operations as well as the Chief of the Bureau of Navigation.

In addition, special precautions are being taken to prevent foreigners from visiting the new naval aircraft carriers, the Yorktown and the Enterprise, now being constructed at the Newport News Shipbuilding & Dry Dock Co., near Norfolk.

Guards have been placed on duty to inspect all visitors, who must first obtain the approval of high naval authorities before they can approach these new 20,000-ton aircraft carriers. New devices on the 13,800-ton aircraft carrier Ranger, which recently completed its shakedown cruise to South America, also are being closely guarded.

Further, it was learned, new restrictions have been issued concerning motion pictures of naval developments. A recent motion picture, which received wide acclaim, was learned to have revealed certain naval aircraft tactics which other countries did not possess. Most of the films of this picture, it was said, were bought up by representatives of foreign powers for the purpose of teaching their aviators American aircraft bombing tactics.

Three Women Ask Rockville Divorces

Wife of Edward Kelly Charges Desertion.

Three suits for limited divorce were filed yesterday in Montgomery County Circuit Court at Rockville, Md. All three petitioners were represented by Kenneth Lyddane, of Rockville.

Mrs. Florence E. Kelly asked limited divorce from Edward Kelly, of Washington on grounds of desertion. The couple was married November 26, 1913, and has no children.

Mrs. Cecilia W. Garrison, of Silver Spring, asked a limited divorce from Bernard C. Garrison alleging desertion and asked custody of the two minor children. The couple was married November 8, 1923 in Takoma Park.

Alleging that she was forced to leave him because of "cruel, brutal and inhuman conduct" Mrs. Mildred R. Childress asked limited divorce from Pat Childress, of Gaithersburg, Md., and custody of the minor child. The couple was married July 4, 1931, at Fredericksburg, Va.

Club-Juggling Cyclist Wants to Play Zither

Cambridge, Mass., Nov. 20 (U.P.).—George R. Plunkett, 21, of North Andover, who says he can juggle five Indian clubs while riding a monocycle, has applied for the zither player's seat in the Harvard Instrumental Clubs.

Plunkett is not a zitherist but feels that the dexterity acquired in 17 years of juggling will enable him to learn the 25-string instrument quickly.

New York College Students Incite Strike

swered. Presumably, the same caller said: "We've got Bill. Start digging."

October 28—The same voice barked "Get plenty of dough and get it fast."

October 30—Letter was received, addressed to Mrs. Weiss, in her husband's handwriting. He told her he was safe but urged her to "do exactly as these boys want."

The letter was postmarked "Philadelphia." It had been mailed the day previous.

October 31—Another telephone call came. The same man asked: "Did you get that letter?" Mrs. Weiss answered "Yes, and I'll do exactly what you say." The receiver clicked.

Telephones Again.

November 2—The same man telephoned again. He asked Mrs. Weiss if she was ready. "Yes," Mrs. Weiss cried, "For God's sake what do you want me to do?" The caller hung up.

November 6—The man called again. "Did you get that letter?" he demanded. "No, no," cried Mrs. Weiss, "wait—wait."

But the receiver was slammed down again.

Mrs. Weiss received a letter November 13 addressed to "Thomas Mayer, 617 Bankers Trust Building."

The office maintained by Weiss and his associates, including Albert "Buck" Mayer, was No. 716 Bankers Trust Building.

The family is convinced the handwriting is "Bill's" despite the discrepancy in the address. On the back he had put his home as a return address.

Kidnapers' Instructions.

That letter contained specific instructions as to the denominations of bills to total $100,000. They were to be old, in fives, tens and twenties. No attempt must be made, he said, to take down the serial numbers. They would be told, he finished, where the money was to be sent.

The letter wandered around for a week before it was "returned to sender."

Nothing has been heard since.

Family of Weiss Fears He Is Dead

Philadelphia, Nov. 20 (AP).—Two weeks without word from the kidnapers of William Weiss, night life character reported held for $100,000 ransom, led his family to fear he was slain and caused Federal agents to intensify their search tonight.

Sixteen agents of the Department of Justice sought out the haunts of underworld figures after J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the Bureau of Investigation, said at Washington it was an underworld case and he would take charge of it personally.

Fifty men, including the noted "roving squad," led by Melvin Purvis, are ready to join the hunt unless Weiss is found within a few days, local officials said.

Geneva Will Hear U.S. Arms Proposal and in the future, as in the past, it will work earnestly to contribute to the final success of the conference."

Recently widely published dispatches from Washington quoted Cordell Hull, American Secretary of State, as saying the United States had abandoned hope.

Hits at Terrorism.

The American plan hits at terrorism, it was pointed out, inasmuch as small arms, bombs and hand grenades customarily used by Balkan terrorists, would be subject to license and publicity.

Austria took advantage of the meeting of the conference steering committee to announce her claim to equality of armaments, something denied her by World War peace treaties, stating that the country had been "deprived of all security in the face of growing armaments."

Her demand closely paralleled that made by Germany just before the Reich withdrew from the conference last year. The German retrial was recalled when Italy announced her belief that efforts at disarmament were useless unless Germany returned.

The international treaty Wilson outlined would provide for rigid control of all arms, from revolvers to battleships, through licenses and full publicity of arms manufacture and trade.

He accepted, on behalf of the United States, international inspection of the American munitions industry provided other nations were similarly willing, and proposed a permanent commisison at Geneva empowered to investigate private or public manufacture and sale of arms.

'Gag' on Broadcast Ires Health Chief

N. Y. Commissioner Quits Place on Radio Board.

Albany, N. Y., Nov. 20 (AP).—Dr. Thomas Parran, jr., New York State health commissioner, who has been mentioned as the next Surgeon General of the United States, resigned today from the public health committee of the National Advisory Council on Radio in Education because he objected to censoring of a talk he had prepared for radio presentation on a Nation-wide hook-up.

The commissioner was appointed by President Roosevelt, when he was Governor, in 1930. He said he based his action upon "a last-minute ban by the Columbia Broadcasting System" on his intention to discuss control of social disease.

New York, Nov. 20 (AP).—Certain subjects "may more properly be discussed in print" than over the broadcasting networks, the Columbia Broadcasting system asserted in a statement tonight, commenting on barring a scheduled address by Dr. Thomas Parran, jr., State health commissioner.

the Tokyo representatives have maintained.

It was stated that the Japanese always have looked with sympathy upon Great Britain's desire to increase her cruisers to 70 for purposes of empire protection, but at the same time always have demanded the right to full equality with the British as well as the Americans.

Questioned from the floor, Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald today told the House of Commons the government, due to developments of the preceding 26 hours, could make no statement for the moment as to the progress of negotiations.

Two Priests Slain By Cannibal Tribe

Missionaries Died at Hands of Ferocious Chavantes.

Rio de Janeiro, Nov. 20 (AP).—The deaths of two Salesian friars at the hands of the cannibal tribe of Chavante Indians was confirmed today in dispatches from Belem.

Fathers Joao and Pedro were slain on the banks of Death River near Barreira de Santo Izidro. They had been working in the region as missionaries for five years.

The Chavantes are feared by all explorers entering the region between the Xingu and Araguaya Rivers. It was there that Lieut. Col. P. H. Fawcett, famous British explorer, disappeared in May, 1925.

Soviet Naval Attache Saluted at Annapolis

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 20 (Spl.).—Rear Admiral Paol Y. Oras, Naval Attache of the Russian Embassy in Washington, paid an official visit to the Naval Academy today and was received with customary honors, including a 13-gun salute from the shore battery. While the salute was being fired the red flag of Soviet Russia was flown from the peak of the station ship Reina Mercedes.

Rear Admiral David F. Sellers, superintendent of the Academy, entertained the visiting admiral, and with members of his staff, escorted him on a tour of inspection of academic departments.

The cardboard effigy represented Dr. Robinson, who is ill in Mount Sinai Hospital, with a second head—that of Premier Mussolini.

The strike was attributed to smoldering resentment among certain campus liberal and radical groups in connection with the expulsion a month ago of 21 undergraduates for staging an anti-Fascist demonstration during a visit of Italian students.

Fists flew and several persons were knocked down when polce attempted to break up the demonstration. It started when Charles Milgrim, an expelled student, began a speech calling for a general strike.

The arrival of Prof. George M. Brett, who took Milgrim's place on the improvised rostrum and told the students they could use the stadium, ended the fighting. The strikers started marching toward the stadium, chanting "oust Robinson" and "reinstate the 21 students."

Shouts of "cops off the campus" suddenly broke from the group. Again they began exchanging punches with officers. The college authorities, to avert a serious disorder, allowed the students to return to the flagpole.

The trouble started in the early morning when a black flag appeared atop the flagpole. It was removed by a steeplejack and replaced with the American flag. Finally, the demonstration quietly ended. Three students had been arrested.

Lions Club to Assist Red Cross Roll Call

Assurance that the Silver Spring (Md.) Lions Club will assist the local branch of the American Red Cross in every way possible in the annual roll call now being conducted was received yesterday by Mrs. William Wight, chairman. The local unit has set a goal of $700 for the drive which closes Thanksgiving Day.

The Lions have adopted a resolution indorsing the work of the unit and making a donation of $25. The group has also voted to participate in the special gifts canvass which the local branch is inaugurating this year. If enough funds are realized from this it is hoped to have at least a part-time visiting nurse service in the Silver Spring area.

Dr. J. M. M. Gary to Speak.

"America's Fears," is the topic of an address to be given tonight by Dr. Joseph M. M. Gray, chancellor of American University in Washington, at a meeting of the Kensington Chamber of Commerce. Music will be provided by the Baltimore & Ohio Glee Club.

Butler Details 'Fascist Coup' In House Quiz

movements said, to justify a thorough inquiry.

After publication of an article in a New York newspaper quoting Butler as saying he had been asked to head an American Fascist movement, the committee in executive session today questioned a number of witnesses, including Butler and Paul Comly French, the reporter who wrote the Butler story.

After the session, Representative John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, chairman of the committee, said additional witnesses would be called and that taking of testimony might continue through this week. McCormack said first evidence of the alleged Fascist conspiracy was obtained about three weeks ago.

Butler was the first witness. His testimony was secret, but it was reported he outlined the proposals made to him by the New York capitalists, who allegedly were attempting organization of a Fascist march on Washington somewhat along lines of Mussolini's march on Rome which ended in the Italian Fascist dictatorship.

The former Marine commandant was questioned three hours. Later Samuel Dickstein, vice chairman, said:

"From what we have learned, we believe Gen. Butler has considerable information and that he is presenting it correctly. The committee's agents have been checking for some weeks on the evidence presented by the general. We have about 15 witnesses under subpoena.

"Important Personages."

"There are indications that some rather important personages have been proposing ideas that are distinctly un-American."

The next witness was Capt. Samuel Glazier, commandant of a CCC camp at Elkridge, Md. The CCC was mentioned as an organization the Fascists might use as a nucleus for their organization. Glazier's testimony was not disclosed.

Gerald P. MacGuire, connected with the brokerage house of M. P. Murphy & Co., had been mentioned as the man who asked Butler to organize 500,000 war veterans into a Fascist army. MacGuire, who describes himself as a bond salesman, said the charges were absurd.

"What is all this—a publicity stunt?" he asked, asserting that he had not the slightest idea why he had been subpenaed by the committee.

MacGuire said he had known Butler three or four years and had talked with him about American Legion and war veteran affairs.

"A Peaceful Overturn."

Butler was quoted as asserting he met MacGuire in Philadelphia August 22 and that "the upshot of his proposition was that I was to lead a soldier organization of half a million men, that this group would assemble—probably a year from now—in Washington, and that within a few days it could take over the functions of government. To be perfectly fair to MacGuire he didn't seem blood-thirsty. He felt that such a show of force in Washington would probably result in a peaceful overturn of the Government. He suggested that 'we might even go along with Roosevelt and do with him what Mussolini did with the King of Italy.'

"McGuire insisted that all of his program was 'constitutional.' He proposed that the Secretary of State and Vice President would be made to resign by force, if necessary, and that President Roosevelt would probably allow MacGuire's group to appoint a Secretary of State. Then, if President Roosevelt was willing to 'go along' he would remain as President. But if he were not in sympathy with the Fascist movement, he would be forced to resign, whereupon, under the Constitution, the Presidential succession would place the Secretary of State in the White House.

"Man on the White Horse."

"Then he discussed the need for 'a man on the white horse' and insisted that a show of armed force was the only way to save the capitalistic system. He believed that at least half of the American Legion and Veterans of Foreign Wars would follow me.

"It was amazed at the audacity and bluntness with which the proposition was put to me. I have always believed in democracy and I felt it my duty to learn all that I could of this conspiracy and to see that the information was placed in the hands of the proper Governmental authorities.

"MacGuire explained to me that they had two other candidates for the position of 'man on the white horse.' If I did not accept an offer would be made to Gen. Douglas MacArthur, Chief of Staff of the Army. The third choice would be Hanford MacNider, former commander of the American Legion. So far as I know neither MacArthur nor MacNider were approached."

Butler was also quoted as saying MacGuide's group wanted to swing the American Legion to the support of the gold standard and that he was offered $18,000 to go to Chicago to make a speech in defense of the standard.

Their enthusiasm is in most cases beyond the point of fair play.

"And repeatedly I have told them that their proposals were not for the good of the world. I have pointed out to them that their unguarded utterances just lend fuel to the fire and that the work of our diplomats is made just so much harder."

He said these visitors have retorted that they would oppose such views and added that "their remarks then make good reading in the sensational press of Japan and the gist of their fiery words are cabled to America and Europe to make headline stories and further complicate the situation."

Viscount Saito reminded the United States that it, too, had "these spokesmen of the belligerents," and that "perhaps the pay checks they receive for their 'services' come from the same general direction as in this country." He referred to "gentlemen with large expense accounts" who had worked to wreck previous conferences.

Warns of Complications.

The former premier contended that "if the combined forces of propaganda, the utterances of the too-enthusiastic press and the demands of the naval officers" bring about abrogation of the Washington treaty "the 1935 conference will be greatly complicated."

"The hope I hold," he added, "is that the conservative leaders of each country and the right-thinking people of all nations—Japan, the United States, Great Britain, France and Italy—will recognize before it is too late that nothing—absolutely nothing—will be accomplished by a bankrupting naval race. Such a return to ultra-nationalism will only result in a setback to civilization and feed the fires of hate."

He urged that the sea powers mutually agree to limit their naval forces to "fleets just large enough to provide protection to our commerce and our coast lines."

Praising Premier Okada as "a competent, fearless, cool-thinking administrator" who holds to an international viewpoint, Viscount Saito added that "if propaganda does not wreck the 1935 conference before it starts, you can depend on honest, fair play from Premier Admiral Okada."

Pressure Is Increasing.

"Lately," he added, "the pressure by navy and army officers, including the Minister of the Navy, has been increasing on the Premier and there is a possibility that its outcome may be unfortunate."

Asserting that Japan "must not have an aggressive policy," and that "we must live in this world together and a belligrent member only adds to the burden of all," Viscount Saito added: "I say deliberately the London conference must succeed for the peace of the world."

"There is a regrettable movement taking place in Japan today and I hope that its influence can be minimized before harm is accomplished," he continued. "One of our two political parties has been beating the bushes to attempt to force Premier Okada to call a special session of the diet to abrogate the Washington treaty.

"Great pressure has been brought to bear on the premier to force cancellation of Japan's allegiance to the terms of the 10-10-6 ratio, or the 5-5-3 ratio, as it is commonly known in the United States.

Who Will Pay the Bill.

"This political party is taking advantage of an international crisis to further its own ends. The Seiyukai is piqued because Admiral Okada did not follow its dictates and at the same time fill his cabinet with its members."

Viscount Saito contended that those urging the biggest navy in the world should first consider "Who will pay the bill?" and he added that "I know that his majesty will not allow the navy to proceed uncontrolled and he will not sanction any new program of increased building and increased taxation unless they have the complete approval of the premier and his cabinet."

"His majesty scrutinizes finances very carefully and demands to know why certain proposals are made and why they are necessary," Viscount Saito added. "His majesty keeps abreast of all international developments and reads the representative newspapers and journals of not only Japan, but of the United States and the Continent of Europe as well. As a final check, his majesty will not tolerate an unbridled program for the future."

Man Injured Seriously In Auto Mishap Here

Mike Tadish, 50, of 454 C street northwest, was taken to Casualty Hospital yesterday suffering from a pelvic fracture after he was struck by an auto driven by Charles Russell Tanner, 27, of Madison Court House, Va.

The accident occurred when Tadish attempted to cross the street at Eighth street and Maryland avenue northeast. His condition is serious.

MacArthur Ridicules Supposed 'Fascist Plot'

Gen. Douglas MacArthur, chief of staff of the United States Army, last night denied all knowledge of a reported Fascist "plot" to set up Maj. Gen. Smedley D. Butler or himself as Dictator of the United States.

"I never heard of it," the General said. "It sounds like the best laugh story of the year.

"Who headed the group that was going to make me dictator?" he asked. He was informed a newspaper story named Gerald P. Maguire.

"Never heard of him," MacArthur said.

Other Army officers joined in ridiculing the supposed "plot."

"No one with any sense would believe that," one said. "It's just a racket for someone to sell shirts—brown shirts, black shirts, blue shirts."

Liberty League To Bare Gifts, Shouse Replies

Answer Hook's Threat to Make Organization Liable to Law.

New York, Nov. 20 (AP).—The American Liberty League will make periodic accounting of its finances to Congress, said Jouett Shouse, president, today in answer to Representative-elect Frank E. Hook (Democrat), Michigan, who declared the American people were entitled to know who is financing it.

Hook said his first bill in Congress would propose the league be placed under the Federal corrupt practices act. Shouse replied the league is already under the act and will file its financial statement whenever it is requested by Congress.

"Educational Purposes."

"I am told," said Hook, "that it (the league) professes to be a vehicle for educational purposes only, but from what I can gather it soon proposes to undertake an invasion of the legislative field, with a view to influencing its own attitude on legislation.

"It is no more educational in its nature than was the Anti-Saloon League, which was amendable to the provisions of the act."

Shouse declared that the league is not partisan nor anti-Administration and that it will hope to work with the Administration "toward objectives beneficial to the country." He added:

Uphold Americanism.

"It will not fail to uphold fundamental Americanism against subversive theories and alien doctrines."

In a speech to the Bond Club, in the Wall street area, Shouse denounced what he called "regimentation" undertaken by the New Deal.

Answering President Roosevelt's hint that the league places property rights above human rights, Shouse quoted a newspaper editorial asserting nothing was "sillier" than to suppose personal and property rights can conflict.

States Are Called To New Alliance

With the single exception of Gov. Talmadge, the State officials seemed to be in general agreement with the President. The Georgia governor held his own counsel and took but meager part in the conference, it was said.

Mr. Roosevelt was reported to have emphasized "the social side of things" at the meeting, expressing the hope the States represented would follow the lead of the Federal Government in enacting unemployment insurance laws. Under legislation now being considered, it was explained, the participation of States is counted on to make unemployment insurance effective.

None of the governors took issue on this point, Gov. Blackwood said, but Gov. Talmadge is not entirely convinced. Cornered by newspapermen after the meeting, he replied, "I haven't thought enough about it to express a definite opinion."

Meet in President's Study.

The conference was held in President Roosevelt's cozy study, before an open fireplace, in his mountainside Little White House. The Governors were accompanied by Marvin H. McIntyre, assistant White House secretary, who entertained them afterward at dinner at the Warm Springs Foundation.

In his general opposition to the New Deal, Gov. Talmadge represents conservative elements of the President's "other State," which, according to a consensus of the press, is not as keen for the Rooseveltian ideas as two years ago. In a statement preceding the conference, Gov. Talmadge called on the President to drive about the countryside and obtain first-hand reactions to such New Deal devices as the NRA and the AAA.

On the other side of the fence, however, is Gov. Sholtz, Florida's chunky, good-natured chief executive. He flew here today from Tampa and will remain over to see Mr. Roosevelt again tomorrow. According to Gov. Sholtz:

"I told the President that everything in Florida is on the up and up. The improved economic outlook in my State is due primarily to Administration efforts. I informed him that the administration of relief funds was sufficient, without graft or favoritism."

Program for Today.

Mr. Roosevelt tomorrow also will see Gov.-elect Graves, State Senator Nelson Cheney, of New York, and more than 100 members of the National Auditors Association, which is meeting at Atlanta. Senator Cheney, a Republican, is an old friend of the President, who is here for a several days' visit.

Rainy weather today failed to keep Mr. Roosevelt from his customary swim and exercises in the Warm Springs pool. Most of the day, however, was spent dictating letters and discussing affairs of the foundation, which he organized for victims of infantile paralysis while a convalescent himself.

Improvement Taxes Exempted by Council

Winchester, Nov. 20 (Spl.).—To show it is whole-heartedly behind the campaign for better housing, the city council has adopted an ordinance under which property owners will be exempt from taxes on improvements costing not more than $2,000 made between now and March 31, 1935.

The council also sponsored the campaign to stimulate the building industry here by approving repair of the historic stone building George Washington used as his office. The matter, committee members believe, may be submitted as an emergency relief project employing local relief workers and local materials.

FERA Plan to House Needy Is Halted by McCarl's Edit

Washington Central Labor Union and secretary of the Washington Building Trades Council. Mr. Locher and Frank J. Coleman, another labor leader, called on Commissioner Allen as soon as the decision became known.

Calls Action a Calamity.

"We happen to know the program of Commissioner Allen for small housing and we felt that inasmuch as he had a program worked out and the money available to go ahead with it the action of Mr. McCarl is a calamity," Mr. Locher said.

"It upsets a program which would have been of very great aid to the buildings trade in the National Capital. We intend to appeal to both the House and Senate District committees for sufficient funds to carry out the Commissioner's program."

"We intend to take this matter up immediatedly with President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor," Mr. Coleman said. Mr. Coleman is secretary of the District Central Labor Union and of the Maryland-District Federation of Labor.

"We are going to ask Mr. Green that the low-cost housing program of Commissioner Allen be made a part of the program of the American Federation of Labor. We believe it is a practical and sane solution of the unemployment problem in Washington. We heartily commend Commissioner Allen in his efforts to relieve unemployment by this method. We have just called on the Commissioner and told him how we feel and what we intend to do."

No comment on the decision was made at FERA headquarters. Commissioner Allen said he saw nothing effective which could be done at the moment. Keenly disappointed over the disruption of the plans he had so nearly brought to fruition after months of work, the Commissioner said he would seek every means to carry the project through despite the McCarl ruling.

"The question," he said, "could just as easily have been resolved, under the law, and proved on the other side."

What might be the next step was considered at a conference between the commissioner and E. Barrett Prettyman, corporation counsel. The McCarl ruling was given Mr. Prettyman for study and immediate report. It may be that the question will be presented again to Mr. McCarl in the light of District statutes which might give the basis for a different decision.

"I do not know whether that will do any good," the commissioner said. "If it doesn't, I am certainly going to Congress to seek specific authority to carry out this plan."

Mr. Prettyman pointed out that the Comptroller General has referred to an act limiting the authority of District officials to purchase land. This act was passed in March, 1877. That was before the present District government was created, he pointed out. These and other technicalities are to be studied in an effort to persuade the comptroller to change his ruling.

FERA Allocated $393,000.

What is to become of the $393,000 advanced for the housing project by FERA is not known. It was allotted for that specific purpose and, Commissioner Allen said, may not be used for other things. A conference is to be sought with Mr. Hopkins and other FERA officials. The money is not available for either the District Alley Dwelling Authority or the housing plans under PWA, it was said.

The houses which were to have been built, would cost $2,695.10 each. It was proposed to rent them for $16.48 each per month. The projects would be self-liquidating in 50 years.

The three projects for which allotments had been made were to be followed by others. Into the new houses, with all modern conveniences, were to be moved relief families for whom the District is now paying all or part of their rent in privately owned dwellings, many of which lack desirable accommodations and facilities. Occupants of the houses would be required to pay rent whenever the bread earners found jobs. In those cases where the wage earners had no work the rental would be charged against relief expenditures now made for rent paid to private owners. In many cases the $16.48 rent charged for the proposed houses would be less than rental burden families now impose on relief funds.

Occupancy of the houses, Commissioner Allen said, would not be limited to families so destitute as to require public relief. District relief organizations now pay out $181,800 a month for rent for relief clients. In many instances, it was pointed out, private owners are confronted with the necessity of ejecting destitute families from their properties or accepting only half or less than half of the normal rental values of their property.

Emergency, Says Allen.

"I do not want to speak out of turn," Commissioner Allen said. "It seems to me that when 20,000 families were on the District public relief rolls and nobody could tell me or them where they could find jobs to buy food and pay rents—well, it seems to me that constituted an emergency.

"My first reading of the Comptroller General's decision leads me to the belief that he disapproved the plan because it had some permanent value. In other words, we could go on feeding and paying rent for these relief clients month after-month indefinitely and that would be an emergency. But any proposal to help meet permanently a need which private capital is not supplying—that is not an emergency. I guess I am all wrong."

Obviously deeply stirred by the McCarl decision, Commissioner Allen cited some figures to show the improper housing of hundreds of relief families. Some of his statistics showed that relief families lived in 101 rooms without windows; that 980 houses had no kitchen sink; that 941 houses had no running water; that in 515 houses three or more families used the same sink; in 458 houses there were no sewer connections; that in 1,128 houses windows were broken; that in 3,939 houses the toilet facilities were inadequate.

"I don't think I'm a Socialist nor a red nor a bolshevik nor a communist," the Commissioner said. "But if there isn't something wrong with that picture I'm all wrong again."

McCarl's Explanation.

In his decision denying the right of the FERA to use funds for low-cost housing projects McCarl pointed out that:

As no specific provision is contained in the act and no intimation of such purpose, and in view of its limited duration and emergent character, it would seem quite contrary to its purpose to hold that there was contemplated the acquisition of real estate and the construction of homes.

"This would involve an undertaking of a more or less permanent nature, contrary to the spirit and letter of the relief act, particularly in view of the provision in a subsequent act—the national industrial recovery act—in which provision was made for the undertaking of low-cost housing."

There is, McCarl said, "no authority in the Commissioners to use the funds allotted to them for relief for the acquisition of land and/or low-cost housing construction," and consequently "there could not be delegated by them to a corporation or another agency powers which they do not possess."

The Comptroller General referred to the District Rehabilitation Corporation, through which it was proposed to operate the low-cost housing projects. He denied that the corporation might be recognized by authorities as a "public agency," saying, "it may be pointed out that the corporation was not organized pursuant to any Federal law, is a creation of the State of Delaware, is subject to the laws of that State, and may not be considered 'a public agency.'"

Child Victim of Burns To Be Buried Tomorrow

(Associated Press.)

Republican lost a lot of voters in this year's elections, but yesterday they picked up a new and active worker, and a former princess at that.

Now Madame Cantacuzene-Grant, American Citizen, the erstwhile Princess Cantacuzene made her debut as a Republican political speaker by talking for the Constitution and against Communism.

"The Contsitution is being disobeyed and demolished," she said, "our institutions one by one are being voted bad and changed.

"My appeal to you is to fight in your party and in your country for the Constitution."

Granddaughter of Gen. Grant, the princess, who recently was repatriated and divorced from a prince of Old Russia, sat at a table where White House families of the past were honored by the League of Republican Women Assembled in its annual luncheon.

Among those at the table were Mrs. William Howard Taft, widow of the former President; Mrs. Russell Harrison, daughter-in-law of President Benjamin Harrison, and Mrs. Harrison Williams, granddaughter of President Harrison.

Alice Roosevelt Longworth, daughter of Theodore Roosevelt, and Mrs. Charles Isham, granddaughter of Abraham Lincoln, were unable to attend.

"The Republican elephant is not dead—it isn't even sleeping," said Mrs. William Fitch Kelley, president of the league, in introducing Madame Cantacuzene-Grant.

The princess went over the history of communism in Russia, complimented Woodrow Wilson and a Democratic Secretary of State, Bainbridge Colby, for refusing to recognize Russia, and criticized the present Administration, particularly William Bullitt, American Ambassador to Russia, for final recognition of the Soviet.

She said the only person present when Maxim Litvinoff, Soviet Commissar of Foreign Affairs, and President Roosevelt were having their conversations was Bullitt, who had been "propagandizing for the Soviet ever since Wilson refused to recognize it in 1918."

She said Litvinoff, "able, brilliant, full of politeness," also was "full of promises that he could not keep," and that he had "mobilized the cupidity of those who thought Russia would be a great market for American goods, the visionary and mysterical groups who thought the Soviet represented a new art ideal, and the curious indifference of a great people to the morals that the Soviet represented."

"We have at the present time 11 Congressmen who were elected as Communists," said the princess. She did not name them.

Firemen to Urge Fund Limit Rise

Silver Spring Group to Ask for 'Sliding Budget.'

Elimination of the $4,300 limitation on the amount to be raised by taxes in the Silver Spring area for its volunteer fire department will be asked by that group in a bill now being drafted by a committee headed by Leo Bender. The bill will be presented to the Maryland Legislature when it convenes in January.

Organizations in the area affected by the tax will be asked at their December meetings to indorse the measure. According to Bender the bill will provide for a yearly budget which can be varied to meet needs of the department, but which will not overlap the present maximum rate of 6 cents. It is estimated the rate would bring in about $6,000.

Bender is assisted in his plans for the bill by Clay V. Davis, George Hamilton, Robert Langley and William V. Jouvenal.

Two Youths Hurt When Gun Fires

Two youths were wounded last night when a gun held in the hand of one was accidentlly discharged while he was cleaning it.

Leroy Payne, 14, of Capitol Heights, Md., is in Providence Hospital. His condition is serious. He was watching the cleaning operation by Anthony Barry, 17, also of Capitol Heights. They were in the cellar of Barry's home.

The gun fired and struck Barry in the right forefinger and then passed through Payne's arm and into his chest.

Missive Hints Tragic Secret Of "Empress"

it in writing. The only inkling of what the matter might be about was the information that it involved the "empress."

A Merciless Torture.

There was no way of determining whether Dr. Ritter's secret had any bearing on the Marchena Island tragedy, or even whether he knew of their deaths. There is no communication between Marchena and Charles.

Weeks or months ago a merciless torture of slow starvation and raging thirsts sapped the life of the two humans on the islet of Marchena. They were castaways there. They had been at Charles Island, a packet of letters for delivery to the civilized world disclosed.

The only tangible clew of identity was the description by the captain of a tuna clipper who found the bodies. The head of the larger body, that of a man, is slightly bald. The smaller body may be that of a woman, but the skipper who made the discovery and then steamed away, could not tell because of the ravages of the elements.

Arthur Wittmer, a friend of Ritter, and Frau Koerwien, also lived on Charles Island with his wife and two children. He is the only person of the nine who had been on Charles Island who answers the description of the first victim.

An Armed Empress.

Sansational tales have reached the mainland about the slender "empress," whose blonde hair became black with the passing of months away from civilization.

She carried a pearl-handled pistol dangling from a silken cord at her waist.

"She had a passion to shoot animals and nurse them sound again," Dr. Ritter wrote.

Last November Pablo Rolando, of Esmeraldas, Ecuador, and his bride, Blanca Rosa Fernandez, told Guayaquil, Ecuador authorities a tale of having been shipwrecked on Charles Island, and then cast adrift in a small boat on orders of the "empress." A fish craft picked them up miles at sea.

Shortly after this came word of a young Dane named Arends, who had joined the retinue of the "empress." After a few months he expressed a desire to return to the mainland. He was shot in the abdomen. The empress gave him medical care.

Baroness Abdicates.

Other tales told by sailors who visited Charles Island led the Ecuador government to ask Capt. Hancock to take some officials from Chatham Island, in the archipelago, on his annual winter scientific expedition to the Galapagos.

In January, this year, they reached Charles Island. The empress "abdicated." She convinced the officials she was just a lonely woman. Dr. Ritter agreed that conditions had improved, and the officials decided it would be best not to disturb the baroness. But Ritter wrote he had found again the baroness had an ungovernable temper.

What tragic events followed, Dr. Ritter said he dared not express opinions about, in writing June 16 this year and saying that the baroness and her men had left the island.

Now comes the strange denouement of finding the mystery bodies on Marchena Island.

Capt. Hancock believes that Dr. Ritter can tell the answer to the mystery. He will talk to Dr. Ritter next month.

New Belgian Premier To Resign in February

Brussels, Nov. 20 (AP).—Premier George Theunis, who formed a new coalition cabinet after much difficulty yesterday, intends to resign early in February, it was learned tonight.

He regards his as an interim government, to hold office while special powers, granted last July to regulate and tax industry in a fight against the depression, remain in effect. These expire in February.

Toledo Relief Food Under Investigation

Toledo, Ohio, Nov. 20 (AP).—Canned meat was ordered kept from the 23,000 Toledo families on relief today pending the result of a chemical analysis to determine whether the food caused illness among school children.

Complaints from teachers that children were unable to attend classes caused Lieut. James Thompson, FERA administrator in the city and county, to investigate. Schools reported the illness took the form of stomach disorders.

Mayor Acuff Cuffs Prisoners' Fines— Only $1.50 in Red

Mayor Harmon O. Acuff's cuff is only $1.50 in the red.

Mayor Acuff, who heads the town of Seat Pleasant, Md., where he is also judge of the court, is a believer in the honesty of his fellow-man. He is also a man who puts his theories into practice.

He decided some time ago that with unemployment as high as it is, many violators of the law could not afford to pay their fines in lump sums, and would lose job prospects if they had to go to jail.

Defendants unable to pay in Mayor-Judge Acuff's court are therefore allowed to pay on the installment plan, and the results have justified his faith thus far. Despite the fact that most of the violators live in Washington, beyond his jurisdiction, they have all paid in full, except for one man's arrears of $1.50.

"He'll be around," said Mr. Acuff.

Commission to Aid Ousted Hill Folk

Subsistence Homes Is Plan for Shenandoah Families.

Richmond, Va., Nov. 20 (AP).—The State commission of county government today heard W. A. Smith, State emergency relief administrator, outline details of the plan for rehabilitation on subsistence homesteads of 565 families moved out of the Shenandoah Park area.

Smith said the Emergency Relief Administration and the Subsistence Homestead Administration are cooperating. It is estimated 340 of the families will require assistance in making adjustments to their new environments and that of these about 140 have no credit and will require special aid. For this purpose $150,000 of direct relief money has been made available.

There was a full attendance of the commission, which is composed of Dr. George W. Apicer, chairman, of the University of Virginia; C. C. Reed, of Chesterfield; Ashton Dovell, of Williamsburg; F. T. Prufer, of Staunton, and W. E. Elmore, of Brunswick.

Pangborn Is Invited To Join Tokyo Hop

Los Angeles, Nov. 20 (AP).—Monty Mason, Los Angeles pilot who proposes a 6,400-mile nonstop flight to Tokyo, has invited Clyde Pangborn, noted transpacific flier, to be his navigator.

"Pangborn is interested, but has not yet accepted," Mason said today. No date has been set for the hop-off for Tokyo.

quota exceeded, Maj. Gen. Coleman said.

At 1 p. m. yesterday unit lines were forgotten in the final drive and the 6,000 workers were allowed to solicit gifts in any quarter.

Drive Won't Be Extended.

The wind-up of the drive will come at the Willard when final reports will be made. There will be no extension, whether the quota has been reached at that time, or not, Mr. Rust has said.

Other reports showed the Special Gifts Unit had added $40,920 to its total and the Metropolitan unit, $20,582.98.

A feature of today's campaign will be a flying squadron of solicitors which will respond to calls made by citizens after a final radio appeal by "Radio Joe" Kaufman at 6:15 p. m.

Mr. Kaufman will ask all those who wish to give to telephone the Chest number, Metropolitan 2284, and furnish their names and addresses. Workers in cars throughout the city will get these messages and hurry for the gifts. More than $6,000 was obtained in this manner last year.

The group solicitation unit reported the following firms as being 100 per cent and over:

Addressograph Sales Agency, Burlington Hotel; C. C. Coat & Towel Service, Call Carl, Carolina Theater, Oliver T. Town Files $168,048 Bill In Secession

Falls Church Demands Sum as Value of Area Surrendered.

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

The three-way fight over the portion of the town of Falls Church, Va., lying in Arlington County, entered a new phase yesterday when John S. Barbour, attorney for the town, filed a bill of particulars for $166,048.30 against Arlington County. The bill was filed in the Arlington County Circuit Court.

The background for yesterday's action is found in the demand of citizens of the Arlington part of Falls Church to be placed in the Arlington area and jurisdiction for tax and other purposes. The citizens asked that the court separate their part of the town from Fairfax County. Arlington County, the town of Falls Church, and its seceding section are the three groups interested.

After the necessary pleadings were filed, and testimony taken, that part of the town was stricken off.

Cost Question Arises.

The question then arose of the exact financial value of the territory under consideration. On this point the expected disagreement materialized when Attorney Barbour filed the bill of demands to be paid in event the town's boundaries are contracted. The bill itemized the following costs:

Value of two wells, lots, pumps now located in that portion of the town lying in the county, $25,000; 29.6 per cent of the outstanding total of water bonds, $34,928; 29.6 per cent of outstanding school bonds, $20,128; 29.6 per cent of library bonds, $1,628; estimated cost of the necessary rights of way and dissevering the existing water mains at the Arlington-Fairfax County line, and providing the necessary circulation of water within the contracted town system, $10,000; estimated value of permanent street improvements in the territory proposed to be ceded, $34,284.30; indemnity for the increased taxation in the contracted town as the result of the contraction, $40,080. Total, $166,048.30.

Hearing Set December 17.

By arrangements of counsel a hearing will be held before Judge Walter T. McCarthy on December 17 in the Circuit Court of Arlington County to adjust any property arrangements between the two areas.

Attorney Thomas W. Phillips represents the petitioners seeking to have the area taken into Arlington County, Commonwealth's Attorney Lawrence W. Douglas represents the county, and Mr. Barbour the defendants in the suit.

Unofficial estimates said that the bill of particulars for $166,048.30 was approximately 40 per cent too high for the property considered.

Miss Lavinia Engle, member of the Maryland House of Delegates, is announced as the guest speaker at the meeting of the Organized Women Voters of Arlington County today. The meeting, to be held in the Ashton Heights Woman's Clubhouse, will be preceded at 12:30 p. m. by a luncheon to be given by ladies of Ashton Heights.

Candidates for officers to be presented by the nominating committee are:

For president, Mrs. Jessie Roberts, incumbent, and Mrs. Eleanor Gary; vice president, Mrs. Pearle W. Sharpe and Mrs. Edith Simpson; recording secretary, Mrs. Carmen Morris and Mrs. Edith Rose; corresponding secretary, Miss Virginia Green and Mrs. Helen Bardwell; treasurer, Mrs. Mary Williams and Mrs. Cora Fields; parliamentarian, Mrs. Florence E. Cannon and Mrs. Edith Collier; registrar, Mrs. Ruth Lowell and Mrs. Ethel Cook.

Five of the following will be elected to the membership committee: Mrs. Louise Payne, Mrs. Sara E. Carl, Mrs. Anna Green, Mrs. Ruth Marcey, Mrs. Martha Hulbert, Mrs. Mary P. Snyder and Mrs. Tiller Ahalt.

In an effort to solve confusion like that in the last county election when there were 52 candidates for the county board of five members, the special committee of the Arlington County Civic Federation, of which I. C. Buchanan is chairman, will hold its fourth meeting of the series at the courthouse tomorrow night.

The meeting tomorrow night, Chairman Buchanan said, will be devoted largely to hearing the suggestions of candidates for the board three years ago. All citizens of the county interested in the movement are invited to the meeting.

The committee is unanimously of the opinion that none should be elected except by a majority vote. This was not the case at the election three years ago.

Members of the board of trustees are: Gilbert L. Hall, Helen E. Samuels, Wiley M. Fuller, Walter U. Varney, J. C. McClellan, George A. Rucker, Ashton C. Jones, sr., William C. Hull, Constance Backus, Louise C. Carl, Mrs. Maud Jones, Mrs. Nancy C. Foster, Julius Marcey, William A. Coates, Thomas J. Crack, J. C. Conner, Edward T. Fenwick, Hugh J. McGrath, Carleton K. Lewis, and Mrs. Lillie K. Boss.

Committee chairmen are: Sites, Ashton C. Jones, sr.; ways and means, Hugh J. McGrath, and by-laws and constitution, Walter U. Varney.

The Merrifield Improvement Association last night voted to write Commonwealth's attorney of Fairfax County, Wilson M. Farr, and to Sheriff E. P. Kirby asking for greater police protection at night, to stop the increasing robberies of live stock, poultry, farm and household equipment. Edward Tibbott cited instances in his neighborhood and suggested that some member of this community be appointed as a deputy. Copies of the letters were directed to be sent to the Board of Supervisors.

President C. R. Moran appointed standing committees: Entertainment—Mrs. Wilbur Tubaugh, chairman; Mrs. B. F. Salisbury, Mrs. C. R. Moran, Mrs. Welles Gray, Mrs. E. D. Vosbury, Mrs. Stewart Preece, Miss Corita Seoane, and Mrs. Edward Tibbott; membership—Mrs. Dana Miller, chairman; Mrs. H. H. Rogers, Mrs. Charles Kaiser, Mrs. D. N. Carleton, Mrs. Wirt Ferguson, and purchasing, Charles Kaiser, chairman; Mrs. B. F. Salisbury and Miss Corita Seoane.

Mrs. Welles Gray was elected corresponding secretary in place of Mrs. E. D. Vosbury, who resigned.

Sharon Chapter, Eastern Star, of McLean, will give a 25-cent luncheon Thursday in Masonic Hall at 12:30 for the benefit of the chapter. Mrs. Katie Storm, Mrs. Hedwig Hushke, Mrs. Ella Smith, Mrs. Narcissa Taylor and Mrs. Geneva Graves will have charge of the lunch.

Falls Church Lodge, No. 11, I. O. O. F., will be host Thursday night to the Northern Virginia Odd Fellows Association. Refreshments will be served by Laurel Rebekah Lodge of Falls Church. Miss Margaret Kimball, noble grand, has named Mrs. John Kerns as chairman.

The annual bazaar given by the Aid of Columbia Baptist Church in Falls Church will be held Friday in the church from 12 to 5 p. m. and will be directed by Mrs. George McNab, with Mrs. W. T. Westcott in charge of the food sales and a luncheon from 12 to 1:30 under the direction of Mrs. Macon Ware.

Formation of a district executive council for Young Democratic Clubs of the Eighth Congressional District was advocated last night by the Falls Church Young Democrats, who adopted three recommendations proposed by the club's advisory committee.

Robert N. Anderson, a former president of the Arlington County Democratic Club, Arlington County Civic Federation and Better Government League, now special assistant to Attorney General Cummings, was given a vote of congratulations on his successful conduct of the Government's case upholding the constitutionality of the AAA, the club holding the "decision of the Massachusetts court is vital to the recovery program, since the fundamental principle of the excise tax involved is the basis for part of the agricultural recovery program."

The proposed executive council will consist of one representative from each Young Democratic club in the District, to be appointed by the chairman or elected by the members, with the District chairman as presiding officer. Formation of such a council would tend to permit closer discussion of mutual problems, the advisory committee held.

Other recommendations adopted were for the formulation of an educational program for club meetings, including debates, and stressing the principal historic events in the Democratic Party, and the appointment of a program committee to include the president and one member of the entertainment and advisory committees.

The membership committee, Stewart Pierce, chairman, announced a membership drive to be held during the Christmas holiday season with prizes to the winners. Parents of all active members are being solicited to join as honorary members.

Thanks of the club were voted to 16 Democrats whose financial contributions have made possible the Northern Virginia Democrat, first newspaper to be published by a Young Democratic club in Virginia: Representative Howard W. Smith, Senator John W. Rust, Delegate William D. Medley, Harry K. Green, William C. Gloth, R. N. Anderson, H. A. Fellows, Walter U. Varney, Leo C. Lloyd, Thomas A. Hodgson, Charles R. Fenwick, George Collins, Miss W. May Darby, Thomas J. Crack, Maurice L. May and R. C. L. Moncure.

Senator Rust congratulated the club on its achievements and stressed Virginia's contribution to the Federal Government, stating it ranked fourth in payment of taxes, last year paying in over $130,000,000 to the national Treasury.

$250,000 Cut Demanded in County Budget

Better Government League Wants Less Expense in Anne Arundel.

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 20 (Spl.).—The Better Government League, which has been waging a campaign for curtailment of governmental expenses in Anne Arundel County, today requested the county commissioners to slice approximately $250,000 from the budget for the fiscal year, 1935. The total amount for the current year is $650,000.

The request was made by E. Churchill Murray, president, acting on resolutions adopted by the league executive committee. He told the officials the county can not stand the existing financial burden, and suggested among preliminary steps to further the movement, abandonment of the policy of taking over so many roads for maintenance, and establishment of zoning areas by which urban sections should bear the cost of lighting facilities, rather than have this burden placed on the county as a whole.

Members of the board reminded Mr. Murray the county's taxable basis has suffered by reason of nontaxable land in Annapolis, tax exemption of the Washington, Baltimore and Annapolis Electric Railroad, granted by the legislature, and a general falling off due to the depression. A sharp reduction might be accomplished, officials said, by firing a number of employes, and further reducing salaries, but that this would prove disastrous.

The league, a non-partisan organization, took an active part in the recent election, with the result that four Republicans, endorsed by it were elected to key offices that for years had been held by Democrats.

Cornell Club to Hear Chinese Minister to U.S.

Sao-Ke Alfred Sze, Chinese minister, will be the principal speaker at a luncheon meeting of the Cornell Club of Washington tomorrow. Mr. Sze was graduated from Cornell with the class of 1901.

The club also will hear an address by Manton M. Wyvell, and arrangements will be made for Washington alumni to attend the Cornell-University of Pennsylvania football game in Philadelphia Thanksgiving Day. Edward Holmes will be in charge of the meeting.

Federation Juniors To Present Program

Beginning its tenth season, the junior department of the D. C. Federation of Music Clubs will present a program of classical and romantic music next Saturday night at 8 o'clock in the Washington College of Music, 1810 Connecticut avenue. Mrs. Dorothy Guion is chairman of the department.

The young musicians participating in the recital are Dorothy May Borden, Howard Blatchely, Claire Eliason, Virginia Langston, Marie Reitz, Karlian Meyer, Margaret Wallace and Mary Wilkins.

V.F.W. Officers Are Appointed In Alexandria

Post Invited to Use Church for Armistice Day Celebration.

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU.
907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 523.

Commander Millard H. Finnell, of Russell Mitchell Post, No. 609, Veterans of Foreign Wars, of Alexandria, has announced these appointments of officers and committees for the year:

Samuel B. DeVaughan, adjutant; Bernard Cook, historian; C. Owen Creegan, chairman of membership committee; Fred McLein, ways and means; Howard L. Arnold, patriotic; Herbert Cady, degree team; B. M. Quirk, drill team; Frank Bettis and A. W. Yandis, color bearers.

B. M. Quirk has been elected officer of the day, succeeding W. B. Nolan, resigned to become post bugler.

Invited to Use Church.

Post Chaplain and Past Commander Norman Roberts has invited the post to hold future Armistice Day celebrations in the Methodist Protestant Church, of which he is pastor.

Comrade Lancaster has been received into the post as an active member, and G. Raymond King as an honorary member.

City Treasurer Roger C. Sullivan has mailed out 12,000 State tax bills, covering capitation taxes and taxes on bonds, notes and other evidence of debt, as well as State income taxes. These bills must be paid, to avoid the addition of a penalty, on or before December 5, after which date a penalty of 5 per cent will be added, and 6 per cent interest from June 16, 1935, to date of payment.

Charles K. Collum has been elected president of the St. Mary's veteran unit of the Catholic Students Mission Crusade, of Alexandria; Miss Marie Quinn has been chosen vice leader; Miss Helen Barnhardt, secretary; Edward Lannon, treasurer, and Robert Lynch, minstrel. The Very Rev. T. A. Rankin, director of the St. Mary's unit, complimented the past officers on their work during the year. The past officers are Leon Chisholm, leader; Frances Kelly, vice leader; Virginia Ewald, treasurer, and C. K. Collum, minstrel.

Holy Name Society to Meet.

The northern Virginia section of the Holy Name Society will hold its quarterly meeting in St. Mary's Lyceum, Alexandria, beginning at 2:30 p. m., November 25. The Alexandria branch is preparing a program for the occasion, and expects a large delegation from each branch in this section. The program will include addresses by two prominent speakers, the election of officers, and the reception of approximately 100 new members into the society.

The board of lady managers of the Alexandria Hospital has issued its annual appeal for donations on Thanksgiving Day, of both clothing and money. The demands on the hospital, the board states, are increasing daily, and many of the patients are unable to pay for treatment.

Ministers Hear Dr. Steelman

Large Group Is Present at Body's Session in Frederick.

Frederick, Md., Nov. 20 (Spl.).—The Rev. Dr. Frank Steelman, Hagerstown, Frederick district superintendent of the Methodist Episcopal Church, was the speaker at a largely attended meeting of the Frederick County Ministerial Association yesterday.

Taking for his theme "Observations of a District Superintendent," Dr. Steelman stressed the importance of harmony in all phases of church activity. "Some ministers depend entirely on their finance committee to handle that phase of the church's affairs, but should not do so. The preacher must be an all-around business man in order to keep things moving," he said.

The Rev. Ralph E. Hartman, president, presided. The annual Christmas meeting will be held in the Reformed Church, the Rev. Dr. Henri L. G. Kieffer, pastor. The Rev. C. E. Dryden, Buckeystown, will be the speaker.

More than 100 ministers and their wives accepted invitations to a luncheon at the Francis Scott Key Hotel after the meeting.

Women to Stage Charity Frolic

Relief Fund Ball Set for U. of Va. Gymnasium.

Charlottesville, Va., Nov. 20 (Spl.).—The second annual charity frolic here Friday will include many new scenes and skits. The ball is to be held in Memorial Gymnasium, at the university.

One of the most highly successful features of last year's entertainment, the dance of the Pilgrim Children, will be repeated, along with the polka, to be danced by 32 young women of Charlottesville with their escorts.

A Civil War feature, called the Gold Rush, is included, along with a dance to the Merry Widow Waltz and a parody of the Florodora Sextette.

The Municipal Band of Charlottesville will play at the frolic, the proceeds of which are to be used by the women's committee on relief for child welfare work.

Big Bills Jingle Prosperity Tune In Barber's Till

Cumberland, Md., Nov. 20 (Spl.).—Indicative of the upward trend, the proprietor of one of the most largely patronized barber shops in the city said yesterday that in the last week he was paid with more bills of large denomination than in any similar period in the last five years. There were numerous fives, tens and twenties, he said.

Motorist Figures In Two Accidents Within 18 Hours

Waynesboro, Pa., Nov. 20 (Spl.).—Wilbur Rook, North Potomac street, finds operating a motor vehicle holds its perils.

He figured in two crashes within 18 hours here over the week-end.

The first accident occurred between an ice truck he was driving and a truck driven by Walter Bromley, Edgemont, Md., at a street intersection.

Food Cost Advance Appears Halted

Prices at Standstill Here Between Oct. 9, Nov. 6.

The upward trend of Washington food costs appeared halted yesterday as the Bureau of Labor Statistics of the Labor Department released figures showing prices at a standstill here between October 9 and November 6.

Compared with October 23 prices, food costs November 6 were seventenths of one per cent higher, but the change already had been reflected in tabulations for October 9.

November 6 prices were 8.9 per cent higher than a year ago, 17.6 per cent above those of 1932, and 24.6 per cent lower than prices just following the 1929 crash.

With the exception of Charleston, all cities along the South Atlantic seaboard reported lower food prices.

Closing The Drive.

As the Community Chest campaign draws to a close, the customary lag in returns after the first spurt of contributions is giving officials of the Chest no little concern. The drive will end tonight, and it has been announced that there will be no supplementary campaign. Citizens who realize the necessity of seeing that the numerous charitable activities supported by the Chest continue without serious restrictions should return their pledge cards immediately.

It is a difficult task to raise $1,675,000, even when that sum is earmarked for institutions devoted to character building, care of orphans, underprivileged children and other dependent groups. Because of the brief period that is allotted to the drive, many potential contributors may remain unsolicited. On the other hand, there is danger that overzealous department heads may place upon employes under their supervision burdens which they can ill afford to bear. In such cases the Community Chest may lose in popular good will even more than it gains from such contributions.

Without question the Chest ought to be filled. The interests of the community are almost as much at stake, however, in the manner of its filling as in the actual amount collected. It is true that the pressure of community interest must often be applied to bring a project of this kind to fruition. But discretion as to where that pressure is applied is essential to make the Chest serve its purpose most effectively.

In these last hours of the drive it is especially important that the campaign be conducted so as to build good will as well as to bring the total pledged up to the full Chest quota.

Excellent Choice.

There can be nothing but satisfaction over the President's appointment of Capt. George Fried as supervising steamboat inspector at New York. The job called for the man; the man will remake the job.

In smoke and flame, the Morro Castle disaster demonstrated—if further demonstration were required—the absolute necessity for some one of unswerving courage and forthright conscience to head inspection at that teeming port. Capt. Fried did not seek the post. President Roosevelt drafted him, and could have drafted none better.

Rescuing 5 crashed fliers last month, 600 miles at sea—rescuing the 25 men from the Antinoe in 1926—rescuing the 32 men of the Florida in 1929—Capt. Fried has become, and has deserved to become, an heroic tradition. He represents the type of American seamanship which the country would like to see universal in its merchant marine.

Efficiency is more a matter of men than of regulations. And there will be more confidence in the reorganization of the Steamboat Inspection Service now that the vital New York position has been so appropriately filled.

Local Telephone Rates.

The disposition of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. to compromise with the Public Utilities Commission in the controversy over rates is a pleasant reversal of its previous policy. Coming just subsequent to the inauguration of a Federal inquiry into the affairs of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co., with which the local company is affiliated, the announcement of this offer to reduce rates may be regarded as a generous gesture to create good will. However that may be, it is welcome as a move in the direction of lower rates for telephone users in Washington.

Details of the company's proposal are not yet available. It is known, however, that the plan under consideration by the P. U. C. would involve distribution among telephone users of the $1,000,000 fund representing "excess" rates charged during the last two years, and a scaling down of present charges. Of course, the advisability of accepting the offer is contingent upon factors as yet unknown to the public, but the changed attitude of the telephone company should facilitate adjustment of details.

Instead of accepting the rate structure ordered by the P. U. C. in October, 1932, the company carried its fight to the courts. The contest might well have been dropped when the District Supreme Court sustained the rate reduction order. That the company has now receded from its position suggests that its case was weak and that the Public Utilities Commission has been keenly alert to the public interest. In spite of the crippling slash in the commission's appropriation for the current year, it is carrying on its essential work with vigor and determination.

It may be taken for granted that the new rate structure proposed by the telephone company will be thoroughly scrutinized. Counter proposals may then be offered by the P. U. C. It is possible, of course, that no basis for a compromise will be found. But the mere fact that the company and the commission are trying to work out the problem on a practical basis is an encouraging sequence to the uncompromising fight which has been in progress for the last two years.

Yesterday At Geneva.

It has long been apparent that the Disarmament Conference is getting nowhere in its primary effort to achieve limitation of military preparedness on the part of the great powers. Yesterday, however, the semblance of life was injected into the moribund body when Ambassador Hugh Wilson, for the United States, urged at Geneva that the conference adopt a separate convention on the subject of the private traffic in arms. This issue of the private trade, which was at first a minor item on the conference program, now promises to become its major business. The proposal for which our State Department stands sponsor may yet save the gathering from the indignity of complete collapse.

The American plan for international limitation of the private trade has been stimulated by the revelations made before the Nye committee. It is, as Mr. Lammot du Pont has this week pointed out, based on the rational assumption that an international traffic can be effectively controlled only by international action. Moreover, discussion of the subject at Geneva will help to show just which countries are not interested in eliminating the evils which the investigating committee of our Senate has disclosed. So far only Italy is reported as being cold toward Mr. Wilson's suggestion.

Briefly, this calls for the adoption of three principles by each party to the proposed international convention. All private manufacturers of ordnance would be licensed. All data on orders, manufacture and sale by both private and governmental plants would be turned over to a central committee in Geneva, empowered to make the information public. And a permanent commission would be appointed to hear complaints of violation and otherwise administer the project.

The provision for a permanent commission, which would go far to prevent the proposed convention from being merely a pious gesture, was first suggested for the projected general treaty on reduction of armaments. In this, and in other respects, the long discussions on general disarmament should help to make the present, relatively modest, proposal for international control of the arms traffic more feasible.

Perhaps it would have been better if the League had set itself less ambitious, but more attainable, objectives at the start of its disarmament program. Had this been the case, control of the elementary problem of private traffic might by this time have been achieved. On the other side is the argument that, having failed in its great expectations, the conference is likely to try to hide its breakdown by putting real pressure behind the plan which Hugh Wilson outlined yesterday.

A New Safety Program.

Serious traffic accidents are mounting so rapidly that the police predict a new high record of fatalities this year. Recent safety campaigns apparently have not made our streets less dangerous, although they doubtless serve a useful purpose by arousing the public to the gravity of this needless sacrifice of life. If there has been any doubt that more drastic measures are needed, it should now be thoroughly resolved.

Experience has shown that no panacea can be relied upon to reduce traffic hazards. But there are many ways in which the number of accidents, especially fatal ones, can be minimized. After a careful study of local traffic conditions the District of Columbia Motor Club has outlined nine specific suggestions that might well serve as a basis for a municipal safety program.

Several of these recommendations are aimed at inconsistent enforcement of the law. At present judges in the Traffic Court are not continuously assigned to that duty. The rotation of judges forbids the adoption of uniform procedure and permanent policies. The local branch of the AAA suggests permanent assignments in the Traffic Court.

No argument is needed to support the second recommendation—that "fixing" of tickets for traffic violations be stopped. Obvious, also, is the need for more traffic officers to enforce the law and to investigate serious accidents. Emphasis is placed upon the necessity of rigid enforcement in the case of persistent law violators and more discretion in handling casual, minor violations.

Two proposals requiring legislation are on the list: One is regular compulsory inspection of all motor vehicles registered in the District. The other is a "safety-responsibility" act, designed to eliminate from Washington's streets motorists who cause a fatal accident and evade the financial responsibilities resulting therefrom.

Other proposals may be added to this list by groups of citizens no less interested in the traffic problem than is the AAA. Particularly the need of controlling pedestrians in the congested areas demands consideration. This weak point in our traffic system was again emphasized yesterday by the death of two victimized or careless pedestrians. When all of these suggestions are brought together it should not be difficult for the Commissioners to outline a constructive program that would produce more effective results than the safety campaign has done.

The Fruits Of Bungling.

Judicial review of the blunders which led to the prospective dismissal of 900 civil service employes in the Treasury Department is assured by the action of Chief Justice Wheat of the District Supreme Court. Secretary Morgenthau must show cause why he should not be restrained from enforcing the dismissal orders, which have already been sent to the victims of this absurd procedure. No doubt he will be glad to have the legality of his action tested, since he has promised to do everything legally possible to retain this group of employes.

Conflicting opinions on the "patronage rider" to the Treasury appropriation act have been rendered by the Attorney General and the Comptroller General. There are indications, too, that the Civil Service Commission has been rather confused by this vicious bit of legislation. Certainly members of Congress seem to have been unaware of the destructive implications of Senator McKellar's amendment when they permitted it to become law. The official confusion surrounding the issue makes a judicial review doubly welcome.

The case for invalidation of the dismissal order seems to center in the contention that dismissal of civil service employes who obtained their positions through competitive examinations was not contemplated by Congress. The bill was passed in the heyday of steam-roller tactics. Vindictive patronage seekers thought they were voting to punish a group of political appointees of another color, who had obtained civil service protection by the "cover-in" method. In reality they struck a powerful blow at the merit system. Careless, bungling legislation produced its customary result.

Another question that might well be raised is the fairness of the examination prepared for these unfortunate employes by the Civil Service Commission. Under ordinary circumstances prospective employes are rated on their experience as well as their response to academic questions. In this case, no credit was given for experience. Moreover, some of the questions asked have at least the appearance of being tricky.

Correction of the original blunder, however, may be beyond the jurisdiction of the commission, the Secretary of the Treasury, the Comptroller General and even the courts. Only Congress is responsible for the enactment of this vicious "rider," which twists the merit system into a delusion. Outright repeal of the McKellar amendment will be necessary to remove a demoralizing precedent and to free Congress from deserved reproach.

Every Purl A Prayer.

Femininity has come back with a bang! This is a fact acknowledged by designers, merchants, and women's magazines. But that it should invade the masculine quarters of Columbia University is an utterly unexpected tribute to Miss Alice Paul.

Knitting, it is asserted, has become the favorite indoor sport of freshmen and sophomores on Morningside Heights. One of its most ardent champions declares that it gives the men something to do in their spare time and affords them a chance to express themselves adequately. This is indeed a tragic era, when a 6-foot giant has to weave his complexes into an afghan.

But it may be that knitting will lead to bigger and better football teams. It teaches patience and concentration, two essentials on a muddy field. To ears attuned to "knit one, purl one" signals will seem mere child's play.

And when the game is over, the tumult quieted, and the triumphant team reaping its rewards, those in defeat may find a peaceful consolation in turning to their knitting. The all-Americans of the future may be chosen not as much for toe work as for ability to turn a neat heel.

"Equal Justice Under Law."

(From the Christian Science Monitor.)

The finest of all monuments to Cass Gilbert, who was not alone an architect but a genuine poet in stone and steel, is nearing completion on Capitol Hill in Washington. It is the new home of the Supreme Court of the United States, a marble structure which Gilbert declared his chef-d'oeuvre.

Completely in the classical tradition, the Supreme Court building takes its place, next to the Capitol, as the most impressive structure in the city. Although there are many worthy sculptural pieces and groups in and upon the building, a line of four words across the pediment provides the most striking and effective symbol of the aim and spirit of the Supreme Court. The line reads:

"Equal Justice Under Law."

The joint event next spring of the dedication of the building and of the celebration of the centenary of John Marshall, first Chief Justice, should afford dedicatory speakers—as well as members of the supreme bench itself—ample inspiration.

"Continued large benefactions to the public by the Democratic Party's administration eventually will mean the death of the party," an editor asserts. The paths of gravy lead but to the grave.

Cruelty to Turkeys.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A writer has aptly designated the ordinary lay observance of Thanksgiving as a "farce of gluttony and ferocity."

The hideous cruelties connected with the marketing of turkeys, chickens and other victims, increased at the approach of so-called "holy" days, are a disgrace to the whole community. As Plutarch wrote centuries ago: "Other carnivora you call savage and ferocious—lions and tigers and serpents—while yourselves pollute your hands with blood and come behind them in no species of barbarity. And yet for them murder is the only means of sustenance; whereas to you it is a superfluous luxury." If children and young persons became acquainted with this better type of human literature, many would become ashamed of the doings of their parents.

Even so-called charity organizations ask for turkey. Thanksgiving dinners for children, though uncorrupted children would much rather have the opportunity to love turkeys, chickens and cattle, and swine also as fellow-creatures—"companions beautiful and good"—than to eat them. Abraham Lincoln's best childhood companion was a pig whose slaughter made him burst into tears.

Immortal Bards.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: With all due deference to the "Reformed Versifier"—some people have no time for any pursuit, other than to find faults only because they look for it!

If a man's avocation be the muse of poetry—like terpsichorean art—why should he not make use of the God-given gifts? Were Longfellow's gems of thoughts given birth in a "shady garret?" No, he wrote under shade of his own "spreading chestnut tree." Take a glance at Edna St. Vincent Millay's "Grapes" and Katharine Smith's whimsical verses—and Edwin Markham, who deserves the title of poet laureate after his name!

Why not encourage the future immortal bards of today—they have genius, imagination and inspiration. There may be "little time" now, but generations to come will appreciate their mental worth.

The Credit Basis.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In your recent editorial on "Ship Money" you say: "Congress empowered the President to fix the value of the currency." No doubt some deluded inflationist slipped this provision into the emergency legislation, which was rushed at that time!

Neither the Congress nor the President has the power to fix the value of currency except to redeem it on demand and at full face value. The Constitution states, "Congress has the sole power to coin money and regulate the value thereof." But there was only one kind of money at the time it was written—gold and silver coins. The Government can regulate the value of coins by changing the quantity or fineness of the metal. It has recently exercised that power by reducing the value of the gold dollar.

All currency is a promise to "pay on demand," and so long as such promise is kept, currency passes at par. Currency is no more money, in the constitutional sense, than bonds or certificates. The public has the final say on the value of all such forms of debt, not the Government.

Currency is only one form of credit, and credit of every sort, either private or governmental, depends upon meeting obligations promptly. There is no substitute for such action, and no act of Congress can be so cleverly concocted as to make such action unnecessary. EDWIN MEAD.

The Cutting Puzzle.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I was interested in the article by Carlisle Bargeron regarding "the why" of Mr. Roosevelt's favoring Mr. La Follette and fighting Mr. Cutting. Because there was neither consistency nor reason in the President's position, this article arrested attention and set the public to thinking. It focused the country's eyes upon New Mexico's United States Senate race.

What the people saw, and saw through, developed a watchful and acute interest in a State race which otherwise would have remained a nominal issue. Nor was this all. A valiant fight against the misuse of power won allies to the side of Mr. Cutting, and sharp criticism for Administration tactics.

The incident recalled a long ago Sabbath school lesson—of "Saul and David." A DEMOCRAT.

Speed Laws.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There seems to exist at the present time in Washington a presumption that such a thing as a speed law must necessarily be flexible. In other words, to restrain one from traveling at over 30 miles per hour, the law must forbid driving at the rate of over 22 miles per hour.

We are told the limits will not be raised because then people will break them in a manner corresponding to that with which we now break them. And while no reason is given for us wanting to break them now, it seems that the paternal government of the city would think we would have the same reason for breaking them.

Why could the speed laws not be enforced if they were made higher? Why not, at least, make the average-driving motorist other than a law-breaker? A slight lift would make most of us within the law, whereas we are now practically all breaking it. L. C. H.

The Mooney Case.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There is still need for the crusade to release Tom Mooney, after his 18 long years of imprisonment for a crime he could not possibly have committed. There is still the campaign to induce benighted California to reenter civilization.

So long as California continues to elect officials that in my opinion persist in holding innocent men in durance vile, and publicly approve of lynching, she must stand condemned before the bar of public opinion. The plunderbunders of special privilege are still—and not so very still—in the seats of power. The voice of Tom Mooney, if he were at liberty, would not be music in their ears.

18th Amendment.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am sure that a great many people will regret reading the editorial in The Post of November 15 regarding the enlisting of the services of Mrs. Charles H. Sabin in the cause of the Liberty League. If Mrs. Sabin convinced 10,000 women that repeal would promote and not defeat progress toward the goal of temperance," I fear she was not convincing the highest type of mothers and wives of this country—and, for the sake of our American women, let us hope not.

I have been subscribing to The Post for many years, and it was with a feeling of regret that I have read the above-mentioned editorial.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Amid the acclaim so generously lavished on sociological agencies and individuals endeavoring to better American conditions, it seems that the cartoonists as a body have been overlooked. Their work during this crisis has been a magnificent contribution to clear perceptions and illuminating common sense. ROWLAND B. MAHANY.

A Digest Poll That Went Wrong

In the late election for the first time the famed Literary Digest poll fell down, "an unfortunate outcome," as some commentators say, but maybe it is fortunate that no publication can forecast and perhaps forestall elections. The polls of the Digest were so canny that elections began to appear unnecessary. Why go to the expense? While this exaggerates the case, yet practical politicians have always counted on the powerful effect of a belief among voters that an election would turn out a given way. There are a certain number of voters who desire to be with the majority, who follow the crowd, and many others who are influenced by the hope of a job. This is the reason why political committees always make large advance claims.

According to the last poll of the Digest the New Deal prospects declined 50.97 per cent of the vote. The two major parties would have shared almost equally in the vote. The poll showed New Jersey actually 61.14 per cent against the Administration, New York 57.85 per cent and Pennsylvania 52.53 per cent. The Administration candidates won in all three States, and in New York and New Jersey by bumper majorities. While Kansas was rated about 50-50 by the poll, Gov. Landon received about 55 per cent and Mayor Ketchum about 45 per cent. That is far from accurate forecasting in elections.

It is true that the final Digest poll was materially shortened, the number of ballots sent out being only a fraction of those a year ago or early this year. Possibly Digest polls that run into the issue of millions of ballots may always fortell the result. The latest poll at least demonstrated that limiting the number of ballots to thousands or hundreds of thousands fails to tell the story of what 30 to 40 million voters are thinking.

"Insufficient Postage."

Post Office, Wednesday.

MR. FARLEY and Mr. Mooney, the mail service is getting worse and worse! Here's a lot more of those letters-to-the-editor that never reach him merely because they weren't written.

Dear Sir: I am a stranger in your city—arrived some time last week—started to walk up town from the Union Station three days ago. I got as far as the corner nearest your Washington Post office here on E street, but now can't get any farther. When there's a red light against me, all the autos run up and down so that crossing is dangerous. When there's a green light favoring me, all the autos take a right turn from E up Fourteenth, so that crossing is impossible. I've no money left for drug-store sandwiches, and the policeman is beginning to look at me suspiciously. Won't you please send out the price of a taxi, to cross the street?

A. MOUZE.

Dear Sir: Was our lack of municipal logic ever more evident than in this matter of the so-called Municipal Center? Why "center?" The place is to be established on Pennsylvania avenue, around Third and Sixth streets, is it not? Who will be rash enough to maintain that this site is either the geographical center of Washington, or Washington's center of population?

MERTON STANFORD.
Washington, Nov. 14.

Dear Sir: Surely the statesmen of this great Nation of ours should rise above the little waves of political acrimony. And surely in the Senate of the United States should there be found, if anywhere, the virtue of magninimity.

These thoughts lead to another. This year there will be no Congressional gathering of the sort so long known and loved as the Lame Duck Session. That tradition, alas, has passed away, with machine politics, in our machine age! Yet it was a pleasant custom and humane in that it eased the retirement of the defeated. Cannot something be substituted therefor?

I think it should; I believe it can; I hope it may. I suggest that there be given in the Capitol this December—perhaps in the Statuary Hall—a little dinner to speed the parting guests; a little dinner at which the hosts are the newcomers. Let the newly elected Senators entertain the Senators whom they are succeeding. Let the incoming lambs recline for an evening with the out-going lions. There is nothing so well able to remove a bad taste from the mouth as the breaking of bread.

ULYSSES W. LYTTLEMORE.

Dear Sir: According to an article in your paper, the Secretary of the Treasury has been having painters restore the gold-paint decorations of the Treasury Building. This is poor economy and worse symbolism. The decorations should be gold and silver in the ratio of 16 to 1.

Dear Sir: It will certainly interest the readers of your column to learn that Mr. Upton Sinclair is now engaged upon a new novel, which we shall schedule for publication at the earliest possible date. We are convinced that this new work will prove a greater piece of fiction than any of its author's previous novels or political pamphlets, and that its sales will more than meet the expenses of his recent campaign, upon which campaign, and its author's endeavor to apply the law of recall to his successful rival, the plot is based. The title of the novel will be "Eating Cake and Having It."

Dear Sir: I fail to see why the British Prime Minister—or his country either, for that matter—should be reprobated for announcing an intention to cease disarming and, inferentially, to begin building a larger navy. All Mr. MacDonald said was: England has proved to her own satisfaction that she can't secure world peace or the French brand of "security" by abandoning large armaments.

The course of other countries is simple. Let every other nation prepare for war, too—not more than England does, but just as much. Then the scales will be held evenly, war averted. BARNEY BUGLE.
Baltimore, Nov. 18.

Dear Sir: May I point out a serious inconsistency in the enduring Federal salaries cut? The whole American people wants more money—I don't know of a single American who doesn't. The employes or the Bureau of Engraving are among the poeple. They want to print more money. Yet the Government docks them on the plea that there isn't enough money to justify their regular wages!

HARTFORD L STOUT.

Dear Sir: Nearly all the Washington street cars carry signs warning us not to "Spit on the Car." Does this carry any subtle reference to our Public Service Commission? I'm a tobacco-chewer, but, for my part, I don't want to spit on a car—I want to spit in it. B. L.

Vote in Saar Will Be Test Of Hitlerism

Germany or Status Quo Seen as Alternatives by Dr. Florinsky.

By Elliott Thurston.

THE eyes of the world will turn on January 13 to that "danger spot of Europe," the densely populated Saar territory along the Franco-German frontier. On that day the Saarlanders will vote in the plebescite provided for in those sections of the Treaty of Versailles which made the Saar into one of the smallest of states, governed by a League of Nations commission.

Three choices will confront the 823,000 Saarlanders: Maintenance of the status quo, union with Germany, or union with France. As Dr. Michael T. Florinsky, of Columbia University, says in "The Saar Struggle" (Macmillan, $2), the "issue narrows down to the alternatives, Germany or the status quo." From the time of Louis XIV until 1815 the Saar was under French rule. For the next century it was under Prussian dominion.

In speech, race, tradition, culture, it is uniformly German, according to Dr. Florinsky, who, on visiting and studying the Saar this summer, could find few surviving traces of the French. He thought it significant "that the evidence of French influence must be sought in a graveyard." Of the 150,000 Frenchmen who Clemenceau imagined were in the Saar, when he was angling at Versailles to annex the whole area, Dr. Florinsky could find no trace at all.

Thus, he makes clear, the plebiscite narrows to the choice between union with Germany and what would be similar to but not precisely the status quo—for the Sarrlanders unitedly dislike the league's governing commission which, he writes, "finds itself very much in the position of a foreign governess whose ward is to come of age on January 13." "It is moreover a case of a governess who was appointed not by loving parents but by a highly unpopular guardian."

BUT for the rise of Hitler in Germany there would be no doubt about the outcome of the plebiscite. The vote would have been unitedly for union with the Germany represented by Hindenburg. "Before his death," writes Dr. Florinsky, "to have voted for the status quo would have meant voting against Hindenburg, and to vote against Hindenburg would have seemed to many of the Saarlanders to be nothing short of sacrilege. To vote against iHtler is something very different."

To the outside world, the vote will be largely a referendum on Hitlerism. More than 72 per cent of the Saarlanders are Roman Catholics, who are outraged by Der Fuehrer's persecution of their church. The coal miners, the largest occupational group, and Saar labor in general resent Hitler's attacks on labor organizations. Dr. Florinsky found the Saarlanders torn by "conflicts of conscience." He does not venture to predict the outcome of the plebiscite but notes the strong possibilities of a large, if not majority, vote of the status quo. He makes it plain that votes for the status quo will be votes against Hitlerism.

He is of the opinion that if the league, taking its cue from the late Louis Barthou, offers to replace the governing commission by some better mode giving the Saar more autonomy, the vote for the status quo may prevail. But as he found the situation this past summer, the consensus among Saarlanders was for reunion with Germany despite what many believed was the transitory evil of Hitlerism.

What will arrest the attention of the outside world are the consequences of the verdict. A vote for the status quo would be a tremendous blow to Hitler's prestige at home. He has made recapture of the Saar a cardinal objective. It has become a symbol of his entire cause. A large vote against Hitlerism would at once raise thorny questions for the league.

"WHAT will the league do, for instance," writes Dr. Florinsky, "if the majority of voters favor Germany, but a substantial or even small minority of the communes vote for the status quo? Hand this minority over to Germany? How can France allow it after they have been given all assurances that their rights will be protected and after they have received some encouragement, as it appears from M. Barthou's aide-memoire, to vote against the 'Nazi terror' in this plebiscite . . . ? Will the league maintain them under its own government?"

Dr. Florinsky remarks that the "celebrated dilemma of King Solomon was mere child's play when compared with the one the league may have to face." He perceives that while reunion with Germany "will remove from the map of Europe one of its danger spots" it probably would "increase rather than lessen the intransigeance of Hitler rule."

The problem of Germany's buying back from France the great but lately unprofitable coal mines, which concerned Clemenceau far more than the imaginary 150,000 Saar Frenchmen, may be knotty, but it is hardly formidable. The great problems, for which no wholly satisfactory solution now appears, are human, not economic, problems. That is what makes the Saar plebiscite an important drama of large moment to the fate of Europe.

Pope Donates $10,000 For Typhoon Relief

Manila, P. I., Nov. 20 (AP).—A gift from Pope Pius of 120,000 lira (about $10,000) for relief in districts hit by last week's disastrous typhoon, which killed more than 100 Filipinos, was announced here today by church authorities.

The American Red Cross had previously allotted $50,000, while $6,000 was contributed locally. Governor General Frank Murphy ordered the release of $60,000 in public works funds to start reconstruction projects.

Along the Potomac

With Carlisle Bargeron

Presidential Propaganda

ONE of the many evils imputed to the Power Trust, now about to gets its medicine at the hands of the enthusiastic New Dealers, was that it insinuated its propaganda into the minds of our young at school. This appeared at the time, and still does appear, to be a very sinister thing. And unquestionably it was stupid.

BARGERON

Instead of inculcating the youngsters with a friendliness toward it which would carry them through their mature years, the children and pretty much everybody else are shouting "Off with the Power Trust's head."

One recalls, too, that in all of the indignation the gray-haired Senator Norris has registered from time to time, nothing ever made him froth at the mouth more than this dastardly business on the part of the Trust. His temples would expand almost to the bursting point as he would exclaim:

"Oh, Mr. President, please have mercy on the adult minds."

It wouldn't be surprising if a good statistician could figure the expense involved in that Tupelo show to make a fair comparison with a half year's revenue of the little power plant. Mr. David Lilienthal, who made the glowing report on its operations to Mr. Roosevelt, who in turn let the newspaper boys in on it, mentioned $8,000 as a gross return the plant had come to make. Over what period this was, was not clear.

But there isn't much doubt that the show cost $8,000 when the expense of the train, of the members of the party, of the thousands and thousands of effusive words which the newspaper boys sent out and on which their papers had to pay tolls, is considered. Whether that expense is to be charged to advertising in the yard-stick that the little plant is supposed to be, is not known. It should be.

As a propaganda dose it was the heaviest we have had to take in a long time.

In our attitude since the World War began there was nothing, of course, to discourage Mr. Roosevelt from trying this heavy dose. We have shown an amazing capacity. We have come to prove ourselves quite as hardy in this respect as the Europeans. We have survived such slogans as "Keep Cool With Coolidge," Mr. Hoover's "New Day" and "Two Chickens in Every Pot." The Tupelo blast, however, was the most ambitious undertaking of them all. Back of it is the conviction that we can take it, that there is really nothing that will make us burst.

So far have we advanced in propaganda, in fact, that complaint is seldom made against it as an established art. We complain only in accordance with whose ox is being gored.

It was subversive of everything we hold dear for the power interests to deluge us with propaganda. It is different with the Government. The Government is The People. If they propagandize themselves it is with a view to their good.

• • • •

As a practical, selfish proposition, however, the newspaper boys should give serious study to the question. The power interests paid their propagandists well, paid them salaries of $25,000 and $50,000 a year. The newspaper boys don't get salaries like that. Yet if they are to be propagandists they should get them—or at least consider whether the power interests do not offer better opportunities for their talents.

Diamond Market Adds New Luster, Dealers Declare

New York, Nov. 29 (AP).—There's a new thrill in the diamond market from Mayfair to Maiden lane. The dealers will tell you there's a definite business improvement.

Import figures are pointed to as significant. The September total of $1,434,619 was the largest since October, 1931. Those in the business say the imports really represent sales since the stock of diamonds and diamond jewelry on the shelves of the American merchants is the lowest it has been for years.

New Faces in the Senate — — Mr. Maloney of Connecticut

Ex-Newspaperman Who Started Life in Small New England Town.

The author of this, the eleventh of a series of sketches of the newly elected Senators, is a lifelong friend of Senator-elect Maloney, who prefers to remain anonymous.—Editor.

SENATOR-ELECT FRANCIS T. MALONEY, of Connecticut, is a reporter who made good. Life now begins at 40 in the United States Senator. He is a newspaperman who found the political end of the game so fascinating that he abandoned the city room for paths that led to the Capitol.

The new Senator is not a political accident. He has come up the line in steady fashion. First, he held minor political office in his home city of Meriden, Conn., then was elected mayor in 1929. He was re-elected in 1931 by the greatest majority ever given a candidate in that city. Next, he ran for Congress in the so-called New Haven District. He was elected two years ago and served throughout the Seventy-third Congress.

Maloney's boyhood was similar to that of any normal youngster in a small town. His interest in baseball was heightened by the fact that a few doors away lived Jack Barry, the shortstop of the Philadelphia Athletics. Also on Hanover street lived Ed Walsh who was earning a national reputation as a pitcher for the White Sox. The lot where Maloney played baseball in those days was only a few hundred yards from the residence of Senator Platt, of Connecticut, whose seat the young ball player one day was to fill.

Among the youngsters of the neighborhood was a little black-eyed girl by the name of Rosie Ponzillo. One day she would be known to the world as Rosa Ponselle of the Metropolitan. And, somewhat younger, was Phillips Lord, who later became known to the radio audience as Seth Parker.

There was baseball in the morning, swimming in the afternoon, and in the evening a walk downtown to Connors' Cigar Store to await the posting of the baseball results in the big leagues. Incidentally, the swimming hole was not far from the thickets that centuries ago served as a hiding place for Whalley and Goff, two of the judges who condemned Charles I to death and fled England to escape the wrath of his royal son.

ABOUT 20 years ago Maloney obtained employment as reporter on the Meriden Morning Record. Without previous newspaper experience, the cub was assigned the many duties incidental to the coverage of a newspaper in a city of moderate size. He had no regular beat. But, his aptitude fn the matter of making friends and getting around brought in plenty of copy. Usually he went to work about 2 o'clock in the afternoon and finished only when the paper was about to go to bed around 3 the following morning. The job of sports editor fell to him after a few years. Then he stepped up to city editor.

When the war came his newspaper career was halted. He joined the Navy and served until after the armistice. His three brothers enlisted in the service. Back home, he again obtained a job as a reporter. But, this time his work consisted largely of political writing. On the side, he started a small insurance business which he managed somehow to take care of despite his long hours on the newspaper. His service as reporter lasted until 1921, when his business had grown to a point where it demanded all of his attention.

IN addition to his work on the Record, Maloney served as Meriden correspondent for the Hartford Courant. That task consisted largely in pounding out as much political news concerning affairs in Meriden as the youthful correspondent thought he might be able to persuade the Courant to take on space rates. Incidentally, Maloney met one of his former bosses on the Courant here last winter. He is Ray Tucker, now Washington correspondent for Colliers.

While away from active newspaper work for 13 years, the new Senator never lost his interest in and his love for that occupation. Today he finds his greatest pleasure in an evening with newspaper men, swapping stories of the old days.

Maloney's election ends one of the worst party breaches that existed in any State for many years. For the past ten years there existed a party feud among the Connecticut Democrats. Camps were known respectively as the Old and New Guard. Senator Lonergan and Tom Spellacy led the former, while the latter had as its head the present Attorney General, Homer S. Cummings. This internecine strife was responsible in a great degree for the State going for Hoover in 1932. However, Maloney, with strong friendships in both camps, was the one man on whom the factions could unite. He not only won the nomination and election, but succeeded in eliminating the friction that had prevailed for years.

MALONEY'S chief charm—and that includes his ability in the matter of piling up votes—lies in the old-fashioned qualities of modesty, humility and courtesy. His lack of swank verges at times almost on shyness. And, he possesses a magnificent sense of humor.

While he will not claim it himself, due to his abhorrence to anything that verges on conceit, his home town gives him credit for the establishment of a municipal program for relief among the unemployed that later was taken over as the national model for the PWA.

Maloney is regarded by experienced political observers as the best campaigner Connecticut has seen in several generations. Husky in appearance, with an excellent voice, he delivers an impressive speech. He has no use for the horsehair-sofa era of oratory. Rather, he depends upon terse statement of fact. His newspaper training taught him to be articulate. The major credit for his victory should be attributed to his own ability as a speaker.

While going along with the Administration in the last Congress, Washington will not find him to be a rubber stamp. Maloney has tremendous admiration for the President and this has made it possible for him during the past few years to stay in line. But, his regularity in that regard is based on reason and on study more than on a slavish devoted to party courses.

TO ascertain the position Mr. Maloney will take in the Senate on public questions, one must look to his record and his speeches. As a son of a Union Veteran, and as a veteran of the World War, he has a full understanding of the situation of the former service men. He is on record as opposed to inflation because for years he has been engaged in the insurance business with conservative business associates.

He came out flatly in favor of old age pensions because of his experience as Mayor with the bitter suffering endured by victims of hard times. He is critical of bureaucracy and hopes that the emergency agencies are but temporary in character and will be abolished when the hour of need has passed—together with the elimination of other bureaus established before Roosevelt's time.

Maloney's very career would seem to be the best proof of his belief in an economic structure admitting of private initiative and rugged individualism. With regard to fiscal affairs, he takes great pride in the fact that during the four years he served as Mayor, the taxes were reduced each year, the budget reduced, the city got along within its income, and each year accumulated a surplus. He claims no personal credit for these accomplishments save in the matter of procuring the cooperation of leaders of thought in his community.

FRANCIS T. MALONEY.

No End of Books

By Theodore Hall.

ADMIRABLY calculated to bring almost anyone's interest in literature to a quick boil is Ezra Pound's pamphlet in book form—"ABC of Reading" (Yale University Press, $2). I call it "pamphlet" with profound respect for a one-time tradition which left books to the scholarly dullards and reserved pamphlets for the quick, living and pungent word.

Mr. Pound hopes that his pages may be "impersonal enough to serve as a textbook." And on the next page he lets fly with this motto—"Gloom and solemnity are entirely out of place in even the most rigorous study of an art originally intended to make glad the heart of man." Then he quotes Laurence Sterne: "Gravity, a mysterious carriage of the body to conceal the defects of mind. Which, even without further proof of every page, as quite enough to make us all wish we had had a textbook of literature as bristling, cheery and personal as this.

• • • •

Chiefly, he would lead us to his exhibits—excerpts from Gavin Douglas's sixteenth century translation of Virgin, Arthur Golding's sixteenth century translation of Ovid, Donne, Herrick, Lord Rochester, the first Samuel Butler, Pope, Crabbe, Landor and Browning. With these personal favorites he illustrates the stages of English poetry.

But few would go to his book for an anthology—they want Pound, and Pound they get. Here are a few tidbits.

"From an examination of Walt Whitman made 12 years ago, the present writer carried away the impression that there are 30 well written pages of Whitman; he is now unable to find them."

"The dirtiest book in our language is a quite astute manual telling people how to earn money by writing."

"The man of understanding can no more sit quiet and resigned while his country lets its literature decay, and lets good writing meet with contempt, than a good doctor could sit quiet and contented while some ignorant child was infecting itself with tuberculosis under the impression that it was merely eating jam tarts."

If nothing is quite so stressed in the book as the fact that Mr. Pound is that "man of understanding," this but adds spice to vigorous plea that, whatever we may like to read, we should at least know what is best and most enduring.

• • • •

Edna St. Vincent Millay's "Wine From These Grapes" (Harper, $2) has turned full-corner from her wonder-of-the-world and Dorothy Parker-ish verses, has rounded slowly away from the metaphysical passion of "Fatal Interview" (1931). The years since then, as shown in the poems gathered here, have given her more gravity, far wider sympathy, and something—for all the compact perfection of the lines—or oracularity. Here is less the urgent, original voice than the fine polishing of the phrase. The first part of the book holds lyrics; the last presents a sonnet sequence; Fair sample from a sonnet:

"Epitaph for the Race of Man."
"Blench not, O race of Adam,
lest you find
In the sun's bubbling bowl
anoymous death,
Or lost in whistling space without a mind
To monstrous Nothing yield your little breath;
You shall achieve destruction
where you stand,
In intimate conflict at your

The poetic gleanings of Ernest Walsh's 31 years—runaway at 14; wanderer; hiker across the continent on victuals earned by his brilliant conversation; aviator who crashed while in training; four-year inmate of a hospital; ex-patriate friend of Pound, Hemingway and Brancusi; founder of the magazine, This Quarter, and tubercular until his death in 1926—appear now in the first and complete collection: "Poems and Sonnets" (Harcourt Brace, $2). Ethel Moorhead, his literary executor, provides a biographical memoir of great interest.

These poems are an extraordinary memorial to an extraordinary life. He runs through experimentalism and modernism, and keeps a light, utterly contagious humor. Some will think his love poetry nervous and pink-frilly, but there is the deep fire, too. Whatever the tone, from a colloquial sharpness without venom, to a fanciful juggling of poetic images, and whatever the inner drag of his sickly, tortured days he never forgets what he once told some young poets: "We must find something to persuade man against his despair. We must not merely convince but give him gayety."

Mr. Pound was, at one time, rather condescending to Walsh. But unless he will admire this gallant spirit with us, we have him, from his own text, on the hip.

A Woman in the Saddle

Lady Godiva was the first famous horsewoman . . . and there have been scant few others since that glamorous damsel rode through the startled village with golden locks as a costume and glory as the result.

But there's another horsewoman whose star is in the ascendant. She is Mary Hirsch, a remarkable young lady who is the only licensed woman horse trainer in the United States. To her, the beat of flying hoofs always has been music . . . so, after excellent schooling and a stab at business, Miss Hirsch decided on her present profession. And is glad she did!

A Pure Woman

By Wm. Lyon Phelps

IN the month of December, 1891, there appeared in London a new novel in three volumes. It was called "Tess of the D'Urbervilles," and the author was Thomas Hardy. I have a copy of the genuine first edition, containing all those typographical errors that make the work today of such high commercial value.

• • • •

The author was a famous man when he wrote it; his previous stories, "Far from the Madding Crowd," "The Return of the Native," "The Mayor of Casterbridge" and "The Woodlanders," had given him a reputation throughout the English-speaking world. But Tess raised a terrific storm that has hardly yet completely subsided.

The secondary title of the novel was "A Pure Woman Faithfully Presented," and the questions aroused by such a challenge were bitterly discussed in the '90s. In subsequent editions Hardy contributed a preface in which he assailed his critics with anger and scorn. He was a sensitive man, and felt the accusations so intensely that after one more novel he gave up prose fiction entirely (and for just this reason) and devoted the rest of his long career to poetry, which had always been closer to his heart.

The real reason why the book aroused such tumult was not because of the ethical question; it was because Tess is one of the most appealing heroines in English fiction. Every reader became so devoted to her and her fortunes, was so eager to see her receive some happiness, and was so heart-broken at the succession of appalling tragedies which she was forced to endure, that her fate was as agonizing as that of a personal friend; indeed, it seemed as if we could not stand it.

I remember when I finished this novel for the first time, my suffering was like that of some intolerable personal grief. For days the burden seemed unbearable. I defy anyone today to read that book and not feel acute agony.

The late Mrs. Fiske, who had had a well-earned reputation in her early years, displayed the plenitude of her powers in her impersonation of Tess on the stage. No one who saw her in that play will ever forget it; it made an indelible impression.

Indian Reform to Be Reported Upon Today

Ghosts of '76 Arise Over British Parliament as Colonial "White Paper" Comes Up.

By Edward Acheson.
(Special Correspondence of The Post.)

London.

THE history of the American Revolution has gained a sudden and unexpected ascendency over British minds. Not the contemporary revolution of the New Deal, not Roosevelt's monetary experiments and the alphabetical bureaus, but the Stamp Act of '65 and the Boston Tea Party are today being held up as an object lesson to the die-hards of Great Britain.

A joint committee of both houses of Parliament will report today on the proposals laid down in the so-called White Paper for Constitutional Reform in India. The opposition is already characterized as "the true lineal descendants of the stupid people who lost the American colonies." Parallels are drawn between the altitude of George III's ministers and the opinions of such men as Mr. Winston Churchill and Lord Lloyd—between India of 1934 and the 13 colonies of 1775. The assumption, of course, is that, had some measure of self-government been accorded the colonies in due time, the Revolution might have been avoided.

To us, at this distance, such a suggestion seems as irrelevant as Bertrand Russell's "more fantastic example," that, if Henry VIII hadn't fallen in love with Anne Boleyn the United States would not now exist. But, in this connection, it comes as a somewhat solemn memory that the Declaration of Independence was passed by a majority of one, that one vote being secured by the withdrawal of Dickinson.

VIEWED thus, the possible parallels assume a new interest. And parallels are not lacking. Undoubtedly India today chafes under "taxation without representation." The identical desire on the part of British industrialists for cheap raw materials and a protected market for finished goods exists now as it did in the eighteenth century.

In both instances, general public opinion in England is characterized by a conspicuous ennui, a quicker enthusiasm for "things nearer home." In both instances a die-hard Tory opposition to concession is confronted by a mild sympathy on the part of the laboring classes toward colonial asperations. Too, the civil disobedience campaigns in India are motivated by the same impulses which organized the boycott of things British in the American colonies.

But here the parallel ends abruptly. For the present government, unlike that of George III, is not adamantly opposing but suggesting and encouraging the development of self-government within its "colonies."

The forthcoming report will embrace a constitution for a federation of the Indian states and provinces—a constitution which, with one all-important reservation, is not unlike in form that adopted by the thirteen original States in America. A bicameral system in state and federal parliaments, the judicial review of legislative measures, a provision for "checks and balances" between judicial, legislative and executive, all are incorporated.

But this constitution is most emphatically not designed for immediate application to a dominion or an independent sovereignty. True, it sets up a government responsible to an electorate, but the government so formed is "during a period of transition qualified by limitation in certain directions."

THE limitations are the bone of contention. Primarily they affect the executives in their ramification they are capable of embracing the whole government of India. This is achieved by the appointment of the governor-general (as well as the provincial governors) by the Crown. The governor-general is vested with an exclusive interest in and responsibility for two of the most vital concerns of any country—its army and its foreign affairs.

It can be argued that, for the support of the army and for the regulation of foreign affairs, there is no department of the life of India which can not successfully be invaded and controlled by the executive. And this argument is perfectly sound: the constitution will be drawn with this specifically in mind. It is the chief "safeguard" reserved to Great Britain.

Mr. Gandi's Congress Party claims that such a "safeguard" in effect nullifies the British gesture. The Congress Party still stands solidly for independence—independence or nothing. However, it is well to note that "Congress" has recently decided to participate in the coming elections, rather than commit political suicide by refusing its share of appointive "plums" which will ripen under the increased "Indianizing" of the services.

In England the proposals are opposed by the Labor Party, which feels they do not go far enough, and by the die-hard element of the Tory Party, which abhors the "surrender" of India. Lancashire, the center of the British cotton spinning industry, is highly nervous over its Indian market. And quite rightly, if the present Indian tariff against British goods is any indication of future policy.

HOWEVER, these fears may be premature. Certainly no piece of social legislation has ever had the expert and disinterested investigation which has been accorded constitutional reform in India. A study which covers 15 years and comprises the Simon's commission, the round-table conferences and the present joint committee, can not successfully be accused of snap-judgments.

Furthermore, the constitution will be essentially elastic: there can be no question of that. The virtually unlimited power of the governor-general will be exercised in exact inverse ratio to the amount of cooperation offered by the Indian parliaments. The constitution is so designed that with a complete community of interest, the governor-general will interfere in no way with the day-to-day administration of the country; in the event of a policy of frustration the governor-general can take over any or every department of the national life—lock, stock and barrel.

Such provisions may be necessary for the very reason that the Indian and American colonial situation are not parallel cases. In America, George III was dealing with 2,000,000 Englishmen, trained in the traditions of self-government. In India, 300,000,000 Hindus and Moslems are not so trained. Had England seen fit to bestow an earlier complete independence on the American colonies, doubtless they would have managed to exist in some sort of tranquillity. Equally without doubt is the assurance that should England grant independence to India today, she would, in effect, be creating a Balkans of Asia.

However, dissimilar as the cases may be, it is interesting to ponder the question whether the sainted signers of the declaration would have been deterred by a proposal for constitution reform—replete with "safeguards"—"safeguards" which ceased to operate only when the several states consented to "play ball" with a "foreign power."

An Imaginary Column by Jimmy Walker.

(Former Mayor Walker of New York became a column writer in an English newspaper today.—News item.)

Here I loll in quiet Surrey,
Seemingly without a worry;
I've a lodge that's very British,
Far from manners wild or skittish,
And across the landscape rolling
Soothing bells are softly tolling.

Here there's nothing to disturb me—
No reformers try to curb me;
By no editors I'm harrassed—
Gone are headlines that embarrass;
All my time is in my keeping—
No one flays me for late sleeping!

Free am I from nightly speeches,
Dedications, bathing beaches,
Boxing bouts and wrestling matches,
Legislative bills in batches;
Here my private life's respected—

THEY ALL GET A LIFT WITH A CAMEL!

BUSINESS GIRL. Eve Miller says: "I started to smoke Camels because I appreciate mildness and delicacy of flavor. I found, in addition, that Camels give me a 'lift' when my energy is low—and they never upset my nerves."

EXPLORER. Says Captain R. Stuart Murray: "Camels always give me a 'pick-up' in energy when I need it most. And I prefer Camel's flavor above all others!"

DRAFTSMAN: "When I get tired, Camels bring back the feeling of ease and mental alertness—that a draftsman needs to continue such exacting work," says Franklin Dominick. "And I smoke Camels constantly whether I'm working or not."

On the Air Today

READERS chosen from Washington high schools and colleges will be given parts by Vida Sutton, "Magic of Speech" expert, when a play, "The Sun-Treader," is given a network broadcast here over WRC at 2 p. m., November 30, from the Mayflower Hotel during the National Council of Teachers of English convention.

Miss Sutton, famed for her N. B. C. red network broadcasts dealing with the requirements of good speech, will hold auditions to select the readers on November 28 and 29 with rehearsals immediately after each session. The broadcast, lasting a half hour, will be part of the convention gathered here to further interest in speech improvement. Delegates will be in session through December 1.

"FAMOUS stories, interestingly told" . . . with "delightful music, expertly done" is promised by Deems Taylor, composer, who will act as narrator of a new series of grand operas condensed into hour broadcasts on N. B. C. Sundays at 8 p. m. starting December 2.

The sponsors, Chase and Sanborn, have formed an opera guild, directed by Taylor, who will "renovate" traditional operas, modernize the dialogues and present the whole in English. Outstanding opera singers will be used.

"We are not trying to educate anybody," remarked Taylor in explaining the series, "on the contrary, we hope to prove that no one needs any special training to enjoy grand opera. These will not be traditional operatic performances. One hour is too short a span of time for that."

Opera is still here, and for the masses too. Audiences will at last be able to sing the words of "Rigoletto" and "Faust" in the bath tub.

SO serious has been the health of a cow in Little America with the Byrd expedition that an attempt to diagnose its ailment will occupy the short wave broadcast to the expedition today at 10 p. m. on C. B. S. networks.

Klondike, the afflicted beast, stood in one position for three days and three nights at a time, until she fell from sheer exhaustion. Then it took to lying down day and night. Now Klondike is showing a propensity to stand occasionally and to nibble her food. But just to be certain, Ed Cox, eminent dairy farmer of the expedition, will seek a prescription from New York doctors tonight.

MR. HUNNICUTT, head man of WRC's "Dr. of the Blues," and WMAL's "Getter-Upper," who is variously known as Horace, Dave and Dick, this morning will dedicate both of his programs—at 7:15 and 7:30 a. m.—to numbers requested by patients at Emergency Hospital. Requests from other hospitals will follow during the remainder of the week.

"Station Breaks."

SHANNON ALLEN, WRC production manager, makes a regular trip each Wednesday to the office of Inspector Burke, of the District Police, in search of material for WMAL's Thursday broadcasts at 7:45 p. m. of incidents featuring actual crime stories in Washington. He makes a few notes on an envelope and then Thursday morning, the day of the broadcast, he bangs at his typewriter until four c. more pages of script have been built around an inc'dent that might take three inches in a newspaper. He works fast, visualizes his characters, their dialogue, the sound effects and pace of the story. Listeners aren't thought of until a dozen actors have rehearsed the script for several hours . . . Anthony Frome, romantic tenor, famed as "The Poet Prince," will do his network N. B. C. broadcast from WMAL this Sunday at 2 p. m. during his appearance here on the Earle stage . . . Ronald Dawson and his Northern Dramatic Company, will present Dawson's own radio drama, "Environment," the story of twin brothers, tomorrow at 7:45 p. m. on WOL . . . The Graphic Association of Washington, a local amateur group, will start a series of 26 weekly sketches on WJSV tomorrow at 10:35 p. m., featuring the dramatic story of the lithographer's art . . . musical compositions by Brahms for voice, piano, violin and chamber music, will be presented by artists of the Curtis Institute of Music today at 4:15 p. m. on WJSV.

D. C. Awards Contract For 4,100 Doz. Eggs

Swift & Co. yesterday was awarded a contract by the District Commissioners to supply 4,100 dozen eggs beginning December 1 for District penal institutions. Under the contract the District is to pay 26.39 cents a dozen. This was the lowest bid. It will total $1,081.99.

Other bids ranged from 27 cents a dozen proposed by the District Hotel Supply Co. and the Chestnut Farms-Chevy Chase Dairy Co. to 29.5 cents per dozen offered by the National City Dairy Co., to 31.3 offered by the Carlin Creamery Co.

Boston, Nov. 20 (AP).—Charles V. L. Foley, 22, of Sligo, Ireland's youngest designer of aircraft, has arrived on the S. S. Laconia, en route to New York to have a plane constructed in which he said he hoped to span the Atlantic next summer in 20 hours.

Foley, inventor of the "Foley Emergency Control," designed to bring a plane out of a tail spin, said he expected to take-off from a New York field in May or June and follow the Great Circle route over the Maritime Provinces.

STEPHEN FOSTER—
COMPOSER OF THE SOUTHLAND'S MOST FAMOUS SONGS WAS A NORTHERNER!
11-21-34

Strange as it seems, the most famous writer of Southern songs was not a Southerner. Stephen Foster was born in Pittsburgh, Pa. At 20, after attending Jefferson College, he worked as a bookkeeper in Cincinnati. He took up his residence in New York at 34, and was killed in an accident there four years later.

He never made his home below the Mason-Dixon line, although he did make trips through the country that is portrayed in many of his songs. Foster was no great composer; his ability to compose simple tunes was natural and was evidenced in the fact that he showed a definite aptitude for music when he was only 7 years old.

One of Foster's most famous songs was written about a river that he never saw—the "Swanee River." In the original draft of this song the composer had the Pedee River, but because this name lacked pleasant sound qualities he sought another to take its place. He noticed the Swanee River listed in an atlas, and so substituted it for the Pedee. Thus this river, about which he knew nothing except that it was he knew nothing except that it was world over in his song.

Demand for Yule Trees Exceeds Coast Supply

San Francisco, Nov. 20 (AP).—Santa Claus may be late getting around Christmas Eve for indications point to more trees in homes this year than in recent Yule seasons.

Applications for trees from national forests of California now amount to three times the available stock, said T. D. Woodbury, assistant regional forester in charge of timber sales.

Carving Job Completed At Nebraska Capitol

Lincoln, Nebr., Nov. 20 (AP).—More than 10½ years of elaborate carving on the walls of Nebraska's $10,000,000 capitol today stood finished.

Alessandro Beretta, stone carving foreman, will go to Washington, where the company which had the carving contract on the Nebraska capitol is executing a huge job on the new Archieves building.

Irish Leader Urges Women to Join Army

Mallow, County Cork, Nov. 20 (AP). Tom Barry, leader of the Irish Republican Army of South Ireland, today urged that women "and even girls and boys" join the army to get ready for the day when "the last connecting link between Ireland and Great Britain will be broken."

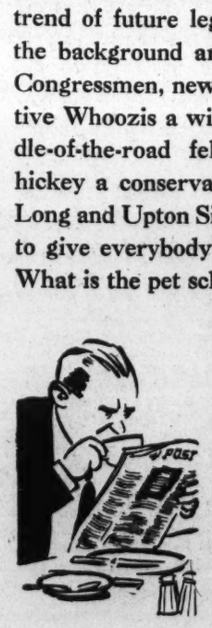
FOR REALLY FINE GIN • TRY SILVER WEDDING GIN

Ever hear that old joke about the chaplain being the man who, when Congress convenes, looks over the Senate and the House of Representatives, and then prays for the country? When that chaplain takes his stand in January, he'll see more new faces than a Sunday school superintendent sees on the Sunday before the annual picnic. There are so many new Congressmen wel'll bet Jim Farley can't remember all their names.

But we've fixed it up so you can take Aunt Minnie to the galleries and point out to her all the new members of our legislative body, and you'll be able to tell her a lot of things about their careers and political opinions, too. You see, The Washington Post, with the able assistance of a trained corps of political writers and Sebastian Robles ("National Gallery" caricaturist) now gives you a complete picture of each new Senator and Member of Congress. These political writers carefully, thoughtfully introduce to Post readers all the new Solons, and after reading "New Faces in the Senate and House," which appears each morning on the page opposite editorial, you'll know them better than do the folks back home. Too, you'll find there a caricature drawn by Robles, so you'll be able to recognize the new gentleman from Indiana or Pennsylvania.

Nowadays, with the old political parties having their faces lifted and new ones springing up like mushrooms, political labels mean just about as much as the campaign promises of a crooked politician, and, in order to determine the trend of future legislation, you must know the background and the political theory of Congressmen, new and old. Is Representative Whoozis a wild-eyed radical, or a middle-of-the-road fellow? Is Senator Doohickey a conservative, or will he go Huey Long and Upton Sinclair one better and vote to give everybody a $200-a-month pension? What is the pet scheme for recovery offered by Congressman Crackpot? And what does he look like, anyway? You'll find the answer in "New Faces in the Senate and House" . . . and you'll enjoy reading these biographies and appraisals of those who were swept into office on the tidal wave of November 6.



"New Faces in the Senate and House of Representatives" is found each day on the page opposite editorials, and, if you plan to keep abreast of the times and hold your own during the dinner table arguments about the New Congress, you can not afford to miss this feature . . . daily in

Anniversary of Fuad's Coronation Celebrated

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

Massachusetts avenue at Sheridan circle was lined with cars yesterday afternoon as Capital society attended the reception given by the Minister of Egypt and Mme. Ratib. The reception was originally planned for October 9, in celebration of the anniversary of the accession of King Fuad I to the throne of Egypt, but the assassination of the King of Yugoslavia and the subsequent courtesy mourning of the entire diplomatic court caused postponement until yesterday.

The Minister and Mme. Ratib received in the drawing room of the legation, where they have placed many handsome hangings and objets d'art of Turkish and Egyptian workmanship. Mme. Ratib wore a striking gown of black crepe with a long train and long flowing sleeves. The only trimming was a collar of silver paillettes which set off the narrow silver streak across the front of her smooth black hair.

Mlle. Nihal Menemenli, daughter of Mme. Ratib, was everywhere mingling with the guests. She was charming in a gown of stiff white taffeta with a brief jacket of black velvet, the neckline of which was trimmed with a crisp bow of white taffeta.

In the entrance hall many of the guests paused to admire the beautiful painting, a copy of one of the famous paintings of Egypt, which was recently completed by Mr. Andre Cattaui, Attache of the Legation. The coloring of the panel is vivid and suits admirably the room in which it is hung where the walls are soft ivory and the carpets a deep crimson.

Magnificent Buffet Spread.

The greater number of the guests gathered in the dining room where a magnificent buffet was spread, and others sat or stood in groups in the drawing rooms. Mrs. George H. Dern, wife of the Secretary of War, was accompanied by her daughter, Mrs. Harry Baxter, who returned recently from a trip to New York. Both were in black, the latter in a frock made with a tunic of bright green. They were chatting with Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture, who wore a frock of black with a hat to match, and Mrs. Harold L. Ickes, wife of the Secretary of the Interior, who was also in black.

Mme. Peter, wife of the Minister of Switzerland, wearing a gown of black moire, with a smart black hat, stopped to say a few words to Mme. Simopoulos, who held a court in one corner of the dining room. Nearby were the Spanish Ambassador and Senora de Calderon, the latter wearing a brown ensemble, the coat of which was trimmed with natural lynx, and a small brown hat ornamented with a cluster of berries in shades of green rust and brown. The French Ambassador and Mme. de Laboulaye, the latter in black trimmed with Persian lamb, were present, as were the Minister of Austria and Mme. Prochnik, with their debutante daughter, Miss Valerie Prochnik, the latter in a beige costume trimmed with beaver, and a Russian turban to match, and banded with the same fur; the Minister of Persia and Mme. Djalal, the Minister of Portugal and Mme. de Bianchi, the latter wearing with her black costume a handsome cape of sables; Miss Grace Roper, daughter of the Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, in black crepe trimmed with deep turquoise blue; the Minister of Czechoslovakia, Dr. Ferdinand Veverka, just returned from Europe, and being questioned on every side as to the date of the return of his wife and daughter, who are spending the winter in Prague; the Minister of Guatemala and Senora de Recinos, the latter wearing a becoming costume of deep red, with a hat to match.

Other Guests at Reception.

Also seen were the Charge d'Affaires of Bulgaria and Mme. Petroff Tchomakoff, with the former's sister, Mlle. Marie Petroff; the Ambassador of Turkey, Mr. Mehmet Munir, with his guest, Mrs. Walter Duncan, of London, and her son, Mr. Athol Duncan, the Commercial Counselor of the British Embassy, and Mrs. H. O. Chalkley, the latter in black with a shoulder cape of ermine; Mrs. Sol Bloom, wife of Representative Bloom, and Miss Vera Bloom; Mrs. Fred A. Britten, wife of Representative Britten, who has just returned from Chicago, and who wore a smart costume of black with silver fox furs; Mrs. Frederick Duncan McKenney, also in black rimmed with gold; the Secretary of the Rumanian Legation and Mme. Popovici; the Counselor of the Netherlands Legation, Baron van Bruegel Douglas; the Minister of Ecuador, Capt. Colon Eloy Alfaro, the Air Attache of the Italian Embassy, and Signora Sbernadori, who, to the regret of their many friends, are leaving after the first of the year to return to Rome. Signora Sbernadori wore a black crepe frock trimmed with bands of satin, and a small black hat.

The Naval Attache of the French Embassy and Mme. Sable were glimpsed as were Mme. Lombard, wife of the Military Attache of the French Embassy; Baroness von Below, Mrs. Edwin Guthrie and her sister, Mrs. Katherine Letts Jones, accompanied by their guest, Mrs. T. R. van Kurtz, of New York; Mrs. Jacob Leander Loose, and Dr. Leo S. Rowe, director general of the Pan American Union.

The Ambassador of Argentina and Senora de Espil, the latter wearing a frock of bright red crepe with a small black hat and accessories, and Mrs. Wilbur J. Carr, wife of the Assistant Secretary of State, in a gown of brown crepe flecked with gold, were among the early arrivals.

Vocal Program To Be Given at Ball Tomorrow

At the entertainment and dance to be given by the Maryland Society of Washington tomorrow night at 9 o'clock, at the Kennedy-Warren, the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Co. Glee Club will sing. The musical program will be concluded with "Maryland, My Maryland," which will be sung by the glee club and members of the society. At 10 o'clock the dance will start, and at 11 o'clock there will be a cotillion figure which will be led by Miss Emily Maddox and her escort and Miss Silvine Clagett and her escort. Miss Maddox and Miss Clagett are the debutante daughters of Mr. and Mrs. George Amory Maddox and Mr. and Mrs. H. B. C. Clagett, members of the society. All of the debutantes on the Washington list, which includes seven other Maryland girls, have been invited.

In the receiving line, in addition to the guests of honor, will be Mrs. George H. Calvert, jr., wife of the president of the society, Dr. and Mrs. Thomas Hardy Taliaferro, Mrs. Finley H. Calvert, and Mrs. Lella Mattingly Hodges.

Mr. Robert Gwathmey Merritt, one of the vice presidents of the society, will make the introductions to the receiving line.

Lady Moira's mother, the Countess of Granard, is the former Miss Beatrice Mills, a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Ogden Mills, of New York and Staatsburg, N. Y. She is great-granddaughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Darius Ogden Mills and the late Mr. and Mrs. Maturin L. Livingston, a grandniece of the late Mrs. Whitelaw Reid and is a niece of Mrs. Henry Carnegie Phipps, of New York and Palm Beach, Fla., the former Miss Gladys Mills. Her only sister, the former Lady Eileen Beatrice Forbes, was married on April 26, 1932, to John Crichton-Stuart, the Earl of Dumfries, and eldest son of the Marquess of Bute. Their wedding took place in Newtown Forbes Catholic Church in County Longford, Irish Free State.

Title Created in 1675.

The bride-elect's father, the Earl of Granard, is Sir Bernard Arthur William Patrick Hastings Forbes, K. P., P. C., G. C. V. O., eighth holder of the title created in 1675, a deputy speaker of the House of Lords and holder of the ancient office of Master of the Horse to His Majesty from 1907 to 1915. He is a director of the Bank of Ireland.

The engagement of Lady Forbes to the Marquis de Brissac, son of the Duc de Brissac, of France, which was announced in November, 1931, was broken the following year.

The Compte de Brantes' father, Marquis Paul de Brantes, is a general in the French army and was at one time in command of the Third Cavalry Division at Strasbourg. Gen. de Brantes is a commander of the Legion of Honor and holds the Croix de Guerre. The Marquise de Brantes is the former Miss Margaret Schneider. Compte Louis is a brother of Compte Francois de Brantes, who married a member of the old French family, de Faycigny-Lucinge.

Fete to Be Held At Miles Home

Reception on Saturday Will Celebrate 25th Wedding Anniversary.

Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Sherman Miles have issued invitations for a reception Saturday afternoon from 5 to 7 o'clock in their home on N street in celebration of their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary.

The invitations are engraved in silver and bear the dates 1909-1934. Mrs. Miles was formerly Miss Yulee Noble, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. William Beldon Noble. She was presented to Capital society by her mother in the same house in which she now makes her home. The same house was the scene of the wedding in 1909. Mrs. Miles is the granddaughter of the late Senator David Yulee, of Florida, who was the first Senator from that State, and during his service as a delegate to Congress from the Territory of Florida he was instrumental in its admittance to statehood.

Col. Miles is the son of the late Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Nelson A. Miles, who were prominent for many years in Washington society after the general's retirement from the Army.

Lindsay R. Morse Has Guests at Tea

Kennedy-Warren Lounge Is Scene of Party.

Mr. Lindsay Russell Morse, who makes his home at the Kennedy-Warren, entertained at a delightful tea Sunday afternoon in the lounge of the apartment from 4 until 7 o'clock. Miss Bess Boyd, who assisted her nephew in receiving his guests, wore a gown of black velvet made on long lines with a short train and a shoulder corsage of red roses and lilies-of-the-valley.

The table was attractively decorated with pink roses and lilies-of-the-valley in a large silver urn, and tall pink tapers. Alternating at the coffee table and punch bowl were Mrs. Lucille McMullen, Mrs. John H. Small, Mrs. Maurice Chisewell, Mrs. Mary Buford, Miss Margaret Boyd, Miss Elizabeth Mcgekee and Miss Helen Lingenfelter.

Louise Steffregen To Wed in January

Mr. and Mrs. Carl H. Steffregen, of Montclair, N. J., have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Louise Steffregen, to Mr. Arthur B. Schellenberg, of New York.

Miss Steffregen was graduated from the Madeira School and from Smith College with the class of 1931. Mr. Schellenberg, who is the son of Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Schellenberg, of St. Louis, Mo., was graduated from the Engineering School of Washington University in St. Louis.

The wedding will take place in January.

Maj. Richard G. Hunter and Mrs. Hunter, of Chicago, are at the Martinique.

Deb's Diary

Who, What and Where —as She Sees It.

DEAR DIARY:

At the Mayflower I saw Mary Senate Howes (on a very brief vacation from her school) and Dorothy Kurtz—both modishly gowned in severe black.

Lindsay Moore entertained at a most delightful tea the other afternoon at the Kennedy-Warren. There was an abundance of flowers and a stringed orchestra. Two out-of-towners, who were among the guests were Rannie Richardson, in black and a leopard coat, and titian-haired Anne Barrett.

Secrets are such fun. I know of an engagement that is to be announced tomorrow. The wedding will take place Tuesday morning which is, by the way, almost exactly a year after the young bride's debut party. Ah-me, we shall all be more than sorry to lose this popular member of the set—for I believe that the future home is to be in the South.

G. O. P. Women Give Luncheon For Mrs. Taft

League's Annual Function Held at Mayflower; 365 Attend.

Mrs. William Howard Taft was guest of honor at the annual luncheon of the League of Republican Women yesterday in the grand ballroom of the Mayflower Hotel and at which 365 guests were present.

Mme. Cantacuzene-Grant spoke on "What Constitutes Patriotism?" and dwelt at length on the evils of communism. Mrs. William Fitch Kelley, president of the league, presided.

Others at the speakers' table were Mrs. Russel B. Harrison, Mrs. Harrison Williams, Mrs. Alvin T. Hert, Mrs. Virginia White Speel, Mrs. Edward A. Harriman, Mrs. Frank W. Mondell, Mrs. Gilbert Grosvenor, Mrs. Bruce Baird, Mrs. Harry Hull, Miss Edna Patton, Mrs. James S. Parker, Mrs. Louise Weller, Mrs. Ellis Yost, Mrs. Henry Albers, Mrs. Earl Venable, Mrs. John Otto Johnson, Mrs. Edward Kockersperger, Mrs. William Lee Corbin and Mrs. William Guthrie.

Col. Charles Hoyt March, Federal Trade Commissioner, and Mrs. March will entertain 20 guests at dinner at the Shoreham tonight in honor of their son-in-law and daughter, Dean C. L. Christensen, of the University of Wisconsin, and Mrs. Christensen, who are passing the week at the Shoreham as guests of Col. and Mrs. March.

Invitations Out For Dance Series

Supper Club Events Will Start Thursday.

Invitations have been issued for the series of dances of the Thursday Supper Club, which will be held at the Sulgrave Club Thursday, on November 29 and December 6, 13 and 20.

'Make Million' Game Peps Up Dull Evenings

By Ruth Anne Davis.

BUDGET bugaboos and depression blues vanish with the first deal of the cards in the new "make a million" game. When George S. Parker, the Salem game magnate, originated it he set a world's record in game sales, for its first appearance on the market coincided with the tenth millionth sale of Camelot and several other games of his invention.

"Make a million" is the kind of a game you can take with a cocktail. It's easy to learn, simple to play. The object is to capture money cards which aggregate a million dollars. You start by bidding—and begin with no less than a grand statement of $175,000.

The pack contains 55 cards consisting of the Tiger, highest trump, the Bull, which doubles the value of a trick taken, and the Bear, which cancels the value. As in bridge, two players are partners. They work together in skillfully maneuvering plays which will net them a total of a million dollars, and win the game.

All in all, "make a million" is the kind of game that can turn a dull Victorian parlor party into a howling success. It even adds punch to a cocktail gathering and is a light dessert as an aftermath to bridge.

"Beautibox" Real Convenience.

A cosmetician whose name needs no introduction has assembled four of her products in a small kit which she calls a "Beautibox." There is everything which the normal skin requires to keep it smooth, soft and free from blackheads. A cleansing cream with a soft mellow fragrance takes off the old make-up. A skin and tissue cream softens and lubricates the complexion, while a combination astringent and skin tonic tightens and firms it. To give that final silky finish is a box of her especially prepared and two-fold sifted powder.

Travelers find that the beautibox is a real convenience. It fits neatly into the suitcase and is proof against spills. Those who drive hither, thither and yon can tuck it away in the pocket of the car and have it close at hand for a quick freshening up.

Those in offices will enjoy having such a convenient package in their desk drawers to use as a real facial "perk-me-up."

Glass Ash Trays.

Ash trays made of ruby glass are both bargains and works of art. The gracefully curved bowl fits into a wrought-iron frame molded to resemble a vine. A single leaf extends over the tray proper and serves as a cigarette rest.

Novelty Glove Sets.

It's impossible not to feel as jaunty as you look in the new novelty glove sets displayed in a local shop. Large gauntlet gloves have wide full cuffs in mingled colors to contrast with the solid shade of the hand. Matching these is a long scarf that may be twined and retwined around the neck, and a perky three-pointed cap that gives anyone a saucy air.

The sets come in two shades of green, black and white, blue and red, brown and orange, red and white and brown and gold. They're modestly priced.

Small Gift Suggestions.

Those who believe in shopping now for Christmas, but are still a bit hazy over what to shop for, will find a haven in a local store. Here two large tables have been set aside for various small gift suggestions ranging from 10 or 15 cents to $1.95.

A hasty survey reveals several novelty lamps for desk or dressing table, a leather needle book, fancy hat trees, sport or dress garters, whiskbrooms in all shapes and sizes, hosiery boxes with the center filled with darning threads, "Romance" satin pillows, handpainted, wooden sewing trays, guest powder puffs in celophane packages, wall mirrors and tie racks combined, sewing bags and handkerchief boxes.

While this list seems inclusive, it only mentions a few of the many gift suggestions displayed there.

Labor-Saving Device.

One small pad which sells for only a dime does the work of ten men. It cleans silverware, windows, mirrors, jewelry, keeps the refrigerator looking like new, the stationary washstand white as snow, drives the stains and soils from statuary, brightens up woodwork and polishes auto accessories.

It's one of those labor-saving devices that help the housewife to more time for bridge. Instead of taking the morning off for a real old-fashioned scrubbing up she can take her small pad and give a hit and a lick here and there and the results are one with a morning's toil.

Lace Jacket Makes New Nightgowns Distinctive

Pattern No. 796.

ALL WOMEN adore lovely lingerie—especially nightgowns. And lingerie is the one item of apparel which is most in the gift tradition. That is why we show this lovely lingerie ensemble—in a pattern that is easy to use, economical of fabric, new in design. With its empire lines and delicate lace jacket it is the perfect Christmas gift, and one that will be inexpensive as well as charming.

It is cut in sizes 12 to 20; 30 to 38. Size 18 (36) requires 3⅛ yards of 39-inch material for the gown; 1⅝ yards of 35-inch or 39-inch fabric for the jacket.

How to Keep Well

By Irving S. Cutter.

Quinsy Sore Throat.

ALTHOUGH abscess in the tonsil is known by a number of jaw breaking names, it is popularly called quinsy. It is a painful and potentially dangerous condition and must be managed with great care. The disease is fairly common and not infrequently causes more discomfort and disability than any other type of throat infection.

In an earlier article the tonsil crypts were described. These are indentations or canals that lead from the surface into the substance of the gland. Bacteria usually gain entrance through a break in or injury to the thin crypt lining and thus penetrate the tonsil tissue. If the crypts are normal and open, allowing free drainage, and if the tonsil is not otherwise diseased, abscesses will not form. Infection, however, that fastens itself deep within the tonsil, fairly close to the thick, fibrous tissue at the back of the gland, will usually find a favorable spot where bacteria can grow rapidly and set up inflammation with the formation of pus.

The onset of the disease is usually characterized by two or three days of considerable pain, swelling, and soreness on one side of the throat. The pain is usually aggravated by swallowing and freequently radiates to the ear. There may be no real stiffness of the neck, but the head is usually held rigidly. The patient can open his mouth only with great difficulty, and the breath has a foul odor.

If the abscess is small, and if the resistance of the patient is high, recovery may occur without opening the abscess. The pus gradually absorbs and firm scar tissue takes the place of the destroyed tonsil substance. Now and then the abscess may break of its own accord. The pus may burrow to the surface of the tonsil and an opening occur either during the act of swallowing or of gargling.

In all throat infections a culture for diphtheria should be made. This is a necessary precaution, as occasionally diphtheria may complicate other throat infections or may simulate tonsilitis or even quinsy.

Much relief may be secured through the use of warm salt or alkaline gargles, followed by dusting powdered aspirin (acetyl-salicylic acid) over the swollen area. The patient should be kept in bed and an ice bag applied to the throat. Sometimes the abscess is so superficial that a slight incision will bring about an evacuation of the pus. More often it will require three or more days for the abscess to form, so as to insure adequate drainage when the opening is made.

Though as little surgery as possible should be employed in the presence of infection, it is nevertheless necessary to empty the abscess in order to avoid many of the complications that unfortunately now and then occur, such as middle ear disease, mastoid disease and secondary infection of the kidney.

One of the most comforting procedures is to allow the patient to lean over the side of the bed, the head lower than the body. In this position hot normal salt solution from an irrigator is allowed to flow over the swollen area. As the fluid leaves the mouth it is caught in a basin. The heat serves to stimulate a local concentration of leucocytes, gives great relief from pain, and cleanses the throat of accumulated toxins.

What Today Means

"Scorpio."

IF NOVEMBER 21 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 9:15 to 11:15 a. m., from 2:15 to 4:15 p. m. and from 7:15 to 9:15 p. m. The danger periods are from 7:15 to 9:15 a. m., from 4:15 to 6:15 p. m. and from 10:15 p. m. until midnight.

Conditions conducive to shortness of tempers and abrupt speech may make ordinarily tactful people forgetful of manners approved by the accepted rules governing polite society on this date, so try to keep your disposition under control. Be careful procrastination does not cause you to suffer a financial loss, by your failing to attend to a business transaction requiring attention on this day. An ostentatious type of individual may try to impress you with his or her claim to superiority of their social position, with an idea of obligating you to cater to some purely selfish whim. Do not let external appearances influence your better judgment.

It might pay to analyze carefully any business transaction involving deferred payments, bearing in mind it is very easy to contract indebtedness, but the day of reckoning inevitably arrives. There is a possibility of your receiving an invitation to join some friends at a merry-making party of some kind and it will be well to keep in mind that there are certain rules of conventionality that can not be disregarded without a penalty being imposed. Married and engaged couples, as well as those anxious to ascend the altar's steps, may avoid trouble on this date if they are very circumspect in all actions pertaining to their behavior.

If a woman and November 21 is your birthday, you are likely to have almost a dual personality, being readily influenced by both people and environment, so seek to find only the best of both. Wealth may play an important part in your life and if it comes to you be sure to use it for the betterment of mankind. Chemistry, medicine or some type of metaphysical work, as well as writing, may give you an interest that would prove absorbing and lucrative. You should be able to marry very successfully.

If a man and November 21 is your natal day, your success will depend largely on the amount of your own individual effort to get results. There is no limitation to your capacity, the only danger being you might allow social activities to divert your mind from business. Commercial life, educational, financial and political work offer men of your type splendid fields in which to exploit their talents.

Too Frequent Serving of Hot Bread Unwise

Substitute for Dessert or Salad Accompaniment Lightens Meal.

By Dorothea Duncan.

THE GENUINE delight stirred up by the mere appearance of a plate of fragrant hot bread is miraculous. Is there a person who would reach to his left for a slice of bread, if a hot, golden muffin was anywhere in sight?

It is true that a few flaky biscuits do enhance a meal. However, hot breads should not be eaten generally because they are not easily digestible. Hot breads are soft and less likely to be chewed than other breads. They are richer, too, and are so popular that children especially, may neglect their other food in preference to the hot bread that can be so hastily and pleasantly swallowed.

This does not mean that the housewife must exclude hot breads entirely from her menus, but they should be served infrequently. When you serve hot bread, if you find that your family is enjoying it at the expense of neglecting the rest of the meal, try this little scheme. There are so many variations of muffin and biscuit recipes that these two breads may be served in place of dessert or as an accompaniment to a salad dessert. Occupying this place in the menu, the hot bread has two good features: the meal will be lightened considerably, as no dessert is necessary, and no one will be tempted away from the main course by the appearance of hot bread.

For example, biscuits with butter and honey make a delicious dessert. Orange or cheese biscuits are particularly nice as a fruit salad accompaniment.

Dinner Menu.

Grapefruit juice cocktail
Corned beef and cabbage
Creamed potatoes
Peach cup salad with mayonnaise
Sally Lunn
Coffee Milk (for children)

Peach Cup Salad.

12 medium sized halves canned peaches
½ cup celery
¼ cup chopped nuts
2 to 3 tablespoons apple butter
¼ cup seeded raisins
Mayonnaise

Arrange twin nests of lettuce on individual salad plates. In each nest place a half of peach. Combine celery, nuts, raisins and apple butter. Fill the centers of the peaches with mounds of this mixture. Place a spoonful of mayonnaise between the peach halves. This is a delicious salad dessert and is perfect when accompanied by a good hot bread.

Sally Lunn.

½ cup shortening
¼ cup sugar
4 teaspoons baking powder
2 cups sifted flour
1 cup milk
1 egg

Cream the shortening with the sugar. Mix and sift together the flour and the baking powder and add to the creamed mixture, alternating with the milk. Add the beaten egg and bake in a loaf or in muffin pans, in a moderate oven (350 to 400 degrees F.).

When fresh huckleberries are in season, one cup stirred in just before baking will be an interesting and tempting addition.

Titles For Americans Urged.

A title such as "Lord" should be bestowed upon persons in the United States who have distinguished themselves in different fields of activity, Dr. Christian Fichthorne Reisner, of New York, believes. Creation of such a title would spur mankind as did the ivy wreath in Greece, Dr. Reisner said in a recent sermon at Broadway Temple Mehtodist Episcopal Church.

Violoncello's Tones Deeper Than Violin's

This is the third of a series of articles on the instruments of the orchestra, presented in preparation for the children's concerts by the National Symphony Orchestra which The Post will sponsor early in December. Students are urged to clip them for music scrapbooks.

THE VIOLONCELLO, commonly called the cello, takes the fourth part among the strings, both in the quartet of solo instruments and in the orchestra. Dr. Hans Kindler, conductor of the National Symphony Orchestra, is a noted cellist. Violoncello comes from the Italian "violone," meaning doube bass, and "cello," meaning small. So it is really a small double bass.

The strings of the cello are an octave deeper than those of the viola, and two lower ones in each case being wound with wire. Owing to the length and comparative thinness of the strings of the cello, it has as much variety of expression as the violin; but its utterance is much deeper.

Cello playing was of slow growth, as the old six-stringed viol de gamba, from which the cello is derived, was hard to displace. But the more powerful cello tone blended better with the violins, and the instrument came into use in the time of Tartini in 1700, while Haydn and others placed it in the string quartet.

Cherubini wrote three real parts for his cellos in the opening scene of one of his operas. Rossini called for five cellos in the "William Tell" overture, though the passage is now generally arranged for one. Beethoven usually obtained the maximum effect from the instruments he used and made them speak out in their most characteristic tones. He is especially effective when he uses cellos.

Tomorrow: The Double Bass.

Yule Parade Opposed As It "Excites Greed"

Montreal children will have no Santa Claus parade this year if an organization called the Young French-Canadian Catholics has its way. The organization objects to the annual parade on the grounds that it excites the greed of children in families of moderate means, disrupts traffic, and tends to transform into vulgar buffoonery a feast which Christianity has always colthed with sacredness.

LUXURY

By MARYSE RUTLEDGE.

As a dependent guest of the fashionable Oliver Keenes, on a trip to Paris, beautiful Jocelyn Crane finds herself unwillingly involved in screening Rita Keene's flirtation with Prince Glazanoff, and saving "Ollie" Keene from a blonde adventuress, Carrie Franks. She has just received a cable from Mary Derby, in love with Dick, her husband, asking for the return of a pearl necklace that Mary loaned her the day Jocelyn sailed. But half the pearls were flung in the Atlantic by Carrie Franks when Jocelyn recovered Rita's compromising letters that Carrie had stolen.

Prince Glazanoff tells her of a friend of his who specializes in reproductions of pearls. In her panic, to gain time, Jocelyn has Mary Derby's pearls copied, using the original clasp, and sends them back through the Marsdens, friends from Bronxville.

Ogden Temple, powerful multimillionaire, in love with Jocelyn, asks her to pose for him, as sculpture is his hobby. She consents to do so for $2,000, the price of Mary Derby's pearls. Meanwhile, back at home, Mary Derby and Dick Crane are week-end guests of the Marsdens.

DICK followed more slowly, his lips a thin inverted arc under the clouded grey of his eyes. Hang Lena Marsden and her wagging tongue! He looked with relief and gratitude at Mary. She wasn't that kind.

"We were talking about Lynn," Mrs. Marsden rattled on irrespressibly. Her voice persisted against the clink of the shaker. "I was saying to Mary, she seemed to be having a wonderful time. I only saw her really a moment when she came to the hotel to bring——"

Mary's blue eyes clapped her silent. "Paris is a sort of merry-go-round," she cut in. "One never sees anybody on a merry-go-round." It was not Mary's intention to have Dick hear through Lena Marsden that she had her pearls back.

It was wrong of her to wear them because, unobservant though he was of such feminine accessories, he might possibly notice and ask questions. And Mary had not made up her mind what she would answer if he did. "I want so to be perfect tonight!" she excused herself, dressing later in the guest room she had made almost hers, so many nights had she spent at the Marsdens. When one has no place of one's own except two rather lonely rooms in the East Fifties——!

Lena Marsden's words that he had not wanted to hear, came back to him. Why should he bother about what envious women might say?

Everything had been going so swell! Mary's offer of money to help out his business had done things to and for Dick. It was the moral effect. He should have written Jocelyn how decent Mary had been. But that would have been admitting what a hole he was in—much deeper than he had let her realize before she sailed.

For Mary, there was a delicious intimacy as lightly, noislessly, she moved about in the room next to Dick's. One or twice she thought she heard him mutter behind the closed door, and the smile that touched her lips was the smile of all women who hunger and love.

Dress Needed Pearls.

Yes, the powder blue of the new dress brought out her beauty. But it needed the final touch of the pearls! "Women are all alike," Mary thought with a rueful little smile. "They'd sell their souls for a divine moment!" And as she clasped the necklace around her lovely neck, she felt a tinge of regret that she couldn't keep it—and her word to Dick, too. But he must never know that it was these pearls that were founding their partnership——

"Gee, you look swell, Mary," he said as she came slowly down the stairs.

Mary didn't miss his quick, puzzled glance at the pearls. She shouldn't have worn them. Too late now. If he asked her, what would she say?

Party Was Noisy.

The party noise had begun. Friends, neighbors frothed in and the Marsdens were the center of voices and laughter. "Yes, we had a grand time—but we're glad to be home." Lena in her element.

Dick wanted to get away. Tried to hide himself in corners. It got on his nerves, this perpetual—"Heard from Lynn?" "When's Lynn coming back?" "Lena, did you see Lynn?" And again and again his troubled gray eyes frowned upon the pearls Mary was wearing. How the devil had they got back? That wasn't hard—the Marsdens, of course. But why were they here? And why hadn't Mary said anything?

He'd ask her. He shouldered his way over to where she stood in the living room, smiling toward him as if she rather expected him to join her. A short chubby man edged forward as Dick got to her side.

"I'm interested in pearls. Will you permit me?" the little man said.

Pearls Examined.

Mary wished Dick had not come up at this precise moment. Unfortunately it focused his attention on the pearls. But she allowed the man to peer at them. After all, what did it matter?

The short man took them, examined them closely under a lamp. Behind his pince-nez his eyes grew keen. Mary regretted her impulse as Dick frowned. Then Lena Marsden and a few others drifted up.

The man turned, handing the necklace back to Mary. "Thank you," he said politely. "I am something of an expert at pearls, but these had me fooled for a moment. I have seldom seen finer imitations."

It took Lena Marsden to complete the ghastly nightmare. "Why, Mary! How terrible! I can only say they're the same pearls Jocelyn handed to me at the hotel!"

A Tense Situation.

"You've found me out," she managed a light tone. "That's what a girl gets for pretending——"

"Well, I must say——"Lena Marsden gasped. "You had me worried. It would have been awkward for Bill and me if something had gone wrong——!"

Then the faces seemed to melt away. Only she and Dick were left. In a daze Mary followed him. Yes, they would have to talk it out now. Everything was horribly shattered. Now she couldn't sell the pearls. Couldn't give Dick the money she had promised to put into the business as his partner. And if she explained—! Those pearls she'd given Jocelyn had been real. When she had had them restrung just before Jocelyn sailed, the jeweler had told her they were worth several thousand dollars.

Despite Her Experiences, She Finds Racing Is Man's Game.

By Malvina Lindsay.

OUT AT BOWIE in the early morning it is far different from what it is in the afternoon when the music is playing and the crowds shouting. The grandstand is empty, its gray boards chill and frosty, and a crisp stillness hangs over the deserted track.

But at the stables life is beginning briskly. Negro grooms are wiping down the horses. "Aw, now behave yo'sef." "Cain't yoh stand still a minute?" "Back on aroun' heah, honey."

Trainers with impassive faces walk up and down Shed Row and cast appraising eyes over the horses in the stalls. In large kettles over wood fires, water is being heated to rub down the horses after their workouts. The air comes up raw from the wooded ravine in which a purplish haze nestles. Jockeys gather around the fires and rub their hands. The smell of burning wood mingles with the smell of hay and horses. . . . A man's world.

Trainers Greet "Miss Mary."

So unobtrusively has Mary Hirsch come in that no one senses she is the only woman at the stables. The slender booted figure seems that of a boy . . . but, no, she had flung off a felt hat revealing shining waves of brown hair.

She enters a stall and feels carefully of the bandages that have been wrapped around the slender legs of a bay colt. She stops at another stall and in a low voice makes a suggestion to a groom. Further up the row she stops to pat the neck of Tartan Bess, her brown filly.

"Did you weigh yesterday, Babe?" she asks a round-faced little boy in a jockey's cap. He is Babe Hanford, apprentice jockey, brother of Buddy Hanford, killed in a jam on the curve at Pimlico a year ago. He is under contract to ride for Mary Hirsch, only licensed woman horse trainer in the country.

Horses Led to Track.

Horses are led out along the row to the track for their morning workouts. They arch their shining necks, sniff the air, and step on haughtily. Mary Hirsch follows them to the track and, stop-watch in hand, leans against the fence timing the paces of Tartan Bess.

"Has she ever won a race?" some one asks.

"One," casually replies her owner.

"Did it give you a thrill?"

She smiled slowly. "Oh of course it always gives you a kick to see your horse come in first. But I get a thrill out of seeing any good horse win—whether it's Cavalcade, mine or any other.

"Have you had many winners?"

"Well, Prize Package won a race at Detroit. But—well, I've had mostly platers as yet. Some day——"

"Some day you expect to win the Derby?"

She laughted. "I guess every trainer has that dream."

Down the track a horse was cavorting, pawing the dirt. A young man was snapping a bull whip about the horse's legs. The girl's mouth grew grim.

Whip Dangerous.

"It certainly makes a man feel masculine to get a bull whip in his hand," she exclaimed.

"There are times when a horse needs a whipping," spoke up a trainer. "Take that American Flag filly. She's rank. Got the Man o' War meanness in her."

The girl trainer turned impatiently. "Oh, I don't say there are not times when you have to whip a horse a little. But it's got to be done intelligently. A whip's dangerous. Put in the hands of an ignorant man——"

A flock of horses swept past. Mary's eyes followed the brown legs of Tartan Bess down the track. The chill of the morning began to lift. The sun shone more benignly on the track. Yet it was still an hour when society debutantes were abed, when business girls such as Mary Hirsch once planned to be, were on their way to their offices. Leaning against the fence the girl trainer spoke modestly, almost reluctantly, of her ambitions.

Three Holding Reunion.

"No, I didn't definitely decide to be a horse trainer until I started taking a business course. I had grown up with horses and had helped Daddy a lot, but I hadn't thought of the business for myself. I went to school at Merrymount, at Scudder and at Chevy Chase. Then I took a business course—for three months. After that I was ready to go back to the horses."

During the present season the girl trainer has been alone with her horses at three tracks, Detroit, Chicago and Narragansett. Her brother, Buddy, also a trainer, and her father, Max Hirsch, noted trainer and developer of the great horse, Sarazen, have been at other tracks. Now the three are holding a reunion here. Mary hopes to go on to California. "That is," she explains, "if I can get Daddy to hold still" — in nonturf parlance — to concur.

In the short time she has been at the tracks with her horses, Mary Hirsch has acquired the respect of the racing profession, has acquired licenses in two States, Michigan and Illinois, and has her license application pending in New York. Racing men know she can go to a sale and look the colts and fillies over with a keen eye, that she can judge a horse by its hind leg and its breadth between the eyes and all its other racing points, and that she can even guess pretty well whether or not it has a game heart.

But in spite of her ability and experience, she finds that the racing stable is still a man's world.

"I don't blame the men for hesitating about letting the women in," she said. "If the barriers were let down, a lot of women are likely to push in as a fad, because they think it will be fun. They'll make it harder for those of us who are serious."

Early Hours Required.

"This is hard work!" she exclaimed. "It's not play. It means getting up at 5 o'clock every day in the week, including Sunday. It means being out at the stables and being able to do everything you tell anybody else to do. You've got to know how to take care of a horse when it's sick. You've simply got to be able to do everything. You've not only got to be as good as a man—you've got to be better than a man."

She pocketed her watch and turned toward the stables. In a few minutes she was on the track astride a lead pony, leading a nervous racer around the course.

Back at the stables after the morning workouts, she sat on a log beside the wood fire and patted the brown head of Jack, her bird dog, while Biddy, her buff-colored cat, squirmed against her boots. The haze had lifted, the air came up bracing, yet mellow from the ravine. The smell of the camp fire mingled with the smell of the stable.

"Doesn't this work interfere with your social life?" she was asked.

"I haven't any social life," she replied promptly. She looked across to Shed Row where the blanketed race horses were being led in from the track. Even tired, they held heads imperiously, lifted their hoofs proudly.

"What other life would one want?" she asked.

White House Now Has Ten Sets of China

WITH THE purchase of a new 1,000-piece dinner set, the First Lady now has ten sets of dishes to choose from when she gives a party. The set ordered Monday will go into china closets alongside those bought by past mistresses of the White House.

The set ordered by Mrs. Lincoln has a rich crimson border with an eagle in the center. Mrs. Grant's selection has a buttercup border, showing that she departed from the usual custom of selecting a style suggestive of the National Government. There are ivory, gold and turquoise plates brought by Mrs. Cleveland. Mrs. Harrison, who was a particularly excellent judge of china, added one of the most beautiful sets to the collection. It has 44 stars in a blue border with a wreath of corn in gilt on the edge and the eagle and the United States coat of arms in the center.

The Theodore Roosevelt china is simple white and gold with the National emblem on each piece. That selected by the second Mrs. Wilson is much like it in appearance. The cut-glass pieces have the arms of the United States engraved on them.

Adult Ailments Traced To Early Experiences

Psychologist Says Divorce Never Can Be Avoided While Children Are Reared Exclusively by Mothers, Female Nurses and Feminine Teachers

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—Society will never avoid divorce until it does away with the exclusive rearing of children by mothers, female nurses and feminine teachers, David Seabury, noted psychologist and author, declares in his new book, "What Makes Us Seem So Queer?" just published by Whittlesey House. Many of the psychological ailments of adults have their origins in the experiences of childhood, Mr. Seabury points out, and the rearing of boys, in particular, by women has its effects in marital difficulties often long after the source of such masculine "kinks" and queernesses has been forgotten, he says.

"We shall never solve the question of marriage until at least half of the boy's early life is conditioned by his own sex," Mr. Seabury declares. "The average man must have as much masculine discipline and affection in his early life as he has of feminine discipline and affection, or we can not hope to have normal marital relations. The average marriage is ruined before a man reaches adolescence by the gynephobia stored in the depths of the masculine personality.

Stores Up Resentment.

"Gynephobia is common indeed and consists in a fear of woman. The average man was brought up by his mother, by women nurses, by women teachers. Fully 95 per cent of the discipline in his life has been administered by women. Thus he stores in his heart an unconscious feeling of resentment against being told by a woman what is right. Unconsciously he is ready to resist suggestions made either by his wife or by any other feminine adult. He has a feeling he must keep his manly prerogatives, must become dominant over those creatures who are forever telling him what to do."

Not all marital difficulties are the result of masculine conditioning, however, Mr. Seabury points out. Women also often have queernesses which are the result of social compulsion and childhood experiences, he says.

"One of the greatest causes of divorce in American life lies in the incapacity of many of our women to love fully and freely," Mr. Seabury declares. "Though the marriage relation may have been successfully consummated there is no psychic union as long as a feminist attitude is accented by a primary concern of woman for woman.

"Androphobia is far less common than gynephobia because the average girl is brought up by her mother, by women nurses and by women teachers. She has been told what is right and wrong by those of her own sex and has an unconscious feeling that members of the opposite sex will love and pamper her. Thus androphobia in women is of a much less disturbing nature and usually forms after adolescence. It is often of the feminist type, originating as a protest against the dominance of the male in the industrial and professional world."

Complexes Also Play Part.

Many other psychological kinks and queernesses affect the marital relation besides those specifically traceable to sex patterns, according to Mr. Seabury. For instance, he says, "The little girl who had a little curl that hung down on her forehead, who when she was good was very, very good and when she was bad was horrid, certainly had a dual personality. The chances are that when she grew up and fell in love her sweetheart was never quite sure when he came whether he would find the woman who was very, very good or the woman who was horrid. She must have appeared to him as two natures."

Inferiority and superiority complexes also play an important part, Mr. Seabury remarks. He points out that superiority feeling tends as a rule to run in familiar rather than in separate individuals. "We all know instances of inbred hauteur in America. Certain of the Adamses the Edwardses, the Beechers believe themselves appointed by God to be leaders of 'the people.' Some of them, if we can credit 'Saints, Sinners and Beechers,' believe themselves always right. Even if a Henry Ward should indulge in a little amative experimentation, his behavior was not as that of the vulgar."

Strictly Speaking

Try These.

1. Is it permissible to use "generally" and "usually" interchangeably?
2. Is viscera singular or plural?
3. What is the plural of Mussulman?
4. Is domicile called DOM-i-cile or DO-mi-cile, George-Arliss-fashion?

Check Answers Here.

1. No. "Generally" is used in reference to a whole body in distinction from an individual. "Usually" signifies according to use or custom. "Generally" is opposed to "occasionally," "usually" to "casually."
2. Plural. The singular is viscus.
3. Mussulmans, not Mussulmen.
4. DOM-i-cile in America. DO-mi-cile in England.

College Girls Show Interest In Government

COLLEGE girls for years considered courses in Government deadly dull. But now, due to gyrations of the New Deal, collegiennes rate those same courses as exciting as anything offered in the curriculum.

At least this is true at Barnard where Dr. Jane Perry Clark teaches American Government, constitutional law.

"Four years ago when I began teaching at Barnard there were only 12 majors in my classes," Dr. Clark said yesterday. "This year there are 60."

The young professor, a member of Raymond Moley's department at Columbia University, is now in Washington doing research for the committee on economic security. During her six weeks in Washington Prof. Moley is taking over her classes. When he was here she substituted for him at Columbia.

Many Want Federal Jobs.

Aside from an objective interest in the goings-on of present day Government, many of her students hope their courses will lead to Government jobs and appointments, Dr. Clark believes.

"After all, the Government is one of the richest sources of employment for women today," the Barnard professor said.

Her research for the committee on economic security is a continuation of work she had already begun for the council for research on social sciences. She is making a special study of the cooperative relations between the Federal and State governments in administration.

Uniform Laws Forecast.

The States, she believes, are gradually working toward more uniform legislation.

"Especially in regard to labor laws," Dr. Clark explained. "But there are some things more difficult to agree upon. Divorce, for instance. I think there will be uniform divorce laws some day, but not until it is possible to learn what the people really want. The answer, I suppose, lies somewhere between Nevada and South Carolina."

Up to the present time the only uniform laws adopted by all the States are two rather unimportant ones, according to Dr. Clark. These have to do with bills of lading and negotiable instruments.

University Receives Grant.

A grant of $20,000 for the study of sex has been made to the University of Chicago by the Rockefeller Foundation. This amount is in addition to the annual grant of $30,000 which the university has received from the foundation for the last five years.

Short Women Hail Clothes That Will Fit

Manufacturer Awakens to Long-Felt Need of Smaller Sizes.

By Grace Brown.

AFTER YEARS of curiosity as to just what a circus parade really looks like; after aeons of getting one's nose rubbed red and shiny on the rough shoulders of dance partners; after centuries of silently cursing ill-bred women who persist in keeping on their hats in theaters, in utter lack of sympathy for their less fortunate sisters in back of them; after all these years of such mistreatment, at last there gleams a ray of hope for the original and undiluted forgotten woman—the slender five-footer.

According to the papers, a dress manufacturer has amazingly waked up to the fact that not all size 12's and 14's are "misses" nigh on to 6 feet tall, nor are they "little women" weighing around 190 pounds. The rumor goes that this one benefactor, at least, is making dresses for real, honest-to-goodness short gals.

Too Good to Be True.

It seems dangerous to investigate further. It might not be true and the disappointment would truly be crushing. After aching hours, and hair-wisping days spent trying on dresses that loop around the waist and drag on the floor, giving the appearance of being borrowed from gramma; or else finding a little "number" in the junior-misses department that approximately fits, but making one look like an overgrown imitation of Shirley Temple, this innovation sounds like a little bit of heaven.

If it is true, a crusade should seriously be considered for the further aid of shorties. The first thing on the list should be an appeal to theater managers to revive the old-time "Please-remove-your-hats" flash on their screens. Of course, nothing can be done about the lovers who scrooch over close together so that all chances of seeing the stage is blocked for the person behind them. Even we love the lovers. But there "oughta be a law" against the hat-wearers.

With a little encouragement, this five-footer would petition the street cars to lengthen their crupper straps a little bit. Keeping one's balance is a serious matter anyway in some of these high-speed trolleys, and when standing on tiptoes and holding on to a strap with one hand—the other one occupied with a slippery pocketbook and a couple of skittish bundles—the situation becomes downright dangerous to lives and shins.

What About Chairs.

And why, oh, why, can't someone make dining room chairs closer to the floor? How many dangling pairs of feet have gone sound asleep during a long Sunday dinner? And an evening of bridge on these torturous seats would ruin the disposition of even a good-natured contract player—if there were such a thing. After a couple of hours of such an experience the other night, one long-suffering small victim offended her host mightily because in the depths of her despair and aching back she broke down and dragged over a nice low over-stuffed chair. Heaven only knows what he was saving it for.

Probably nothing can be done about the rosy nose blissfully acquired while dancing with the tall one-and-only, unless he can be persuaded to pooh-pooh Emily Post and remove his coat.

Soviet Seeks Beauty Advice

U. S. Beautician Drafted in Move to Improve Products.

By Frances Mangum.

AGAIN RUSSIA turns to America for technical advice. This time it is not about dams or bridges, but on lipstick, powder and rouge.

Along with the second general Five-Year Plan of the U. S. S. R. the Soviets have adapted a new Five-Year Plan of Beauty. It is their purpose not only to match the Western world industrially, but to catch up with America and Europe in making their women as beautiful as scientific efforts will permit. The first goal is to triple their output of cosmetics and bring them up to the standard of American products by 1937.

As a step toward fulfilling their ambition the Soviets have authorized Mme. Genouchina (in private life Mme. Molotov, wife of the premier of U. S. S. R.), presiding director of Tege, cosmetic trust of Russia, to invite an American beautician, Mme. Helena Rubenstein, to act in an advisory capacity on plans for improving the quality of the present Soviet products and adding a number of additional scientific lotions and creams.

In a recent interview Mme. Rubenstein said: "Russia's women, once noted for their striking Slavic beauty, are to be made attractive again after 15 years of cosmetic privation in behalf of the Proletarian State. Now that they have won equality of the sexes in moral standards, equal pay for equal achievement, and have branched out into all kinds of industry until more than one-third of the whole labor force of the Soviet Union is made up of women, they are turning more and more attention to personal appearance both in regard to clothes and make-up. It is because the faminine population of Russia is now eager to have American and French products available, Mme. Genouchina told me, that she has turned to me to outline a plan of considerable expansion for the future."

This BUSINESS of LIVING

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I am a single woman who has made a measure of success because of conservative investments and economical expenditures. I have brothers who, unfortunately, have lost heavily due to reckless investments, speculating, and other fool-hardy schemes.

• • • •

Being single, the impression seems to be that I do not need much to live on and should help my brothers because they have wives and children. Many are the hints and outright requests for help I have from them.

• • • •

I have my old age to prepare for, and no one to help me if I do not save for it. It does not seem fair that a young woman who has saved and denied herself for years should have to share with people who have always lived very extravagantly and never saved when they were making big salaries.

• • • •

After all, it seems to me the support and care of children should be up to the parents who brought them into the world, and that brothers should never ask a sister with her own bills to meet, to send them money.

• • • •

My father, before his death recently, told me never to lend money to anyone. I might add my brothers have never done anything for me. Instead, they have been a source of worry, as there is no congeniality between us. I have never approved of their speculations, or their waste of money.

• • • •

My father was much grieved and troubled over them before he died. He said he hoped I could influence them to be more careful in investments, but because they are older and men they have never listened to me. Bitter quarrels have resulted and I no longer care what they do with their money, but I have resolved not to lend them even a cent.

• • • •

CONSTANT READER.

Stick to Decision.

DEAR CONSTANT READER: In this case, I should probably do just as you have done: lend to the limit of my capacity and beyond until wisdom dearly and tardily bought forced me to the decision not to lend another penny.

And then I should stick to that decision, humane considerations permitting.

M. H.

Famous Chef Is to Preside At Silver Grill

Club Habana's Opening Set for Thanksgiving Day; Night-Spot Notes.

By Kay Ware.

Here's news of a chef. Marius Manon, of international fame, and formerly of Wardman Park Hotel kitchens, will supervise the Saturday night supper dancing at the Broadmoor's Silver Grill.

Chef Manon is one of the gayest, jolliest and most efficient people in his line. Keeps a journal, dating from boyhood—his apprenticeship, through the war, recipes he tried and invented, New Year's resolutions are all in it.

Should you meet him, get him to tell you about his war experiences—the bar that was 2 miles long, the time the grasshopper jumped on his head and he thought it was a bit of shell; how, on the boat going over, he pretended he couldn't cook, then raided the ship's icebox.

Club Habana's opening is Thanksgiving Day. Its life begins with dinner at 8 . . . dancing to Moe Baer's music . . . songs by Jolly, red-haired Clevelander. Plus Latin American atmosphere, packer with warmth and glamor.

Shoreham goes Spanish this week, mainly because of Carmencita and Rigo, dance team direct from Alhambra Theater in Seville. They present a number of acts in native costume, including "La Cuccarracha" dance, a cape dance and a tango.

Theo Alban, tenor is a radio star, familiar for his theme song, "Happy Days Are Here Again," and is included in the bill. Sings his "Happy Days" song.

Nina Whitney, ballerina of Radio City Music Hall, dances. Barney and orchestra serve as a background for your own terpsichorean efforts.

That orchestra singer, Russ Cullen deserves a mention, and a big one. Have you heard his and the orchestra's arrangement of "Lonesome Road?"

Tiny, in the lounge, keeps them howling. Stuff like this between numbers. Tiny says, "Any song you wish. I've a list of over a hundred."

Patron says, "How about number 47?"

Tiny looks over list, glances at ladies in the party, and shakes his head. He grins, "Uh-ah-er-, well, let me sing number 37. Is that all right?"

Ask him for "My Canery Has Circles Under His Eyes."

Last minute Shoreham news: Beginning Friday, the Cocktail lounge will present Da Costa's tango orchestra, from 4:30 to 6:30. South American music is getting a hold on these United States, and with all the diplomats in town, we should see many a graceful tango dancer on the floor.

Waldorf, in New York, has tried this tango orchestra idea, and it worked well.

Club Michel adds three new stars to its floor show: Vera Volkner, whose dances are exotic, and a team, Peyton and Parks, two girls who show you what "Harlemania" is.

Frank McCormick, Ruth Kidd and Esther and Hazelton complete the bill with introductions, songs and dances, respectively.

Also, Henry Anderson has become the maitre d'hotel. Mr. Anderson is formally of Stockholm's Grand Hotel, the Club Boca Raton, in Florida; the Old Plaza in New York, and our local Carlton and Mayflower.

The Chantecler cocktail lounge is offering a series of radio stars in personal appearances. First of these will be John Shevlin, the "Romantic Tenor of the Air."

The Thursday Night Club is putting on a series of five dances at the Sulgrave Club. These will be on the following nights: November 22, 29, December 6, 13 and 20, from 10 p. m. to 2 a. m.

Lotus believes in having its revues hand picked. The management makes a special trip to New York for the picking. Beverly and Ravel, dance team, late of Kelley's Night Club in Greenwich Village, have been working with Paramount. A sister team, Mabelle and Corinne, are amusing. There's a host of other features including the Capitolians, Bill Strickland and charming Judy Ellingon.

La Paree offers the Winter Garden Revue of 26 entertainers. There's a great deal of fuss and feathers, both in the Indian adagio number, the fan dances by Kittie Wagner and chorus. Babe Duryea does a contortion number, and if you like, them hair-raising, you'll like her dances.

Russel O'Friel, taps and bounces through acrobatics.

This program is a first anniversary one.

More Spanish. The town's overrun with it. This time Heigh-Ho offers Enrico and Chula with a tango and startling bolero. Archie Hawk begins his third week with his slightly insane tap routines.

The newest trio is picked from the orchestra. It consists of Marty Rubin, playing bass and singing; Rutt Hawn and violin; Jimmy Harris and melodious guitar. Effect smooth and soft.

Be sure to hear their "Show Boat" selections. These three are so convincing that patrons dance to their music, as they do to entire orchestras.

When Madrillon comes, can Spain be far behind? A rather unusual night club performer is there this week. She is Maia Duncan, niece of the famous Isadora. She and her partner, Waldo de Castro, do the malaguena and other Spanish numbers to the music of the famous composer, Ernesto Lecouna. Particularly good is their interpretation of his "Suite Espagnole."

Julie Gilbert, French-Spanish dancer, pictures Castilian traditional steps with her agile feet. The Carolina Tar Heels (begging the pardon of the three Southern accents), play any tune you wish.

The Minister from Denmark, Otto Wadsted, and H. F. Kaarsberg, of Copenhagen, were seen the other afternoon in the Mayflower lounge. Mr. Kaarsberg was describing the various night-life spots of his home town to Mr. Wadsted and an interested group of listeners. According to him, the lounge truly typifies the Continental rendezvous. Although he says there are no crooners in Denmark.

Other well-known folks at the lounge: Lady Thornton, widow of Sir Henry Thronton, president of the Canadian National Railways; Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Buchanan, of Warrenton, early luncheon guests who dashed off to the Bowie races, and Maxwell K. Moorehead, U. S. Consul to Johannesburg, South Africa, with his charming wife.

The public is developing classical tastes. For instance, the other night Club Troika's Matt Windsor offered to play any request number.

Came a voice from the back of the room, "Let's have Rachmaninoff's Prelude in G Minor."

Lights were turned low. A spot circled the piano, and Troika might have been Carnegie Hall. After he had finished, the club was a night club again, but the guests liked it.

Troika has several orchestra members who play with the National Symphony.

By the way, there's news floating around about a new Russian restaurant to be opened. It'll be near upper Connecticut avenue, and will be called the "Russian Bear."

Program at Casa Rita: Jimmy Santmeyer and orchestra, blonde Libby Rowland, Sammy Richardson, of Boston, with a pleasing voice; Col. Joe Wubbold, of Kentucky, with another pleasing voice. Add to this midnight waffles and a smooth dance floor.

Cotton Club has two floor shows every night. If you like the first, stay for the second and by that time you'll like it better. Amy Spencer's fan dance is worth a special trip.

Randle Gardens, east of Pennsylvania Avenue Bridge, has been remodeled. Ridgeley's Hollywood Serenaders entertain. Dancing 9 to 2.

If a motorist runs into difficulties on the Seventh street pike tonight, help should be readily at hand. Whether it is tire trouble, the familiar "OOG" (out of gas) or some other motoring ill, just call Brooks Johns' Barn.

Operators of the scores of AAA garages will be at the Old Barn for a get-together, including about ninety owners and managers of official AAA garages in the District of Columbia and vicinity.

Fight Likely For Position In Maryland

Judge Will Reach Age of Retirement Next Spring.

Cumberland, Md., Nov. 20 (Spl.). The appointment of an associate judge of the Fourth Judicial Circuit when Judge Albert A. Doub retires next spring because of the age limit, is expected to evolve an interesting situation.

Governor-elect Nice will make the appointment and the appointee will serve over three years, or until the next general election when his successor will be chosen. The situation is interesting because David A. Robb, one of the oldest practioners and an original Nice man, may become an aspirant. Mr. Robb was his party's nominee for attorney general four years ago. He has served as State's Attorney and State Senator.

The four most prominently mentioned for the place are State's Attorney William A. Huster, former State Senator William A. Gunter, former Mayor George Henderson and Horace P. Whitworth, who sought the nomination when Judge Doub was his party's choice.

Robb May Enter Race.

Col. Henderson was on the H. Webster Smith ticket in the primary for attorney general, but he obtained the nomination without opposition. It is said that Mr. Robb would enter the race in the event that Col. Henderson would be a serious contender. They have been at political loggerheads for some time and in municipal politics the antagonism has been recognized as most pronounced.

The politicians have been counting up the worth-while jobs in Allegany County that will be filled under the Nice administration, and they number some 60.

It is said that C. Nice Wilkinson, city collector, who led the Nice fight in the primary and at the election, would prefer a job in Baltimore to any local place that might be offered. He is said to have his eye on the chairmanship of the State roads commission.

County Coronership.

Quite a number are after the county coronership, which pays $75 a month. Robert B. Kimble, Senator-elect, sought to abolish the job when he was a member of the House of Delegates two years ago. He said its work could be handled through the health department. Charles W. Donnelly, local newspaperman, has announced that he is an applicant.

Among the appointments to be made are judge of the juvenile court, matron of the juvenile court, two judges of the People's Court in Cumberland and two in Frostburg, magistrates at Westernport, Lonaconing and other populous centers, a number of deputy and forest wardens who are on pay, places under the district road engineer, members of the county board of education, who will name the superintendent of schools, assistant superintendent, attendance officer and other officials, members of the board of election supervisors, who will name the attorney, clerk and messenger, all jobs paying well, considering the little time.

Several young Republican lawyers who were active in the campaign would be People's Court magistrates. These posts in Cumberland pay $3,600 a year. Julius E. Schindler, Morris Baron, William A. Vandergrift and Paul M. Fletcher are prominently mentioned.

Harvey Elected Leader Of Democrats' Group

Cumberland, Md., Nov. 20 (Spl.). With more than 100 members in attendance, Patrick D. Harvey, representative of the Baltimore and Ohio shop crafts, was elected president of the Democratic Cosmopolitan Club last night, to serve for one year. He succeeds Patrick J. Stakem.

Other officers chosen are: George Dressman, LaVale, first vice president; DeSales Maher, Vale Summit, second vice president; Edgar A. Dahsiell, treasurer, and Raymond H. Morenean, secretary. The executive board includes Earle A. Cobey, Frostburg, chairman; Edward R. Neff, Thomas E. Stakem, Odith M. Brotemarkle and Patrick J. Stakem. Henry J. Betz is sergeant at arms. The board of governors will be named December 16 when there will be a social session.

No Bids Received For County Bonds

Anne Arundel Stumped for Needed $18,000.

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 20 (Spl.).—Anne Arundel County Commissioners today found themselves stumped in their efforts to float an issue of $18,000, 5 per cent 15-year bonds, to provide funds for erosion construction work at Fair Haven in the southern Tidewater section. Not a bid for the loan was received.

Similar bonds were sold during the last few months, however, to provide for other areas.

The contract for the Fair Haven work was awarded two months ago but was dependent upon the loan.

Harry Goodwin, Post Staff Photographer.

Senior members of the home economics class of Hood College, Frederick, Md., residing in Strawn cottage, have "adopted" their fifth baby in as many years for the cottage. The new baby is Kenneth "Strawn," who was secured from a Washington home on November 10. The home economics students have complete charge of the baby and Kenneth is reported as rapidly becoming adjusted to his many "mothers." The child is 5½ months old, weighs 13½ pounds, has dark hair and eyes and a very cheerful smile. Assisting the girls with the child is Miss Onica Prall, assistant professor of home economics at Hood. Keenest interest in the child is reported taken by the Hood students. At the left Miss Betty Storm is seen feeding Kenneth, while (center photo) the infant cheerfully smiles while the attention of Misses Jean Scott, left, and Eleanor Coddington are centered upon him. Kenneth maintains a serious contenance as Miss Betty Bruce finishes dressing him for the day.

Agents Strive To "Get" Heads Of Liquor Ring

Harrisonburg, Va., Nov. 20 (Spl.). Government agents investigating the Franklin County whiskey conspiracy hope to obtain indictments against the "top" figures in the alleged ring, inferring that the moonshiners and the liquor runners already have paid their price, it was hinted here today as the United States Grand Jury continued its inquiry in Western District Court.

During the 14 months of the investigation in the vicinity of Rocky Mount and throughout Franklin and the adjacent counties of Henry and Floyd, the Federal agents gained the confidence of the mountain residents, who are willing to tell all they know about the conspiracy.

All of those entering the grand jury room sign waivers of immunity.

Federal agents say the Franklin county liquor ring was highly organized. They assert that transactions entered into the field of big business" and that the moonshiners had to purchase supplies from certain sources.

The agents found that the illicit operators paid a set fee to be allowed to make liquor and dispose of it. Each moonshiner was limited in his production and if he exceeded his quota he was punished.

Gov. Ritchie in Bed From Grippe Attack

Annapolis, Nov. 20 (AP).—Suffering from a slight attack of grippe, Gov. Albert C. Ritchie rested in bed at the executive mansion today. He hoped to be able to keep an engagement in Baltimore tonight.

The Governor, who is under the care of his physician, Dr. J. J. Murphy, remained in bed yesterday, but got up for dinner last night. He was resting today dictating answers to correspondence to a secretary at his bedside.

Fire Destroys Barn Near Middletown, Md.

Middletown, Md., Nov. 20 (Spl.). A large barn and wagon shed on Harvey R. Grossnickle's farm, near Ellerton, were destroyed by fire of unknown origin today with a loss of more than $3,000. Farm machinery, 225 bushels of wheat and barley and a large quantity of lumber were lost.

Several nearby buildings were saved by the Middletown and Myersville Volunteer Fire Company. The blaze was discovered by Mr. Grossnickle who rescued a horse from the blazing barn.

Along the Tri-State Trail

With

C. B. Carr

Post State Editor.

Who's the youngest great-grandmother? Who's the youngest great-grandfather?

It seems the matter was first agitated off the trail November 9, when Mr. and Mrs. Charles J. Mosso, of West Warren, Mass., declared themselves to be the youngest great-grandparents in the United States. Mr. and Mrs. Mosso gave their ages as 62 years.

On November 17, H. B. Jones, of Hagerstown, came forth with the statement that Mrs. Mosso might be the youngest great-grandmother but he (Jones) was the youngest great-grandfather. Jones said his age was 60 years when he became a great-grandfather.

Now new claimants for the double great-grandparent honor are heard from. This time, Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Keyton, of Martinsburg, W. Va., declare they are the youngest great-grandparents in the United States Mr. Keyton said he was a great-grandfather at 55 and Mrs. Keyton a great-grandmother at 51.

Come on, folks—let's find some younger great-grandparents.

When Charles Dana, of the New York Sun, said years ago that when a man bites a dog, that's news, he had nothing to say which might fit this story from Fredericksburg.

According to officials there, a letter has been received by Lancaster County officials requesting information on a dog, the license of which was found recently in the stomach of a steer. The license bears the date 1924. The writer of the letter was anxious to know if the dog had been a small one, as in such an event he could conclude that the steer had swallowed the dog.

And regarding the Thanksgiving-Christmas turkeys of which we have frequently written in this column, please note the Associated Press dispatch from Chestertown, Md.: The reduced price of turkeys on city markets, the increased price of feed and the poor condition of flocks in this vicinity indicate a reduced income for Maryland producers, according to Mrs. Harry T. Williams, of Kent County, president of the Maryland Turkey Growers Association.

While the wholesale price of live turkeys stands at about 23 cents a pound, feed prices have advanced 60 to 80 per cent, Mrs. Williams said. The retail price of feed corn, in some instances, has gone to $1 a bushel.

Debt-Free Stratford Seen by Next Autumn

Series of Events Throughout Country Will Be Given to Raise Funds to Clear Off Remaining Mortgage.

Richmond, Va., Nov. 20 (Spl.).—Stratford, Westmoreland County, colonial home that was the birthplace of three of the Nation's outstanding figures, two of them signers of the Declaration of Independence, will become a debt-free public shrine before October 12, 1935, the Robert E. Lee Memorial Foundation, Inc., owners of the property, announced today.

The foundation, which paid $240,000 for the property, has set October 12 for the dedication of the shrine and during the next few months will complete raising the fund for its purchase.

Richard Henry Lee, who introduced the Declaration of Independence into the Continental Congress; Francis Lightfoot Lee, another signer of the historic document, and Gen. Robert Edward Lee, the Confederate leader and most beloved figure of the Civil War period in the South, were born at Stratford.

The Robert E. Lee Memorial Foundation purchased Stratford from private owners in 1929 with contributions from individuals and historic and patriotic bodies in the States of Connecticut, Tennessee, Kentucky, Virginia, New York, Pennsylvania, Georgia, South Carlina, New Hampshire, Delaware, Arkansas, California, West Virginia, Louisiana, Alabama, Mississippi, Ohio, North Carolina, Florida, Maryland, Texas, Wyoming, Illinois, Missouri, Kansas, Colorado, the District of Columbia, and England and Belgium.

Mortgage Is Paid.

When, in 1932, a balance of $115,000 was due on the property, an individual whose identity has not been made public advanced this sum as a loan to pay the mortgage.

Mrs. Charles D. Lanier, president of the foundation, stated that organizations in 32 States will unite in sponsoring a series of events for the benefit of Stratford during the next few months and that success of the movement is considered assured.

"The United Daughters of the Confederacy have pledged $50,000 toward the repayment of this advance in addition to the sum they are contributing for the restoration and furnishing of the room in which Gen. Lee was born," Mrs. Lanier revealed today.

"Mrs. William Cabell Bruce, of Maryland is chairman of the special fund committee which is receiving subscriptions for this purpose." Other members of the committee are Mrs. H. Snowden Marshall, of New York City; Mrs. Pope Yeatman, of Philadelphia, and Mrs. Granville G. Valentine, of Richmond.

Celebration Planned.

The Foundation plans to make the Stratford plantation self-sustaining.

A celebration is planned for the dedication, and Mrs. Orton Bishop Brown, of New Hampshire, is chairman of a committee to arrange the program. Other members include Mrs. Walter D. Lamar, of Macon, Ga.; Mrs. Ambrose C. Ford, of Clifton Forge; Mrs. William H. Fain, of Greenwich, Conn., and Mrs. David Roberts, of Birmingham.

Concerning this program only the following has as yet been announced: Members of President Roosevelt's Cabinet, the Senate and House, and the Governors of the States are to be invited. Invitations also will be issued to chiefs of mission of those foreign countries with which the Lees of Stratford were associated a century or more ago in patriotic service for America.

Grand Jury Sits At Chambersburg

Chambersburg, Pa., Nov. 20 (Spl.).—The grand jury for the December term in Franklin County began work yesterday considering 14 bills of indictment presented by District Attorney J. Glenn Benedict.

Judge Watson R. Davison instructed the jury that it would not be necessary for it to inspect the public buildings as the October jury had made an inspection.

Appointment of John W. Rowe, Blue Rock, as constable in Quincy Township, to fill the unexpired term of John R. Miller, who removed from the township, was announced.

Maryland State Briefs

Cumberland.—In an effort to prevent further accidents at the Braddock road crossing of the Cumberland-Pennsylvania Railroad cross near here, General Manager William Claus has issued an order that trains going in either direction are to stop and their crews send out flagmen to warn motorists at the crossing.

Leonardtown.—Capt. Thomas Trott, of Palmers, Md., has established what residents believe is almost a new, all-time fishing record here. Capt. Trott, with a friend, trolled a catch of 108 fish, weighing from 2 to 15 pounds near Tall Timbers.

Princess Anne.—Christmas savings clubs checks, for 1933, have been mailed from the Bank of Somerset here. The bank was reorganized and opened again last week for the first time since the banking holiday. The checks which were due last Christmas had been tied up with the bank's desopits.

Salisbury—A meeting of the Tri-County Teacher's Association will be held here November 23. Dr. W. H. Kilpatrick, of Columbia University, will speak on "Modern Education Trends in Relation to Parents and the Home." Auxiliary members of the Somerset County Teachers Association have been invited.

Baltimore—Harry D. Williar, jr., chief engineer of the State Roads Commission, announced that the commission needs only the approval of H. G. Shirley, highways commissioner of Virginia, before asking bids on the repair work to be done on the Point of Rocks bridge, near Brunswick, Md. The bridge structure is to be strengthened in addition to other repairs, Williar said.

Princess Anne—Plans for an anniversary banquet for the Princess Anne Volunteer Fire Department are being completed under the direction of Chief R. M. Carey. Historical data on the company, which was organized in 1814, is being prepared by Chief Carey in preparation for the banquet. No date has yet been set for the event.

West Virginia May Continue Its Sales Tax

Canvass Indicates Measure Will Be Extended for 2 Years.

Clarksburg, W. Va., Nov. 20 (Spl.).—Continuation for another year of the West Virginia State consumers' sales tax of 2 per cent is indicated by a canvass just made of newly elected legislators and State administration leaders.

The tax was originally enacted to expire June 30 next, but it is understood that it will be reenacted with little or no changes at the approaching session of the Legislature, which meets early in January. The tax is yielding between $7,000,000 and $8,000,000 a year. The chief purpose of its enactment was to provide funds for relief and it was declared to be an emergency measure, but supporters point out that the emergency continues and the tax will have to be imposed until the relief obligation ends.

It is pointed out for one thing that the chief opponents of the measure in the last legislative session will not be there at the coming session. Rush D. Holt, who, as a member of the House of Delegates led the fight against it in that chamber, has been elected United States Senator. Senator A. C. Herold, of Braxton County, a leading opponent in the Senate, failed of reelection. Delegate A. J. Lubliner, of Mercer, another leading opponent, did not seek reelection, and Delegate George G. Dixon, of Mineral, another opponent, sought election in the Senate and was defeated.

On the other hand, it is pointed out that many of the chief supporters of the tax will again uphold it in the new session by reason of being reelected or holding over. Included is Senator Charles E. Hodges, of Morgantown, an outstanding Progressive, who is widely mentioned for election to the Senate presidency.

Girls' Killer Now Admits All Charges

Special Court Session to Be Called to Try Philip Jones.

Richmond, Va., Nov. 20 (AP). Sheriff T. Wilson Seay of Henrico County today told of a new statement made to him by Philip Jones, Negro, in which he said Jones had admitted ravishing 13-year-old Alice Hill as well as killing Alice and her 9-year-old sister, Ellen, near their Clifton Forge home.

Jones and three other Negroes arrested after the girls' bodies were found yesterday morning were brought to the Henrico County Jail last night and there he was quoted as having admitted the slayings, but denying the attack, which the Clifton Forge coroner said had been committed upon the older girl.

Today, Sheriff Seay said, Jones was urged to tell the whole truth since he could not make his case any worse than it was.

"Yes, sir, I reckon you're right," the sheriff quoted him as saying. "I was not telling the truth when I said I did not ravish the little girl. I did. When I saw what I had done I killed her and the other one so they wouldn't tell."

Again Jones expressed sorrow for what he had done and asserted "the devil must have been in me," the sheriff said.

Town Mourns at Funeral.

Clifton Forge, Va., Nov. 20 (AP).—Mourning citizens, probably including some whose anger last night led them to burn the cabin home of Philip Jones, colored, rode somberly today to the funeral of the two little white girls whom officers say, Jones has admitted slaying.

Floral offerings filled several automobiles and were banked high over the single casket which held the battered bodies of Alice, 13, and Ellen, 9, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Hill.

The services were conducted in the cemetery here by the Rev. Wirt L. Davis, pastor of the local Baptist Church. The father of the children, whose bodies were found by a searching party yesterday morning in a gully near the Jones cabin, was too ill to attend the funeral, but others of the family, which includes ten living children, were present.

Crowds which last night milled about town, threatening the jail here and talking of going after Jones when it was learned he had been taken to another city, had scattered this morning and all was quiet today as county officers moved to try Jones promptly.

Yesterday afternoon Jones was reported to have confessed in Roanoke to the double slaying, although denying he had first ravished the older girl. Last night he was reported as having confessed again at the Henrico County Jail in Richmond, to which he had been taken as an added safety measure.

Jones' Story Doubted.

Commonwealth's Attorney C. C. Collins, of Alleghany County, said today his office was not yet convinced of the entire truth of Jones' confessions, and that an investigation would be made.

Club Issues Condition Books For Charles Town Race Meet

Charles Town, W. Va., Nov. 20 (Spl.).—Condition books governing racing at the Charles Town Jockey Club plant, December 1 through December 15, are being issued by Albert J. Boyles, president of the track association.

From all indications, stalls will be at a premium. However, there will be considerable space available for the overflow in Berryville, Va., 12 miles away. Applications for stalls to date are in excess of 900 and about 500 horses are stabled at the track.

Edward J. Brennan, of Baltimore, has been selected by State Secretary of Agriculture McLaughlin to act as steward representing West Virginia.

Stewards, K. N. Gilpin, H. C. Lipscomb and Mr. Brennan; assistant steward at start, Harry B. Langdon; judges, William Watkins, Frank J. Brooke and Pat C. Gallinger; starter, George P. Palmer; handicapper, R. McAuliffe; clerk of scales, William Doyle; paddock judge, William Daly; patrol judges, William Doyle and William Daly; racing secretary, Pat C. Galliger; clerk of course, C. M. B. Brown; track physician, G. P. Morison; track superintendent and timer, Charles Feltner, and veterinarian, Dr. Harry B. Langdon.

"CARAVAN." Fox picturization of a story by Melchior Lengyel, adapted to the screen by Samson Raphaelson, with music by Ernest Werener Heymann, featuring Loretta Young, Charles Boyer, Jean Parker, Louise Fazenda, Phillips Holmes and Dudley Digges, with C. Aubrey Smith, Eugene Pallette, Charles Grapewin, Richard Carle, Noah Beery, Lionel Belmore, Billy Bevan and Armand Kalicz. Directed by Erik Charell. Reviewed Tuesday morning.

By Nelson B. Bell.

Here is romantic Hungarian operetta in the best Viennese manner—although I believe the city most frequently referred to is Budapest!

The point is, however, that in this colorful, fast-moving and tuneful work are those sterling qualities of preeminent opera bouffe that will exert an irresistible appeal to all who ever thrilled to the gay measures and spirited action of the best of the continental operettas concocted, say, by Emmerich Kalman, Franz Lehar or perhaps, even the Strausses.

The rousing Hungarian songs and ensembles, at times, may be a little too long for best effect and some of the scenes of gypsy revelry in the palace of the lady of high birth their leader has married, under circumstances of some impetuosity, continued practically to the point of satiation, but in point of pictorial beauty, vivacity, atmospheric charm, expert character delineation and delightful music, "Caravan" is all and more than the advance notices have claimed for it.

Picturesque Time and Place.

The locale of the story is Hungary and the time of the action the season of the grape harvest. An heiress to a great estate returns to her ancestral home after 14 years, on the eve of her twenty-first birthday and the ostensible acquisition of her inheritance. But a crafty uncle and a wily magistrate have contrived a scheme whereby the Countess Wilma will inherit nothing unless married that day—and to the uncle's profligate son, Lieut. von Tokay. To thwart this conspiracy, the resourceful young countess summons a gypsy orchestra leader from the vineyards on the spot.

What follows is the usual cinema-opera disentangling of an awkward situation for all concerned. This is accomplished to the tune of much gypsy jealousy, the frenzy of much gypsy music and a final tempestuous renunciation that restores the gypsy to the girl who really loves him, Countess Wilma to Lieut. von Tokay and precipitates a final celebration of the huge abundance of the grape harvest.

Distinctly Foreign in Tone.

The whole tenor of this picture is foreign in concept, execution and atmosphere. That is the sole circumstance of which I can think that might militate against its unequivocal success on the American screen. Whether modern cinema tastes hark back to the days of Kalman and Lehar remains to be seen, for, I repeat, this subject is completely in their mood.

In the role of the gypsy violinist, who marries the lady high above his station, Charles Boyer brings to the American screen a personality and a method that are distinctly apart from the endowments of the usual leading man. He obviously does not actualy play the violin when he pretends to—any more than some, who appear to, actually do their own singing—but he does act with a quiet repression and a palpable understanding of what it is all about that are extremely agreeable. This is all the more to his credit since his role, in certain of its aspects, is not too pleasant.

Loretta Young, the Countess Wilma, has never appeared more lovely or entered into the spirit of a part with more convincing naturalness than in her present assignment.

Juvenile Carmen Does Well.

Jean Parker some will think miscast as the fiery little gypsy rival whose lover marries the countess, but her work, in the main, is so ingenuous and utterly free from the taint of theatricalism that one finds it easily possible to overlook the fact that she is not a born Carmen. Phillips Holmes, as Von Tokay, so far outstrips anything that he has done recently that there is no comparison.

For the first time in many months, Louise Fazenda has been given a comedy role with some comedy in it and nice duties also have been intrusted to Eugene Pallette, Richard Carle, C. Aubrey Smith, Charles Grapewin and a majority of the others whose names appear in the small-type paragraph preceding these hurried observations.

Scenically, photographically, and in the matter of costumes, "Caravan" is a masterpiece of pictorial splendor. It is big and, aside from its occasional redundances, excellently directed.

The Pathe News, visualizing the important events of the week, and an "Oswald, the Rabbit," cartoon comedy "Spring on the Park," are the only supplementaries of a feature of sufficient worth not to need any at all.

So enthusiastic has been the acclaim of Burton Holmes' travel talk on "Soviet Russia," delivered in the National Theater last Sunday afternoon, at the first of a series of five similar illustrated lectures, that, pursuant to the reiterated suggestion of this department in Monday's column and review, it is to be repeated. Instead of waiting until the close of the regular series, as was done two seasons ago with his "Hollywood" subject, Mr. Holmes will deliver "Soviet Russia" for the second time on Sunday, December 2, immediately following next Sunday's visit to "London and Rural England." Last Sunday afternoon, "Soviet Russia" was sold out. It deserves no less upon the occasion of its second presentation.

A New One Coming.

Mr. Howard S. Benedict, handsome and happy harbinger of the Max Gordon productions, took time out to drop by the desk yesterday afternoon to say that "Gather Ye Rosebuds" will be the attraction at the National Theater the week of Monday, December 3, following the Theater Guild's presentation of Maxwell Anderson's new play of "Valley Forge," featuring Philip Merivale and Ruth Weston.

"Gather Ye Rosebuds" is the new comedy by Sidney Howard and Robert Littell, in which Walter Conolly returns to the stage, after a long tour of duty in the films, to costar with Ernest Truex, supported by Sally Bates, who hasn't been seen here a great deal since she appeared with "Up Pops the Devil," with Roger Pryor, at the Belasco; Margaret Dale, Eduardo Cianelli, Frederick Perry, Nicholas Suossanin and numerous others.

Named and Renamed.

This is the play, it will be recalled, that has been undergoing such rapid title changes. It was called first by its present name of "Gather Ye Rosebuds," then was renamed "They Went to Sea in a Sieve" and now has been restored to its original designation.

In view of the extraordinary parade of successes Max Gordon has put out this season—"Dodsworth," "The Great Waltz," "The Farmer Takes a Wife" and the rest—"Gather Ye Rosebuds" will be awaited with keen eagerness by judicious showshoppers.

So will the next visit of Mr. Benedict by the dramatic desks. He has been a good omen so far this season.

Although little enough has been said about it, Alan Rogers, one of the most popular masters of ceremonies at Loew's Palace in the old days when stage presentations were the rule at the corner of Thirteenth and F, has a part in "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch," the current screen feature. In fact, Mr. Rogers, a tenor of unusual beauty and range of voice, played three engagements as m. c. at the Palace—the first for a period of two and a half months, then a two-month appearance, beginning in November, 1930, and finally one week in 1931. He was probably the blondest blond of the male gender that ever stepped onto the Palace rostrum. And a swell fellow.

As an early week treat, incidentally, Manager Angie Ratto of the Palace entertained a group of orphans from the St. John's Orphanage in order that they might enjoy the homely humor of the Alice Hegan Rice perennial.

Skepticism Note.

So this is the coldest winter we have had in years, eh?

Boy, another ice cream cone and a flagon of ice water—and how I hate 'em

Stars Coming to Friday's Screens

Bryant's Talk On Holy Land Draws Throng

'S. R. O.' Sign Hung Out at Post's Fifth Lecture of Series.

The "standing room only" sign was posted on the doors of the Masonic Auditorium last night as Fitch C. Bryant, traveler, lecturer and cruise director, delivered the fifth of the 1934-35 series of Washington Post travel lectures, "Palestine, Background of Religion."

Featuring films showing the process of rehabilitating thousands of Jews in Palestine through the Jewish National Fund, Mr. Fitch took his hearers on a tour of the Holy Land, showing many scenes in Jerusalem, Bethlehem, along the historic sea coast and in the desolate region of the Dead Sea. Interesting colored slides enabled the audience to gain much from this lecture.

The films of rehabilitation work in the colonies established through the Jewish Fund were exceptionally interesting and revealed how modern machinery, modern power developments and modern building programs are doing much to make this region one of the most up-to-date colonies in the world. Scores of interesting views of farms on this project were shown.

The next lecture in The Post series, "Bermuda, Treasure Isle," will be delivered Tuesday evening, November 27, at the auditorium, Thirteenth and New York avenue. Tickets may be obtained from The Post business office or at the auditorium on the evening of the lecture.

New White House China To Cost U. S. $9,301

The new dishes ordered for the White House are costing the Government a little more than $9 apiece, the Associated Press says.

The contract price for the 1,000-piece set of ivory American china, trimmed in gold and blue and bearing the Presidential coat of arms, was $9,301.20.

The Federal Diary

(Trade-Mark Applied For.)

By Morgan Baker.

AID from the White House will be sought Friday night at a mass meeting of Census Bureau employes who have been, or who soon will be, dismissed because of completion of their projects, but who are now barred from any of the 1,800 positions in the Washington staff in the 1935 Census of Agriculture.

BAKER.

While these positions are not permanent Civil Service jobs, those eligible for appointment must have Civil Service status. This excludes several hundred trained workers who have been employed on the Census of American Business. Many of these workers have good records, but under present law have no opportunity of obtaining the necessary Civil Service ratings.

According to labor leaders and Government officials, the only means for this group to become eligible for appointment is through an Executive order.

Commerce Lodge, No. 9, American Federation of Government Employes, is sponsoring the mass meeting Firday night to obtain support for a petition to forward to the President for an executive order. The meeting will begin at 8 p. m. at the Thomson Community Center.

Census Director William L. Austin recently expressed a desire to keep the bulk of temporary employes, but pointed out that his hands are tied by the Civil Service laws. Mr. Austin has been seeking additional emergency work from various emergency agencies and established departments, but without success. With the trained staff and all necessary office equipment and space, Mr. Austin has emphasized, he is in a position to save the Government money in handling emergency work.

E. Claude Babcock, AFGE president, and Col. Charles I. Steagle, executive assistant, are scheduled to speak. All Federal employes are invited.

Public Health Benefit.

The Public Health Service Relief Association will present a benefit performance at Pierce Hall tonight at 8:30 p. m., consisting of an "Amateur Revue," an original two-act melodrama, "The Boys in the Backroom"; a "Floradora Sextette," and a Hula Hula dance number.

R. H. Harlow is president of the association, and Mrs. Marjorie J. McCeney, (P), is chairman of the entertainment committee in charge of the show.

Large Attendance Expected.

A large attendance is expected at the Veterans Administration Lodge, No. 17, AFGE, meeting tomorrow night at the Ambassador Hotel, Emmett R. Carroll, president, says. Prominent on the evening's program will be a discussion of the Government Employes Sick Benefit Association, of which Mrs. Maude Anderson (P), Internal Revenue, is president. Plans will be made for an organization meeting soon.

FEDERAL ALCOHOL CONTROL ADMINISTRATION has completed its move from the Transportation Building into the handsome new Department of Justice Building without a casualty. Except for rearrangement of telephone and lighting connections, the FACA is functioning normally.

Entrance to the new quarters is through the northwest corner of the building. The FACA hearing room, No. 1756, is on the first floor, close to this entrance. Its offices are on the second floor, in the 2100 series, which run west along Pennsylvania avenue corridor; in the 2200 series, which run along the south corridor next to the large court, and in the 2700 series, which run north along the Tenth street corridor. The information room is 2125.

Telephones will continue to be National 6400, which is on the Treasury switchboard.

HOLC Promotions Listed.

Home Owners Loan Corporation announce the promotion of C. Scott Noble to regional manager of the Memphis regional office, organization of which is now in process.

Mr. Noble formerly served in the corporation as special representative in the wholesale department and more recently as State manager of North Carolina. He has a background of 20 years in real estate and mortgage financing.

T. C. Abernathy, of Cherryville, N. C., has been appointed State manager of North Carolina, succeeding Mr. Noble, and will assume his new duties immediately.

In line with the board's policy of selecting the regional personnel from among the trained employes of the corporation, Basil Stockbridge, formerly a special representative, has been appointed assistant regional manager at Memphis. Anselm J. McLaurin, of Jackson, Miss., State counsel for Mississippi, has been promoted to Memphis regional counsel.

Several Positions Open.

Examinations for several positions in Department of Labor with salaries ranging from $2,600 to $4,600 a year are announced by Civil Service Commission, as follows:

Senior social economist, $4,600; social economist, $3,800; associate social economist, $3,200; assistant social economist, $2,600 a year. All are for service in the Children's Bureau, Labor. The closing date is December 13. The salaries are subject to the statutory deductions.

The entertainment committee of Treasury Local, No. 262, National Federation of Federal Employes, will meet tonight at 710 Fourteenth street northwest with Mrs. Sue Inge, chairman.

Diary Guest Tickets.

IF your name is followed by (F), (P) or (C), call in person on the Federal Diary editor. You will receive tickets to (F), Loew's Fox (stage, Duncan Sisters and other acts; screen, William Powell and Myrna Loy in "Evelyn Prentice"); or to (P), Loew's Palace (Pauline Lord in "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch"); or to (C), Loew's Columbia (James Dunn and Alice Faye in "365 Nights in Hollywood").

Diary office hours are, daily except Sunday, 12 noon to 1 p. m. and from 4:30 to 6 p. m.; Saturdays, 12 noon to 2:30 p. m.

Dr. Frank H. H. Roberts, jr., archeologist of the Bureau of American Ethnology, has returned from six weeks' archeological field and museum work in Colorado.

Douglas Fairbanks Looks Toward Mexico for Locale; George Arliss to Be Honored in London; News Notes of the Film Colony.

By Edwin Schallert.

Hollywood, Nov. 20.—Mexico is the latest region to have captured the imagination of Douglas Fairbanks. And possibly an idea that is germinating in his mind since his visit down there may take precedence over all others. The Chinese adventure seems most recurrent, but even that is at the moment in abeyance, as are the revival of "The Mark of Zorro" and the story of Joaquin Murrietta.

GEORGE ARLISS

What Fairbanks is really ambitious to essay now is a picturization of the story of Cortez and Montezuma, in which he himself would play Cortez and Charles Laughton would enact Montezuma. This could be the most dramatic and spectacular enterprise of Doug's entire career. It is not unlikely either that Merle Oberon, who is coming to Hollywood to appear in the "Folies Bergere" with Maurice Chevalier, who has already arrived for this picture, would be chosen for the leading feminine part, if the picture is made.

Doug naturally is given to testing out the possibilities of various ideas before actually making a picture. So far this has the most actual glamour.

New Honors For Arliss.

Honor is to be done George Arliss when his Gaumont-British feature, "The Iron Duke," in which he plays the Duke of Wellington, opens in London November 30. Among those to be present is the Prince of Wales.

The film, directed by Victor Saville, has just been completed, and following the first showing, Arliss is to come to America to play in "Richelieu."

Gaumont-British inaugurated their activities here in a formal way yesterday with the showing of "Chu-Chin-Chow" before a group of invited guests. Anna May Wong is seen in one of the leading roles of this production.

Progress Is Made.

Selection of the beauties to be represented in "The Great Ziegfeld" will begin today or tomorrow. It is expected that about 200 in all will be picked, although that number is very likely to be in part experienced Hollywood beauties of the chorus. Still, as many as possible new types will be chosen by William Anthony McGuire, as producer, and Seymour Felix, dance director.

It is probable that about half the girls will be selected from the Western candidates, where the survey is naturally more complete. Tests for the Eastern group will be conducted in the key cities, and decision made before they come to Hollywood.

Billie Burke will become associated with the judges in picking the candidate who will be glorified as the Ziegfeld girl in the production. Ziegfeld beauties of yesteryear who are to be impersonated, include Billie Dove, Mae Murray, Dorothy Mackaill, Nita Naldi, Ina Claire, Mary Nolan, Gilda Gray, Helen Morgan, Ann Pennington, Ruby Keeler and others.

Eastern High Held to Tie By W.&L.

Fumbles Prove Costly for Lincoln Park; Shaw Stars.

EASTERN HIGH'S inconsistent football team ran true to form yesterday, being held to a 0-0 tie by a Washington-Lee High eleven it was figured to beat.

The game, played at Eastern Stadium, was once canceled, but was rescheduled Monday, forcing the Lincoln Parkers to play after several days' lay-off from practice. The contest completed the season for the Washington school.

Eastern twice drove deep into scoring territory, but a fumble by "Hawk" Shaw on the 8-yard line ended one threat in the third period, and a missed field goal by Joe Brosnan in the last quarter dashed another hope for victory.

Well Deserve Tie.

Washington-Lee was never able to penetrate past the Lincoln Parkers' 40-yard line, but its defensive stands and fumble recoveries in the pinches were enough to give it a well-deserved tie.

Two pass interceptions by Bill Biggs, W.-L. full back, and one by his quarter back, Orlando Birch, stopped Eastern advances in the first half as the teams battled ineffectively.

Glen ("Hawk") Shaw, fast Eastern quarter back, commenced the second half by taking the kick-off and flashing 40 yards straight down the south sidelines before being hauled down by Tommy Sher, W.-L. guard.

Eastern was held and forced to kick. Unable to gain, the Little Generals tried to punt out, but a bad pass from center prevented Jim Fixx, half back, from getting his kick off quickly and it was blocked by Fox, Eastern tackle, the ball going out of bounds.

Fumble Spoils Advance.

Eastern's chance vanished, however, shortly afterward when Shaw fumbled on the 10-yard line and Selwyn Burnett, alert substitute end, recovered for W-L on the 6-yard line. Washington-Lee kicked out, but Eastern hit back by advancing to the Generals' 30 on a pass, Charlie Kidwell to Chick Di Julian. Kidwell tried an end run, but fumbled on the 25-yard line when he was tackled near the side line. Cubby Welsh, Washington-Lee guard, recovered.

Washington-Lee marched to a first down on the Eastern 46, but Wade Wood, left end, nailed Burnett for a 5-yard loss and two passes fell incomplete to end the drive.

Taking the ball on its own 20-yard line, Eastern went to midfield with Bill Miller and Shaw carrying the leather, but the Little Generals held and Eastern kicked.

Virginians Stop Drive.

Shaw knocked down a dangerous-looking pass in midfield shortly afterward. Fixx kicked to Di Julian, who ran it back 10 yards to his opponents' 41-yard line. Miller and Shaw picked up 8 yards and then young DiJulian took a pass from Shaw with a pretty catch on his own 30 where he was downed. Another pass, Shaw to DiJulian, made it a first down on the 13-yard line.

But the Virginians braced and a lateral pass, Shaw to Kidwell, brought no gain. Shaw and Miller were stopped, and, with only 2 minutes to play, Brosnan was called on to drop-kick a field goal. His attempt went wide and Fixx booted his team out of danger.

Augusta Beaten By Shenandoah

Woodstock, Va., Nov. 20 (Spl.).—The Shenandoah Athletic Club's Red Devils continued their undefeated streak as they downed the strong Augusta Military Academy Tiger team here today for the second time this season, 7 to 0, before a crowd of 500. The Devils, in the first quarter, marched to the Cadet's goal on power plays and on an off tackle plunge, Weems went over for the lone count and Phillips bucked the line for the extra point. The Cadets at no time during the game threatened to score on the local gridmen and the game ended with the Red Devils deep in Augusta territory. Roller led the attack for the Cadets, while the offense of the locals was centered around Phillips and Payne. The line-up:

Ruth's Clout Wins Over Japanese, 1-0

Whitehill Gives But 3 Hits; 16,000 Watch Duel.

Shizuoka, Japan, Nov. 20 (AP).—A pitchers' battle between the veteran Earl Whitehill and 17-year-old Eiji Sawamura thrilled 16,000 fans today as Babe Ruth's homer won the first real baseball game his barnstormers have played in Japan, 1 to 0.

Sawamura, recently expelled from Kyota Commercial School because he played baseball against professionals, tamed the major leagues' murderers' row and approached a brilliant shutout but for Ruth's home run in the seventh. He allowed only five hits, while Whitehill limited the Nippon All-Stars to three.

Hoya Captain, Hurt, Vows He'll Play

Told by Doctor He Must Not, But Says He Will, if on Crutches.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

MR. JOE SAVERINE, who in his more healthy moments captains the Georgetown football team, sat on the bench yesterday, while his teammates cavorted on their secluded practice field, drilling on plays to be used against Maryland at College Park Saturday.

Saverine will not play this game because of torn muscles in his right thigh—that is what the doctors say. Joe says he will, and, furthermore, doctors should stay in their hospitals and let football players alone—especially with the Maryland game coming up.

"Cripes," he said dejectedly, "all season without an injury and then this has to happen just when we're ready for Maryland. But, listen, I'll be in there if I have to play on crutches. How can I miss the first game with 'em? This is my only chance to play against them. It would be different if I had another year."

Still Pretty Sore.

He chewed savagely on a blade of greenish grass, and looked over into a neighboring field as if looking into Saturday. He must have seen the Hoyas kick-off to Maryland, for he started impulsively. The torn muscle twitched and burned, and a sheepish grin filled his face.

"She's still pretty sore," he admitted reluctantly. "Tried to bend the leg this morning and it hurts a little—not too much, though," he added quickly. "It'll be O. K. by Saturday."

"How about practice," we suggested, "You'll will be stale after laying off two weeks."

"Stale, nothing," he snorted. "I'm ready to go right now. I know all the new plays. I've been watching them every day. I may be off a bit on tackling and other stuff, but just gimme two minutes against those fellows. That's all I need, two minutes."

Vaccaro in Same Boat.

Al Vaccaro, a sophomore tackle, nursing an injured knee, sat beside Saverine, adding a word of encouragement now and then. Al's rather hot under the collar, too. It seems that a doctor had told him he couldn't play, either.

"Now what do they know about football players?" he asked.

"Why, you'd think they were going to a dance, or something, the way they act," he said. "Look at 'em. Laughing, smiling. Not a care in the world.

Worked Like Slaves.

"Holy Gee, when we were under Lou Little we worked like slaves before an important game. I'm not joking. If you ran off the field after practice Lou thought you hadn't worked hard enough, so he made you do four or five laps around the track.

"We looked forward to the game as an opportunity to give the other team some of the punishment we took during the week. At game time we were just about ready to explode. Boy, we let 'em have it, too.

"But this crowd," and he shook his head. "I don't know. I've threatened and pleaded with 'em, but it doesn't seem to work. And the funny thing is they're not overconfident. It's a fact. I can't figure it out. They'll beat us 100-to-0 if hte boys don't show something.

Friedman, Ex-Boxer, Dies of Auto Injuries

Hancock Wins in Tourney.

Frederick, Md., Nov. 20 (Spl.).—Hancock High School soccer champions of Washington County defeated Emmitsburg, Frederick County champions, 6 to 2. The defeat eliminated Emmitsburg from the State tournament.

2 Unbeaten Missouri Teams Meet Friday

Cape Girardeau, Mo., Nov. 20 (AP).—The ranks of the unbeaten and untied are sure to be reduced by at least one on Friday when Cape Girardeau Teachers and Kirksville Teachers collide. It's the final game of the season for both teams, with Cape Girardeau boasting a string of eight straight, and Kirksville one less.

Londos Tops Them All in Earnings

NEW YORK, Nov. 20 (U.P.).—He has been ridiculed in a thousand newspapers, booed by millions of fans and called everything from "strumberry pie palooka" to names unprintable, but Jim Londos stands out today as the man who probably has earned more money in professional sports than any other participant.

This includes Jack Dempsey, Babe Ruth, Gene Tunney, Bobby Jones, Earl Sande, Red Grange, etc., and Londos still is earning it.

Critics fire broadsides questioning the honesty of wrestling in general and the purity of Londos' matches. Athletic commissions launch investigations. Fans arch eyebrows at the sport. But wrestling continues to thrive robustly, and the 36-year-old Greek, recognized generally as world heavyweight champion, shovels in the golden shekels night after night—boosting bank accounts and investments that would tickle many a Wall street financier.

Attracts the Fans.

Regardless of whether Londos' bouts are "shooting matches" or mere burlesque, the statuesque, bronzed grappler who came to the United States as a cabin boy when 14, puts on a show that attracts the customers. He is one of the most enduring gate magnets in athletic history. Fifteen years in the grunt and groan industry have made him a master showman.

Like a perpetual motion machine, he goes on night after night. Last night, for example, Jeemy's slice of the purse was about $2,000 for defending his title at Madison Square Garden against Everett Marshall, of Colorado. Tonight he faced Dick Shikat at Baltimore for about $1,000.

He wrestles three, four or five times a week, month in and month out, year after year.

Jack Curley, wrestling impresario in the New York area, estimated today that the total gates for Londos' performances during 1934 would amount to more than $5,000,000. And the champion receives from 12½ to 20 per cent of the gates. Curley figured that the most conservative estimate could not fix Londos' earnings for 1934 at less than $500,000. He added that Jim probably had more profitable years in the past.

Londos is cagey about discussing his earnings. Cornered at lunch in the St. Moritz today before his departure for Baltimore, the bull-shouldered, dark-haired chap in the brown suit set down his glass of milk and said, "I don't have any idea how much money I made since I started wrestling. I've been too busy to stop and figure it out. I've been too busy to get married, to have much fun, to do anything. Just wrestle and jump, wrestle and jump."

Lost Lot in Crash.

Frankly he admitted that he had earned a lot of money, and still is making it, "but don't forget I lost a lot in the crash, too." He didn't know if he made more than Babe Ruth and Jack Dempsey. What did they make? Well, boxing statisticians estimated that Dempsey earned with his fists between two and a half and three millions dollars. Ruth probably earned an average of about $50,000 a year for 20 years. At one time his seasonal salary reached $85,000, and he had other sources of revenue. Ruth's earnings probably totaled about $1,000,000.

"They both made a lot of money," said the brown-eyed Greek with the perfect white teeth and the cauliflowered ears. But he smiled as he said it, and the writer recalled that a couple of years ago Jeemy was reported to have contributed a cool million toward building a stadium in Athens. Londos would not discuss this contribution. "It is not good taste to talk about things like that," he explained. "Nor about funds given to charity."

Why does he keep wrestling so often if he is independently wealthy? "Because I would like to build up a nice nest egg. Tonight I might be injured so that I could never wrestle again—or I might last until 60 like Stanislaus Zbyszko. It's a very uncertain profession."

Mrs. Huston Says 'No' to Deal Between Hubby and Dodgers

BUTLER ISLAND, Brunswick, Ga., Nov. 20 (AP).—"You are not going to buy any ball club; you are going to stick to your cows!"

So, what is Col. Tillinghast l'Hommedieu Huston, the former part owner of the Yankees who yearns to return to the game, going to do in the face of an ultimatum like that from Mrs. Huston?

"Like most men," Col. Huston said at his home on the island here today, "I am under 'P. G.,' which decoded means 'petticoat government.'

"When I returned recently from New York, where rumors cropped up that I was going to buy the Brooklyn Club and install Babe Ruth as manager, Mrs. Huston spoke her piece. Her tone and manner of saying it implied an indisputable authority."

Although he has been out of baseball for several years, Huston, who, as partner of Col. Jacob Ruppert, brought about the deal that landed Babe Ruth with the Yankees, maintains a keen interest in the game.

He's still a prospective purchaser of a major league club if an attractive proposition turns up. Doubtlessly his interest centers on the Brooklyn team, but recent reports indicate it is not for sale.

"I always told Wilbert Robinson," the Colonel recalled, "that whenever he could get a reasonable price on the Brooklyn Baseball Club myself and friends would buy it, make him the ruling factor in its management and make it possible for him to acquire stock in the club.

"I think Uncle Robby cherished this hope right up to his death. I always felt that Robby and I together could build up a winner.

"In the last few years almost every time I go to New York in the off-season when the newspaper boys haven't much to write about they have me buying the Brooklyn Club. This year there seemed something tangible to the report that it was for sale. However, Judge Steve McKeever says it isn't and it appears to me he probably knows whereof he speaks."

Injury No Bar, Al Houghton Shoots 68

Beats Workman, Schultz and Fitzgerald, 2 Up; Other Golf News.

DESPITE a swollen ankle and pain suffering as a result of teeth extraction, Al Houghton, Kenwood's sharpshooting professional, was good enough yesterday to burn up his home course in 68.

If misery loves company Houghton found a real pal in Old Man Par, who was assailed on the outgoing side for a 33, and the incoming nine for 35—3 under par.

In bitter doses Houghton handed his three playing rivals, Raymond (Sonny) Workman, jockey; Fred Schultz and Maury Fitzgerald, a lacing. Houghton played their best ball, and won something like 2 up. Fitzgerald did 78; Workman 84, and Schultz, 81.

A feature of Houghton's round was his eagle 3 on the 461-yard fifth. Here he planted his 4-iron approach 6 feet from the pin and downed his putt.

Houghton's card:

Out..... 4 4 3 4 3 4 4 4 3—35
In..... 4 4 4 5 4 3 4 3 5—35—68

Commander C. A. MacGruder holed out on the 157-yard seventeenth at Army and Navy Country Club while playing with Commander S. F. Heim, Commander S. B. Conger, and Commander F. Slinglust. Commander MacGruder used a three iron. It was his first ace.

Harold Bowers, Anacostia's bright-eyed champion, will attempt to inject a bit of drama into the Rock Creek turkey tournament today. He is scheduled to arise from a sick bed to meet lanky Pat Axtell, at 1 p. m. in his oft-delayed semifinals match. Axtell has been standing by for days, and is getting impatient, he said. The finals, in which Claude Rippy, the medalist, is strongly favored, will be staged Sunday. Meantime, Course Manager Graham is shelling out extra dough feeding the raft of gobblers he will award the winners.

The huge tree that towers above the rest on the thirteenth hole at Washington Golf and Country Club cost Rudolph (Lefty) Harrell plenty. Playing with Ralph Fowler against Professional Dave Thomson and former President Charles Doing, Harrell propelled a sharp hook from the tee smack into the tree. The ball ricocheted from limb to limb, and finally struck a twig. The tree was leaveless, by the way.

Of course, Harrell lost the hole—and it was a crucial one. Yesterday Caddymaster Brick Wood sent Caddy Walter Marcey up the tree, and he spent 20 minutes before retrieving the ball.

Add to the clubs staging turkey tournaments over the week-end Kenwood Golf and Country Club. Congressional also is planning one, and from Chairman Leopold Freudberg, of Woodmont, came word last night announcing a record entry list for his club's turkey event Sunday. Non-golfers also have been invited to play at Woodmont.

Next Tuesday Kenwood will stage a pro-amateur tournament in which each player will be assessed $2.50. A large purse is being put up by the members.

Friends of the golfing Harpers—Chandler and Lily—will be interested in knowing that they defeated Wee Bobby Cruickshank and Mrs. C. B. Walden, city champion, in a charity match Sunday in Richmond.

Champaign Accepts Challenge of Whiting

Champaign, Ill., Nov. 20 (AP).—Champaign High School, which ended its football season with only one defeat in the nine games, today accepted the challange of the Whiting, Ind., eleven for a post-season game at Whiting Thanksgiving Day.

Whiting, coached by Ray Gallivan, former University of Illinois star, was undefeated and claimed the northern Indiana championship.

'88 Yale Team Unscored On; Won 13

Made One Substitution in Four Games; Played More Often.

HARTFORD, Conn., Nov. 20 (AP).—To Yale men, the year 1888 produced two blizzards—the one in March and "Pa" Corbin's great team of "iron men" which stormed through a 13-game schedule undefeated, untied, and unscored upon.

Corbin, who makes his home here, paid tribute today to Coach Ducky Pond's present Yale team and only after hailing the triumph over Princeton as "one of the greatest victories Yale has ever scored" was "Pa" willing to talk about his '88 team.

Played More Often.

"Without bragging," said Corbin, "we didn't think anything of playing football twice a week or even on consecutive days. We played through our 13-game schedule without making a substitution in nine of the games.

"In the other four contests, we had to make one replacement in each of the games, twice because of injuries and the other two times because of one of our men violating a major rule. We scored 698 points while holding our opponents scoreless."

Regular Eleven.

No Forward Passes.

Amherst and Williams were met on successive days, three days separated the first meeting with Penn., and the second battle with Wesleyan, while M. I. T., Stevens and the second game with Penn., were played within a space of ten days.

"We did this without the aid of forward passes," said Corbin.

"Football today is much the same as when I played the game, the fundamentals are identical—blocking, kicking, tackling—although some of the tackling I have seen lately isn't so good," asserted "Pa."

"They don't try for field goals as much as they did in '88, but maybe that's because they only count 3 points now instead of the 5 in my time."

Tennis Association Renames Officers

Committee Recommends '35 Reelection.

New York, Nov. 20 (U.P.).—The United States Lawn Tennis Association will be served in 1935 by the same officials who now head the organization, if the wish of the nomination committee is carried out at the annual meeting in Cincinnati on February 9.

The recommendations, announced by E. B. Moss, executive secretary, today, provide for the renomination of President Walter Merrill Hall; First Vice President Holcombe Ard; Second Vice President Joseph W. Ivy, and National Secretary Lawrence A. Baker.

Only 1 Touchdown Made Against First Team in Seven Games.

MINNEAPOLIS, Nov. 20 (AP).—The galloping Gophers of Minnesota took a leaf this season from past Michigan accomplishments—a good defense is a good offense—but in addition added a jarring, battering attack in their rush to a possible mythical national championship.

In seven games, against Pittsburgh, Nebraska, Iowa, Michigan, Indiana, Chicago and North Dakota State, the mighty Gophers have held their opponents to an average of 119 yards each game from scrimmage, and of this, only an average of 76 yards a game by rushing the ball, it was shown by a check-up today.

Minnesota's powerhouse back field, including all 11 ball carriers, averaged 6.2 yards each try from scrimmage, solely on running plays, for the entire season to date. The backs, headed by Capt. "Pug" Lund, half back, include Kostka, Beise, Alfonse, Clarkson, Roscoe, Levoir, Seidel, Proffitt, Rennix and Rork.

The Gophers, undefeated and untied, have only Wisconsin left on their schedule. Minnesota has scored 236 points to 38 for the opposition and of these only one touchdown was recorded against the Gophers while the first team was in the game.

Minnesota has used its passing game sparingly, although winning the Pittsburgh game in the fourth quarter by use of a forward developing out of a double lateral.

The "thundering herd" has amassed 2,666 yards from scrimmage to 837 for the seven opponents.

Smuckler Is Warner's New 'Great' Candidate

Philadelphia, Nov. 20 (AP).—Glenn (Pop) Warner, who has developed such stars as Jim Thorpe and Ernie Nevers, is giving serious thought to changing his opinion that they are the greatest players that he ever brought along. His latest candidate to succeed them is Dave Schmuckler, sophomore full back on Warner's undefeated Temple eleven.

Lew Wentz Appears at Meeting

Cards' Officials Assert They're Positive Deal Has Been Closed.

American Association Votes to Scrap Play-Off Series.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Nov. 20 (AP).—Rumor mounted on rumor as major and minor league leaders cautiously began sparring for big player deals today, but the most persistent one of all was that Lew Wentz, Oklahoma oil man, already had closed the deal for the world's championship St. Louis Cardinals.

Wentz, a red-hot baseball fan with scads of ready money, was much in evidence around the Cardinal headquarters, but insisted his presence had no significance whatsoever. However, two representatives of the far-flung Cardinal chain store system, who didn't want their names mentioned for obvious reasons, said they were positive the big deal had been consummated, making Wentz owner of the champions.

"Nuttiest Fan," He Says.

"I'm here because I just can't stay away," said Wentz, an affable man with the enthusiasm of a boy over his first football. "There's no significance attached to my trip here except that I can't hear and see enough baseball. Guess I'm the nuttiest fan of all. Why, between World Series games at Detroit, I flew down to Columbus to see a night game of the little World Series."

Although there were countless huddles among major league owners, managers and scouts today, the only news involved the same Little World Series. The American Association voted to scrap its usual play-off series for the league championship, and served an ultimatum to the International League to do likewise or at least arrange a short post-season series so as to decide the I. L. pennant winner on or before September 1, the closing day of the A. A.'s 154-game schedule.

If the International Leaguers insist on their four-team play-off for their championship, there will be no Little World Series between the respective champions of those AA leagues. The theory of the American Association is that there is no customer appeal to a Little World Series after a long post-season series that may crown a fourth-place team over the regular season as a champion.

Study Play-Off.

The International Leaguers were in session, oblivious to the American Association decision to scrap their usual play-off plans, and were pretty sore about not being informed about it. However, they appointed a three-man committee of George M. Weiss, Newark; Leo T. Miller, Buffalo, and Frank J. Shaughnessy, Montreal, to discuss the situation tomorrow with a similar A. A. committee.

They also reelected Charles H.

Patchpocket 1½ Lengths In Rear

By Walter Haight.

THE annual running of The Mayor Howard W. Jackson Handicap at Bowie yesterday afternoon was interesting on several points, to wit:

1. Trumpery proved the first winning favorite in eight races.

2. Mayor Jackson and his staff filled the judges' stand to capacity and the remark was made that the jockeys thought the State militia had been called out.

3. When the horses went to the post the odds displayed were 3½, 4½, 3, 3, and 3½. Those trying to escape betting on the favorite were in a quandary.

Comes Through on Rail.

4. Jockey Albert Robertson came through on the rail instead of going to the outside at the stretch turn.

5. Captain Argo, the overnight favorite, was scratched, and, of course, was not beaten.

6. The field finished according to post positions.

It was the light blue and brown of the C. V. Whitney Stable that Trumpery carried through the stretch to victory in the six-furlong sprint—the same colors that Trumpery failed with on Saturday. However, there are days and days and yesterday was his day.

Patchpocket Is Second.

By a length and a half, Trumpery led Patchpocket across the line, with a tiring Red Wagon third and another length away. A field of five accepted the issue, but Projectile and Sound Advice were never serious factors.

After the dash out of the stall gates, Red Wagon streaked out into a lead, followed by Patchpocket, Meade up, and Trumpery third. They maintained this order in the run down the back stretch. Robertson kept Trumpery on the rail, but there seemed little chance of his sending the Whitney gelding through. However, when the stretch turn was reached, Red Wagon bore out and carried Patchpocket with him. That was Robertson's chance. He ducked through the gap left by the pair and came out on top of the field, Trumpery opened up a lead of several lengths at the eight pole, but Patchpocket, finishing fastest of all, cut down the margin nearing the wire.

Don Meade, the E. R. Bradley rider, did not waste any time swinging into action. He rode the first winner with Crete, the property of G. H. Bostwick, scoring by a length over the favorite, Great Master. Balapin was third.

Another front-running victory was registered in the second race, and again the favorite bit the dust. Uncle Billy, in charge of Jockey Davis, was the winner by a length over the favored Gifted Lady. Ross accounted for third money. Uncle Billy was an $11.50 betting proposition.

Band Wagon Victor.

The third straight favorite fell in the third race when Jesting was fifth in a field of 12. Band Wagon, one that closed at 10-1 and paid $14.20, was first to reach the judges after collaring Can't Remember in the closing strides. Tractable, a 29-1 shot, was third.

Meade made it a "double" for the day by riding Judge Blake home in the fourth race. The Judge defeated Boston Brook by a length and a half, and the latter was the favorite. Pantoufle, from the Whitney stable, was third.

Three candidates for the Endurance Handicap gathered in the money in the sixth race, a jaunt of a mile and 70-yards for all ages. Walter M. Jeffords' Firethorn, winner of the Walden, proved best by a length and a half, running the distance in 1:47 2-5. Mrs. Payne Whitney's Gillie saved second money by a half-length from C. Symthe's Direct Hit. Queen Vic, a rank outsider, broke very fast and set the early pace, giving way to Direct Hit approaching the far turn. Gillie assumed command around the bend but could not withstand the stretch bid of Firethorn, which won going away to give Jockey Robertson a double.

Tenless, paying $71.50, won the last race by three-lengths under Jockey Seabo. Gen. Lejeune beat Airway a length for the place.

*Field.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CRETE, $8.00, $4.00, $3.80; GREAT MASTER, $3.20, $2.80; BALAPIN, $6.60.

CRETE, quickest to begin and hard ridden to assume command early, met persistent efforts from GREAT MASTER until midway of the home stretch, then came out slowly approaching the finish. GREAT MASTER followed close to the winner from the beginning and held on well after making repeated efforts. BALAPIN bettered his position on the outside, but could not make up any ground on the leaders in the final drive. EGEON closed with good speed in the late stages. DESERTED went forwardly and held on well. TIPPO TIP showed a good performance. BRAYDON had speed for five furlongs. DRINKWATER went evenly. RED CANOPY lacked speed.

SECOND RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $800; claiming for 2-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 1:43. Off at 1:48. Winner, Mrs. W. H. Denham's ch. g. (2), by Bubbling Over—Fairy Land. Trained by W. H. Denham. Value to winner, $625; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24 2-5, 0:49 2-5, 1:15 2-5, 1:43 2-5, 1:48 4-5.

*Field.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—UNCLE BILLY $11.50, $6.40, $4.00; GIFTED LADY, $4.50, $3.50; ROSS, $4.70.

UNCLE BILLY outran his field to the first turn to take command, was rated in front after reaching the back stretch, then held on stoutly when placed to punishment during the stretch drive. GIFTED LADY raced closest to the winner from the beginning, but could not gain when hard ridden at the end. ROSS, forced wide at the first turn, worked his way up steadily thereafter, and finished gamely. BOUNDING COUNT, unprepared for the start, closed a big gap.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:17. Off at 2:23. Winner, C. V. Bild's ch. g. (4) by Strolling Player—Kenlet. Trained by J. L. Hanna. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23 2-5, 0:48, 1:13 3-5.

*Field.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BAND WAGON, $14.20, $15.70, $4.20; CANT REMEMBER, $5.40, $4.20; TRACTABLE, $7.60.

BAND WAGON, kept close to the leaders in the early stages, came strongly when reaching the home stretch, then finished determinedly to get up in the closing stride. CANT REMEMBER displayed nice speed while setting the pace, saved ground, then held on willingly after resisting strong efforts from TRACTABLE, latter a key factor throughout, held on well nearing the end. GOLDEN FATE improved his position readily and was going stoutly at the finish. JESTING held to a prominent position, but was unable to threaten when put to a drive. VOLTA MAID closed stoutly while racing wide. GLENDYE went evenly. GRAND ROCK had speed the first half-mile.

FOURTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $800; allowances. The Thomas Notley (first division). For all ages. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:52. Off at 2:55. Winner, Mrs. A. W. Abbott's br. c. (2), by Hourless—Vesta Wind. Trained by S. Judge. Value to winner, $625; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24 2-5, 0:49 2-5, 1:14 3-5, 1:42, 1:47.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—JUDGE BLAKE, $9.80, $4.00, $2.90; BOSTON BROOK, $3.90, $2.70; PANTOUFLE, $3.00.

JUDGE BLAKE, taken under steadying restraint when BOSTON BROOK was rushed into the lead entering the back stretch, responded nicely when put to a drive approaching the home stretch, displaced the pacemaker and drew out steadily under hard ridden at the finish. BOSTON BROOK, hard ridden around the first turn to get into the lead, was steadied until challenged, but weakened when urged. PANTOUFLE went forwardly place, but could not menace when put to a hard drive. CORVINE was never a serious factor. STEGAL was taken up sharply when reaching the final turn and fell back badly. COL. GREENE was made too much use of to reach the leaders. WHITE CLOUD was pulled up after leaving the back stretch.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000. The Mayor Howard W. Jackson Handicap. For all ages. Start good. Won handily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:23. Off at 3:25½. Winner, C. V. Whitney's br. g. (3), by Sir Gallahad III—Pantaletta. Trained by T. J. Healey. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23 2-5, 0:47 3-5, 1:13 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TRUMPERY, $5.70, $3.40, $2.60; PATCHPOCKET, $4.40, $2.90; RED WAGON, $2.00.

TRUMPERY, in hand during the first half-mile and saving ground, took command with a rush when nearing the home stretch, moved clear and had speed in reserve at the end. PATCHPOCKET continued steadily after racing RED WAGON into submission. RED WAGON displayed nice speed while setting the pace, but could not stay when put to a hard drive. PROJECTILE was unable to better his position after racing close up. SOUND ADVICE was a trailer for the entire trip.

SIXTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $800; allowances. The Thomas Notley (second division). For all ages. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:53. Off at 3:54½. Winner, W. M. Jefford's br. m. (2), by Bull Brier—Baton Rouge. Trained by P. M. Burch. Value to winner, $625; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24 2-5, 0:49, 1:14 2-5, 1:42, 1:47 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—FIRETHORN, $3.40, $2.60, $2.50; GILLIE, $2.80, $2.90; DIRECT HIT, $3.40.

FIRETHORN, rated off the pace of the leaders for the first six furlongs, was sent up on the outside when reaching the final curve, then came determinedly during the stretch drive to get up in the final strides. GILLIE, ridden to get a good start in the first turn, raced the early leaders into defeat to gain command at the final elbow, but was unable to resist the winner's rush. DIRECT HIT held on stubbornly after holding a brief lead. QUEEN VIC could not stay when forced to a drive. BETHLEHEM STAR suffered much interference at the first turn, and was taken up abruptly. PHARA also suffered from interference and was knocked back badly. THIS WAY was never able to enter contention.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $600; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:23. Off at 4:31. Winner, J. Coleman's br. f. (3), by Bucellas—Rusela. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $435; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $15. Time, 0:24 3-5, 0:50, 1:16 2-5, 1:43, 1:57.

*Field.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TENLESS, $71.50, $47.80, $16.40; GENERAL LEJUNE, $6.30, $4.40; *AIRWAY, $7.50.

TENLESS sprinted into an early lead after reaching the back stretch, was rated until settled for the closing drive, then was shaken up mildly to hold GENERAL LEJUNE safe. Latter, placed prominently in the early running, made a determined effort midway of the final turn, but was held safe thereafter. AIRWAY, sluggish to gain his best stride, bettered his position rapidly in the last half-mile. ARAB lacked early speed and could never reach a forward position. JUST CAP failed to rally after entering contention. OLAMAY was unable to threaten. MARYS MAY was taken wide. SYRIAC stopped, as did HOSAIN. SIMPLE SINGER tired early.

Faculty Advisers Meet Today to Decide on School-Prep Charity Game Plan

Principals Back Idea In Vote

Agreement on Time and Place Seen as Only Difficulty.

By John R. Vosburgh.

FAVORED by the board of principals of Washington's high schools, the projected charity football game between an all-prep school team and an all-high school team was a long step nearer reality last night.

At a special meeting of the principals yesterday the board decided to call upon the faculty advisers of the five schools "to work out a plan" for the contest.

John Paul Collins, assistant principal of Eastern and chairman of the board of faculty advisers, has called a meeting of the body for 11 a. m. today to discuss "the feasibility, time and place" of the contest.

Little Trouble Seen.

While no one dared predict that the game would be held for a certainty, the general impression reigned last night that there was little to prevent it. There apparently was no question that the suggestion met with favor among the members of the advisory board. The difficulty evidently lay in the agreement on the place and time of the contest.

The principals attending yesterday's meeting at Roosevelt High were Allan Davis, of Roosevelt, chairman of the board; Charles Hart, of Eastern; Dr. Harvey A. Smith, of Central, and Dr. Elmer S. Newton, of Western. Tech was represented by Assistant Principal William C. Myers.

The members of the faculty advisory board meeting today in addition to Chairman Collins are Rupert Sharitz, of Roosevelt, secretary; Daniel Ahearn, of Western; Irving (Bert) Coggins, of Central; Leonard Brown, of Tech, and James Super, of Eastern.

Enthusiasm High.

A canvas of the rep schools where the suggestion for an all-star game originated reveals not only wholehearted enthusiasm for the game but confident predictions that an All-Prep team could match an All-High team yard for yard any day in the week. This is the opinion of two of the outstanding Prep school coaches.

Prep school officials have obtained consent of Jim McNamara, former Georgetown football star, director of athletics at the Jewish Community Center and coach of Devitt Prep, to coach the All-Prep team. Coaches Joe Gardner, of Georgetown Prep; Morris Gouge, of Bullis; A. R. Middleton, of St. Alban's, and H. Holbrook, of St. John's, stand ready to assist. Coach Orrel Mitchell, of Gonzaga, is in favor of Coach McNamara taking complete charge.

Three Best on Squads.

The prep schools are planning to have each of the following institutions contribute its three best players to the squad: Gonzaga, Devitt, Georgetown Prep, St. Alban's, St. John's and Bullis. Friends and Landon would each contribute one player.

The prep schools appeared ready to favor any reasonable time and place selected by the high school advisers today. Thanksgiving Day has been eliminated from consideration by the George Washington-Oklahoma game and a night game is being boosted by one member of the board. The week of December 3 is favored by some as the logical time to hold the game. Eastern Stadium is described as the best equipped field in the event Griffith Stadium can not be obtained.

Episcopal, Woodberry Will Battle Saturday

Alexandria, Va., Nov. 20 (Spl.).—Episcopal High School and Woodberry Forest will renew their gridiron rivalry Saturday at Orange, Va., in a game that will close the season for both teams. The game is scheduled for 2:30 p. m.

Both schools will have every player available for the contest. Episcopal's veteran back field of Hoxton, Duvall, Bryant, and Wilson is conceded on edge, while the two lines, heavy and experienced, seem to be a toss-up.

Chicago Drills Hard For Illinois Game

Chicago, Nov. 20 (AP).—The Chicago squad put in a long drill on offense today, again working behind locked gates. Bob Perretz, guard, who was injured at Minnesota, was back in uniform, but Ewald Myquist, full back, missed practice. No scrimmage was ordered by Coach Clark Shaughnessy, but one rough session probably will be held before the Maroons meet Illinois Saturday.

Long, Light Practice Is Held by Generals

Teams were chosen to run signals and work on passing and running attacks. A scrimmage against the reserves is scheduled for tomorrow, with South Carolina plays used for offense.

Golfers 'Take Stock' In Pro, Sent to Miami

Lexington, Mass., Nov. 20 (U.P.).—Thirty-five members of Minute Man Golf Club are "investing" $10 apiece to finance the entry of their professional, Jerry Gianferante, in the Miami, Fla., open tourney starting December 8.

If Gianferante finishes in the money he'll keep half the prize and the other half will be split 35 ways among the "stockholders."

Fine Form

Babe Didrikson Shoots 77 in First Golf Tourney.

FORT WORTH, Tex., Nov. 20 (AP).—Babe Didrikson, feminine track and field star of the last Olympic games, entered a golf tournament for the first time today and strode away with medalist honors in a card of 38—39—77.

The scene was the soggy Rivercrest Country Club course; the event the second annual invitation meet of the Fort Worth Women's Golf Association.

Runners-up to Miss Didrikson were Mrs. Frank Goldthwaite, Texas champion, and Mrs. R. E. Winger, former Fort Worth City champion. Both shot 82's.

G. W. Devotes Full Drill to Offense

North Dakota, Here Friday Unscored on Thus Far Through Line.

AFTER expressing a profound respect for North Dakota's defensive ability, George Washington coaches yesterday devoted the entire practice session to offensive work, hoping to build an attack strong enough to pierce the Nodak's breastworks.

Only one touchdown has been scored on the invading eleven this season, that by North Dakota State, and it was on a forward pass. The line, which is expected to be fully as strong as George Washington's, has never failed to repulse every scoring threat flung at it.

Scales 200 Pounds.

From tackle to tackle North Dakota will scale about 200 pounds, and Jean Sexton, who scouted the team against St. Thomas last week, claims it to be virtually impregnable. Buck Starbeck, former all-Conference center, coaches the line, and has developed 20 all-Conference men since assuming his berth.

Lou Chumick, 205 pounds, and Marty Gainor, 190, hold down the tackles. A pair of 200-pounders, Bill Goether and Al Sowl, play the guards, while Capt. Len Sauer, 190-pound all-State center, does the snapping back. These men, Sexton claims, constitute one of the finest middle lines he has seen in action this season.

Falgren, Smart at Ends.

Fritz Falgren and Don Smart, smaller but faster than their fellow linemen, will be at the flanks. Falgren is a made-over back who has developed into a fine pass-receiver. Smart, only 155 pounds, is the faster and more aggressive of the two. He has the happy faculty of playing a hard, rough game, without injury.

The Colonials will continue attempts to perfect their offense today. If the attack clicks as well Friday as it did against West Virginia the coaches will be more than satisfied.

North Dakota arrived last night. It will practice today and tomorrow at Griffith Stadium, though not at the same time as G. W.

Harvard Reshapes Offense for Yale

Cambridge, Mass., Nov. 20 (AP).—The work of reshaping the Harvard offense about the brittle but speedy Fred Moseley continued today when the Crimson got into the swing of its preparations for Saturday's final game with Yale.

Moseley, who has played against only one major opponent, Princeton, during his entire Harvard career, has missed a good half of the season's practice sessions due to injuries. As a result almost every other member of Harvard's four-time beaten varsity squad is much further advanced than he.

Hoyas to Play Miami Team Next Year

THE University of Miami replaces William and Mary on Georgetown's 1935 football schedule, The Post learned last night. A two-year, home and home agreement has been signed by the schools, with Miami playing in Washington next season.

This is the only change in the Hoyas' grid program, as every other school met this year will be played again.

The University of Maryland, which the Hilltop machine encounters next week for the first time in decades, again features the schedule, although the site of the game has not been determined. It is believed it may be brought to Griffith Stadium if the turnout for next week's game justifies such a move.

Miami will be played in October, immediately after the New York University fray, which precedes the annual game with Manhattan. Western Maryland, Roanoke, Richmond and Mount St. Mary's complete the list.

Georgetown next year expects to turn out its strongest varsity team since Lou Little's departure, with the aid of this season's powerful frosh eleven, although it will do well to match the 1934 record. Under Jack Hagerty the Hoyas have enjoyed unexpected success on the gridiron, having four victories, one tie and one defeat to their credit thus far.

Gopher Plays Tried Out By Wisconsin Squad

Madison, Wis., Nov. 20 (AP).—The Wisconsin football squad got its first taste of Minnesota's plays today in a long workout on defense. After watching the freshmen eleven shift into the various gopher formations the varsity was sent into scrimmage against the yearlings. Coach Clarence Spears found criticism with the Badger defense and inserted most of the reserves into the line-up before practice was concluded.

Inevitability of Fate Beat Pro Giants in Last Minute

By Paul Gallico.

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—There was a football game here last Sunday afternoon and the excited burghers are still talking about it. It involved two professional teams, the New York Giants and the Chicago Bears. The Bears probably are one of the greatest football machines ever assembled. They won the game in the final minute of play by the score of 19 to 9, a curious football score if ever there was one, but the outstanding thing in that thrilling struggle between two perfect teams was the terrible inevitability of the final and winning score, made by the champion Bears.

There were some 60,000 spectators in the stands for the game, itself a tribute to the type of football played by these teams, and five or six minutes before the end of the game, there was not a soul in that park, partisan or neutral, who did not feel definitely that the Bears would win and that nothing short of a miracle could keep them from it. This same feeling must have communicated itself to the players on the New York team. They struggled manfully and desperately, but the writing was already set down in the book of fate.

Two More Gift Points.

The Giants had scored a touchdown, and then by one of those curious mental aberrations that even the best of professional athletes will make (Merkle forgot to touch second, didn't he?) two more gift points on a safety. The Bears then with a tremendous display of power and inertia scored a touchdown and goal, and the score stood 9 to 7 and the magnified voice of the announcer said, "There are seven minutes left to play." As he did so, a curious rustle ran over the 60,000, a something that one could actually feel, as if that many persons, friend and foe, were all thinking of the same thing. Well, they must have been. Seven minutes? It's too much—they can't hold us, for the Bear rooters—we can't hold them, for the partisans of the Giants. It is a rare thing that such a feeling of finality can seize a crowd.

Now, I am never a neutral at any event. I can not sit lack-lusterly waiting for the finish in order to be at my reporting. I must take part, and there I was playing for the Giants, wondering desperately as Quarter Back Newman must have been wondering, how to stem the tide of the inevitable.

Have But One Ally.

A tremendous power had been turned on by Bears with their bone-crushing Nagurski, Ronzani and Feathers. The Giants had but one ally, and that was the sand that was sifting through the hour glass. If the game could but be played between the goal lines until the last grain had vanished. * * * How we played with that team, how we prayed for Strong's punts to carry on and on and for the Bear receivers to fall down and break their legs; how we shoved and drove and pushed with the Giant backs as they tried desperately to gain a yard of ground to move the ball away from their goal line. With the game nearly over we held the ball on our 31-yard line. At this point, Krause fumbled, and Link Lyman, a 246-pound-lineman, fell on it on the Giant 33-yard line, and all hope was lost, all.

And here, I thought, was the essence of professional football, that it has progressed to the high point where a mistake is immediately punished as it is in golf or in baseball. A college team might still have called upon luck, or a break, or counted upon the possibility of error by the opposing quarter back. Not so with these professional teams. On the Bears' 11 was a former Minnesota player named Jack Manders, a fellow who kicks a field goal as surely as a golf professional knocks in a six-inch putt.

In his business there is no margin of error beyond accident or the immutable law of averages. The man hadn't missed a point after touchdown all season. By a truly superhuman burst of effort the tired Giants, who had been taking a terrific beating in the line, might have stopped the Bears from going through for another touchdown. But what about the field goal?

There then was the two-edged sword wielded by the Bears. They drove as far as the Giant's 16-yard line, and there the Giants did stop them. They did everything that was humanly possible to save the game. And then, on the final down, Manders stepped back to the 23-yard line, squarely in front of the goal posts, and sent his helmet rolling on the turf. He marked a spot on the ground with his toe and his helper knelt to hold the ball for him. The executioner was ready. And there was absolutely nothing the Giants could do but make a desperate attempt to break through and block the kick, or hope that in some miraculous way the ball would fly awry. But this, again, is professional football and lines that are trained to hold, lock together for the instant necessary, and no force of 20 men could get through. Nor do the men trained to do their stint for bread and butter miss. Snap went the ball! Placed! Kicked! Field goal! Victory out of defeat! And there was just nothing that could have been done about it.

Dartmouth Brothers May Start Saturday

Hanover, N. H., Nov. 20 (U.P.).—Dartmouth may have brothers in its starting line-up against Princeton at Princeton Saturday. John Handrahan will be at full back as usual. Joseph Handrahan, 190-pound line man, has just been declared scholastically eligible, and may start at guard.

Ex-Harvard Star Sues Cubs in Contract Row

Boston, Nov. 20 (U.P.).—Edward McGrath, jr., of Brookline, captain of the 1931 Harvard baseball team, began suit in municipal court today against the Chicago Cubs, charging breach of an oral contract allegedly made in May, 1931, whereby the Cubs would pay him $5,000 for signing and $500 a month salary.

Northwestern Drills For Michigan in Rain

Evanston, Ill., Nov. 20 (AP).—Northwestern opened drills for Saturday's finale against Michigan with a dummy scrimmage on offense today. The session was cut short because of rain. The Wildcats will be at full strength for the Wolverine encounter.

Rain Upsets Notre Dame's Practice

Army Holds Secret Drill for First Time in 5 Years for Irish.

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Nov. 20 (AP).—A cold, driving rain upset Notre Dame's practice plans today, chasing the Irish indoors and preventing a scrimmage against the freshmen.

Elmer Layden had scheduled a stiff drill against the yearlings, who were equipped with Army formations by Assistant Coaches Tom Conley and Hugh Devore. Instead, Layden worked three full teams in the field house almost two hours on a defense against the Cadets' passing game. Part of the time was devoted to changes in the Irish offense.

Unless the weather behaves tomorrow Notre Dame will meet Army without having scrimmaged against the latter's formations, for the squad leaves for New York Thursday noon. The final workout of the week will be held Friday at the Westchester Country Club, Rye, N. Y.

The Notre Dame ticket office reported that few seats for the spectacle remained, assuring a crowd of more than 70,000 in the Yankee Stadium.

The two Irish cripples, Full Back Fred Carideo and Fred Solari, second string center, again were absent from practice. Solari probably will not make the trip, but an examination tomorrow will determine if Carideo's wrenched knee has sufficiently recovered to permit him to play.

Layden indicated he contemplates no change in the line-up, at least in the back field. Wallie Fromhart, E'll Shakespeare, George Melinkovich and Don Elser, the quartet which faced Northwestern, probably will square off against the Cadets.

West Point, N. Y., Nov. 20 (AP).—For the first time in five years the Army football team worked behind locked gates today as Lieut. Gar Davidson sent the Cadets through a long drill in preparation for the Notre Dame encounter in Yankee Stadius Saturday. Davidson also announced that the remainder of the week's practices would be secret.

A large portion of this afternoon's drill was spent on punting and passing in a scrimmage with the scrubs, who appeared with white numbers on green jerseys to represent the Irish. Jack Buckler and Ozzie Simons were on the throwing end of the aerials, while Curley Edwards, Joe Stancook, Woodie Stromberg and Whitey Grove were the principal receivers.

The scrubs, supplemented by second and third string varsity backs, then went on the offensive and drove through the first eleven's line consistently until the latter caught on to the Notre Dame attack. Bob Stillman and Jack Beall showed well in the forward wall, especially on rushing the passer.

Contracts Are Let For Sewer Work

Tiber Creek System to Be Revised Entirely.

Revision of the whole Tiber Creek sewer was approved yesterday by the District Commissioners when they awarded a contract to the Warren F. Brenizer Co., of Washington, for $3,952.65. The change is to be made across the north half of Pennsylvania avenue in line with Second street northwest.

Contract for construction of the Branch Avenue Cemetery sewer in Pennsylvania Avenue southeast between Westover street and Branch avenue and in Branch avenue between Pennsylvania and Alabama avenues was awarded to the Warren F. Brenizer Co., at a cost of $7,205.16.

Contract for construction of a storm sewer in Brandywine street northwest between Forty-eighth street and Asbury place and in Asbury place between Brandywine and Chesapeake streets was awarded to Corson & Gruman Co., of Washington, for $5,009.62.

Mrs. R. N. Sutton Heads Golf Group

Succeeds Mrs. Tschiffeley at Washington Club.

Mrs. Robert N. Sutton yesterday was elected chairman of the golf committee at the annual meeting of the women golfers of Washington Golf and Country Club. She succeeds Mrs. Douglas Tschiffely.

Mrs. A. L. Sherman was named secretary and reporter; Mrs. W. F. Draper, treasurer, and Mrs. Byrdon Price, tournament chairman. Named to assist Mrs. Price were Mrs. R. P. Brand and Mrs. L. Worrell, while Mrs. O. Thacker was elected handicap chairman. Mrs. W. R. Hill, jr., and Mrs. T. N. DeLashnutt will serve on the prize committee.

Dukes Strong, C. U. Warned By Coach

Bergman Intimates Some Will Miss Trip Unless Attitude Changes.

Bergman, who waxes eloquent on certain occasions, was belligerently eloquent yesterday when he called the squad together and read the riot act. Too much confidence is poison, was his text. He stormed and hurled a barrage of unfatherly advice at the boys until they apparently finally agreed that Duquesne would be a tough nut to crack.

Records Tossed Out.

Evidently the Redbirds took Carnegie Tech's 3-to-0 victory over the Dukes as a sign that Joe Bach's team was slipping after steamrolling previous opposition. But, as Bergman pointed out, the Duquesne-Tech game is for blood, and dope, pregame statistics and opinions are worthless in figuring the outcome.

Bergman intimated that certain members of the squad would be left behind when the team departs tomorrow evening unless a change in attitude is noted.

Sophs Will Start.

Catholic U.'s sophomore back field again will get the call over their older teammates this week. The youngsters showed their stuff against South Dakota last week and C. U. supporters are satisfied that they will make a good showing against the favored Pittsburgh eleven.

The team scrimmaged the freshmen, who used Duquesne plays yesterday and did all right for themselves. The yearlings showed a marked tendency to gain on aerial plays, however, and more attention will be given to this phase of defense today.

Navy Starts Drill for Army

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Nov. 20 (AP).—Polishing of plays and a hard scrimmage were the features of the Navy football squad's practice today for the Army game.

After a short period of fundamentals, including running against sand bags, the varsity spent considerable time working off plays against eight-man opposition.

A group of Navy varsity squad players took the place of an "Army" team, wearing Army numbers and the names of the Cadet players on their jerseys. The plan of the coaches calls for hard scrimmage for several days.

The Navy plebe team, which finished a victorious season on Saturday, will be kept together until after the Army-Navy game for use in scrimmaging with the varsity.

W. & M. Sets About Revising Its Plays

All Men But Shade Are in Good Condition.

Williamsburg, Va., Nov. 20 (AP).—The William and Mary squad today set about the task of devising plays to be used against Richmond on Thanksgiving Day. All of the squad except Charlie Shade came out of the Washington and Lee game in good shape. His injuries have not yet been fully diagnosed.

Saturday the William and Mary freshmen will meet the undefeated and unscored on Richmond first-year men here. The Little Indians likewise are undefeated and have piled up 67 points to 12 for opposing teams.

Mae West Will Add Trotters to Stable

New York, Nov. 20 (AP). — Mae West, the movie actress, has decided to enter the light harness racing game in earnest. Already owner of Elizabeth Hederling, 2:06½, and Senator Leon, 2:09½, she has instructed her trainer, Art Blackwell, of Iowa, to bid in several promising trotters at the Old Glory auction sale next week.

Fraters Lose Star End.

Alexandria, Va., Nov. 20 (Spl.).—Park Bell, star end for the Fraters, forced to retire from the Clancy game at Norfolk last Sunday because of a twisted knee, will be out the rest of the season.

Marlboro 3-0 Victim at Soccer

PRINCE GEORGES COUNTY HIGH SCHOOL girls' field ball and boys' soccer teams won and lost yesterday afternoon in State championship tournament play.

Upper Marlboro's soccer team, Prince Georges representative in the State tourney, was eliminated by Elkridge High, Howard County champions, in a 3-to-0 game at Upper Marlboro. It was a first-round contest. After a scoreless first half, Elkridge counted one 2-pointer and the penalty goal in the second period.

In a first-round game of the State field ball tournament, Mount Rainier High girls downed Clarksville High, Howard County standard bearer, 10 to 4, at Clarksville. The elevens were tied, 2 to 2, after five minutes of play, but the Mounts then started pounding the Clarksville goal and soon piled up a commanding lead. The score was 6 to 2 at half time. Ina Sager, left inside, scored all five Mount Rainier goals.

Plays Annapolis Next.

Mount Rainier will face Annapolis High, Anne Arundel County champion, in a second-round contest Friday afternoon, at 2 o'clock, on the Mount Rainier field. It will be the first State game for Annapolis, which drew a bye in the opening round. Annapolis last year eliminated the Mounts from the title tourney, after the latter had won their first-round competition.

Basket ball practice has started at Mount Rainier High in preparation for the opening game of the season, scheduled December 7, with St. John's on the latter's court in Washington.

Fifteen candidates have reported to Coach Perry Wilkinson. Only two of these were members of the quint which last season won the Prince Georges County championship and went on in the State title tourney to the Western Shore final before elimination by Allegany High of Cumberland.

Last year's letter-winners available are Tillman Scott, guard, and Jimmy Glynn, forward. Other candidates are Earl Miller, Kenneth Easton, Leo Baldwin, Earl Lewis, Myron Ehrmantrout, Edgar Shinn and Herbert Green, forwards; Steve Ager, Jimmy MacGregor and Vernon Todd, centers, and George Taylor, Steve Miller and Richard Roland, guards.

Graduates Are Lost.

Wilkinson plans to cut his squad to ten players this Friday and then to give his charges intensive practice for the following two weeks before the St. John's game.

Eighteen candidates have reported for the Mount Rainier sophomore-freshman team, which will compete in the county series for junior quints. They are:

St. Louis Cards Are Reported Sold

Knapp, Baltimore, to a two-year term as president and renamed Warren C. Giles, Rochester, vice president for one year. William B. Carpenter was reappointed as umpire in chief of the league. No action was taken on the schedule by either league, although the American Association voted to open April 16 with a home-and-home schedule among eastern and western clubs and close September 15.

A record registration of 900 delegates was expected for the opening of the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues tomorrow. A bitter battle was foreseen in the request of the Nebraska State League for the right to place a team in Council Bluffs, Iowa, despite the minor 10-mile run. Omaha and the Western League insisted no violation of the rule forbidding any club to place a club within 10 miles of another minor league team would be tolerated. Council Bluffs is a bridge span away from Omaha. Otherwise, a happy meeting for all was anticipated with several new leagues expected to apply for membership.

Masterson Explains Woman's Death Pact

Chicago, Nov. 20 (AP).—Bernie Masterson, six-foot-four quarter back of the Chicago Bears, professional football team, asserted today he did not think his friendship with Mrs. Nell Walker Ablin, former show girl, had anything to do with her suicide leap from the eighth-floor window of a hotel Sunday night.

He intimated Mrs. Ablin had attempted to end her life before.

By Dave Herman.

TONY Sylvester, Bannockburn's rotund professional, who has made clubs for Bobby Jones, Tommy Armour, Gene Sarazen, Leo Diegel, George Von Elm, and other golfing notables, is going in strictly for shallow-faced wood clubs.

Long considered one of the ablest club makers in the country, Sylvester yesterday declared that "80 per cent of the golfers get better results out of sticks with smaller heads."

Sylvester added:

"The shallow-faced clubs give the beginners as well as the average players more confidence. They get the ball up quicker and easier, and are decidedly more reliable in the rough than the gauscer-faced sticks.

"During the past few weeks I have made four sets of wood sticks with the shallow face. I recommended the small heads, and the golfers were more than pleased with the results."

Sylvester, who served his apprenticeship in club-making under the famous Gil Nichols, said that the steel-shafted sticks have made such an indelible impression on the golfing public that he doubted if nature's own—the ricory-shafted—would ever regain its place.

The Bannockburn pro advocates wood shafts for iron clubs because they "don't give you the shock that steel does when you bang into the ball resting on hard turf."

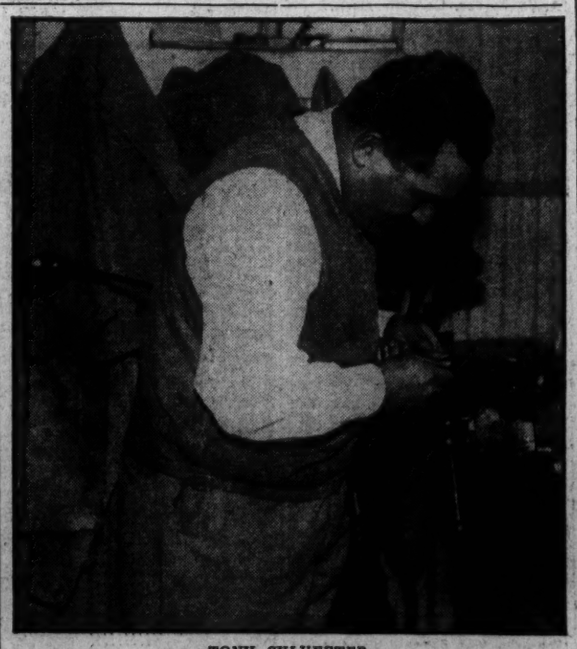
With winter just in the offing, Senor Sylvester offers the following tips to golfers who keep their clubs at home:



TONY SYLVESTER.

"Don't keep your clubs in a steam-heated room. Put them aside in your attic (not your cellar) and in a cool spot. Placing your sticks in hot rooms results in loosening the grips and drying out the glue. Be sure and wipe your sticks real good after playing in the rain."

Dividend News Is Aid to Market; Trading, 870,010 Shares.

New York, Nov. 20 (AP).—Stocks managed to keep above water today, but most other financial markets were unable to come up for air.

The news was rather bright, including a host of regular and extra dividends. General business also appeared to be moving at a home-accelerated pace toward more prosperous levels. But the majority of traders were not disposed to chase their favorites and the result was that a more cautious speculative attitude prevailed even in those departments that showed improvement.

While Wall Street was encouraged by the fact that the recently depressed utility stocks displayed resistance to further selling pressure, the heaviness of scattered power and light company loans in the bond market, as well as the softness of carrier liens, served to restrain any substantial revival of enthusiasm.

Fractional Loss Recovered.

The Standard Statistics Co. composite for 90 selected stocks got back the three-tenths of a point it lost in the previous session, closing at 72.6. The turnover amounted to 870,010 shares.

Optimism regarding the dividend action to be taken tomorrow by the American Telephone directors was reflected in a recovery in these shares of 2¼ points at 105. Only a few days ago this issue sagged to just above par. Telephone's upturn was attributed partly to short covering.

Public Service of New Jersey got up nearly a point and the board voted the regular quarterly dividend after the close of trading. Consolidated Gas dipped in the morning, but finished unchanged. Other utilities that ended a trifle higher included North American, which earlier had recorded a new year's low; Pacific Gas and United Gas Improvement.

Dry Goods Up.

Shares of Associated Dry Goods, which owns the majority of stock in Lord & Taylor Department Stores, spurted on the overnight announcement that the Lord & Taylor directors had voted on an extra dividend of $50 a share, in addition to the usual holiday extra of $5 and the regular quarterly disbursement of $2.50.

Associated first preferred advanced 9 points, the second preferred was up 6¼ and the common issue gained a point. Most other merchandising shares, however, were listless.

There was little news to account for the softness of the rails. Delaware & Hudson was off 2 points, Union Pacific nearly as much, and Santa Fe yielded more than a point. In some quarters it was thought that the low earnings condition of most of the carriers, and the continued fear of receiverships, may have been responsible for the heaviness of this group.

While Noranda Mines eased to a new 1934 bottom, most of the metals were not especially weak despite the apparent subsidence of inflationary psychology. The oils did little or nothing and such stocks as United States Steel, Bethlehem, Du Pont, National Distillers, General Motors, Chrysler, General Electric, Westinghouse, United Aircraft and a host of others held to a restricted groove.

Owens-Illinois Glass got up 3¼ points and International Business Machines advanced 2 in small turnovers. Some improvement was registered by Radio preferred B, Loew's, American Commercial Alcohol and Electric Auto-Lite. American Can and Allied Chemical gave up about a point each.

Only slight variations were recorded by leading foreign exchanges.

Wheat Exports Dip Lowest in Years

(Associated Press.)

America's wheat exports, which for nearly a half century have been one of the principal items in this country's foreign trade, sank to their lowest level in many years last week when not a single bushel was shipped abroad.

The Department of Commerce, reporting on grain exports, said also that only 13,000 bushels of all types of grain were exported during the week.

The draught last summer, officials said, left the country without the usual export surplus and little or no effort was being made to sell any grain abroad.

The lowest previous level in recent years was during the week of June 9, when 20,000 bushels of wheat were shipped. The 13,000 bushels exported last week compared with 172,000 the previous week and 463,000 during the corresponding week of last year.

Long-Term Future Currency Prospects Found Clarifying as Internal and External Pressure in Gold Bloc Countries Is Relaxed.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

New York, Nov. 20.—Now that the internal and external pressure on the currencies of the gold-bloc countries is relaxing, long-term future currency prospects are being clarified. Bankers here with international connections feel that the likely course of future monetary developments can now be traced with greater assurance than for some time past.

In the first place, recent events have shown clearly that widespread dissatisfaction exists within the gold-standard countries with the existing relationship of their currencies to the depreciated pound and dollar. Secondly, Great Britain and the United States apparently have a lively sense of the serious consequences that would follow a collapse of the gold bloc, with the resulting stimulus to agitation in various countries for further competitive currency depreciation. As a result, they have stood ready to resort to international cooperation to limit fluctuations of their own and other currencies.

The new attitude that is developing within the gold-bloc countries was clearly evidenced in the statement of the Dutch minister of finance that, if international currency stability were generally reestablished, Holland would have to consider whether the present gold value of the florin would be maintained. Both Holland and Belgium have been placed at disadvantage as regards their export trade because of the depreciation of approximately 40 per cent in the pound sterling and the dollar, and currencies dependent upon these two.

The adverse effect of currency depreciation elsewhere on gold-bloc countries has been intensified by the fact that internal price levels have not risen in countries whose currencies have been devalued, or otherwise reduced in foreign exchange value. In Great Britain, dependent upon foreign sources for much of her foodstuffs and raw materials, it was expected that currency depreciation would soon force the price level higher. This expectation has been disappointed.

U. S. Tries Several Expedients To Force Higher Prices.

The United States, relatively self-sufficient, resorted to a number of unusual measures—open-market operations of the Federal Reserve banks, the Thomas amendment, the NRA and the AAA—all of which were designed to force prices higher. Such higher price levels within Great Britain and the United States, it was argued for a time, would offset the depreciation of the pound and the dollar as far as competition in world markets was concerned.

However, these expectations were not realized. Owing to the fact that a number of other countries followed Great Britain in abandoning the gold standard, among them nations which were her chief suppliers of foodstuffs and raw materials, commodity prices within the country did not rise appreciably as sterling depreciated in terms of gold.

Similarly, commodity prices within the United States did not rise to the expected extent. It is becoming increasingly clear that the large excess productive capacity existing in this country, and the continued enormous number of unemployed with subnormal purchasing power, militate powerfully against a further price rise, regardless of monetary measures. The Administration itself has tended to withdraw higher prices, as a deliberate policy, into the background.

As a result of the apparent stability of the existing price levels within the countries with depreciated currencies, placing the gold bloc nations at a serious competitive disadvantage, sentiment in favor of devaluation has increased within the latter. However, it would obviously be dangerous for them to attempt devaluation at the present time.

Gold Bloc Countries Plan Content Cut, It Is Reported.

On the other hand, it is reliably reported that a reduction in the gold content of several or all of the gold bloc currencies is being seriously considered, to be effected by a single operation at the time when general stabilization of currencies is attained. At such time, devaluation of its currency by any one country would be regarded as final. It would then be explained, not as currency depreciation, but rather as a readjustment of the relative levels of the currencies of gold bloc countries to that of the dollar and the pound sterling.

The ability and the willingness of gold-bloc countries to postpone changes in their currency status until such time as general stabilization is accomplished depends largely, however, on what Great Britain and the United States do in the meanwhile. Further depreciation of the pound or the dollar would aggravate economic and political difficulties within the gold-standard countries, and strengthen their elements favoring immediate currency depreciation. This situation seems to be appreciated in London and Washington. Through aid from the British equalization account and the exchange stabilization fund, through credits granted foreign central banks and through the recent removal of foreign exchange restrictions by the United States, the effort has been made to convince European financial opinion that Britain and the United States are through with reliance upon currency depreciation as a panacea for their economic ills.

Bonds Decline One-Tenth as Utilities Drop

New York, Nov. 20 (AP).—The bond market pursued an uneven course today with further losses recorded in utilities and secondary railroad loans. Prime investments were fairly steady, but U. S. Governments were mostly lower, as was the foreign section.

Transfers aggregated $12,233,000, par value, compared with $12,388,000 on Monday. The turnover in Governments was $2,770,000 against $3,180,000.

Some Utilities Sag.

Although brokers reported increased support for certain utility bonds and the equity shares of that group rallied moderately on the stock exchange, American Water Works & Electric 6s closed 4¼ lower at 68¾, North American Edison 5s were 2 lower at 75½, and Columbia Gas & Electric 5s yielded 2⅜ to 78¾.

Other issues losing 1 to 2 included obligations of New Orleans Public Service, North American Co. and Utilities Power & Light. Among those selling fractionally higher were issues of Detroit Edison, American Telephone, Brooklyn Edison and Cincinnati Gas.

In the carrier group, there were numerous losses of 1 to 2 points, including Chicago & North Western 3½s, off 2¼ at 46; New York Central 4½s, 2¼ lower at 54½, and Pere Marquette 4½s, which yielded 2½ to 67½.

The New York Traction issues were in demand following reports that early unification was in prospect. Interboro 7s were 2 higher at 81½ and Manhattan Railway 4s were that much improved at 40. New Haven deb. 6s were 1½ higher at 49.

Other Sections Spotty.

Other sections of the list were spotty. Standard Oil Co. of New York 4½s lost another ¾ points to 102½ on rumors that the bonds might be called. Their redemption price is 101.

Treasury issues were 1-32d to 8-32ds lower and home owners loan 3s 2¾s lost around ¼. Liberty 1st 4¼s were 3-32ds higher at 103.20.

There was little activity in the foreign group. Lower prices were taken for most of the Argentine issues traded, while German 7s (Dawes plan issue), yielded 2½ to 34. Greek government 6s gained 2⅝ points to 28¾.

Curb's Prices Turn Mixed; Utilities Rally

New York, Nov. 20 (AP).—A mild rally in utilities, which had been in a declining state for several days, featured late trading on the curb market today. In other sections of the list there was considerable irregularity, with oils, metals and industrials selling lower and specialties higher. Trading picked up in the final hour.

American Gas, Electric Bond & Share, Niagara Hudson, Cities Service and American Superpower closed ⅛ to ⅜ higher after declining about that much in early dealings. Among specialties selling higher were General Tire & Rubber, up 7¾ points, at 70½, and Pratt & Lambert, up 2, at 28. Lake Shore Mines was ⅝ lower, at 53⅜, and International Petroleum closed ¼ lower, at 31¾. Others yielding fractionally included Creole Petroleum and Bunker Hill & Sullivan.

Allowable Output Of Oil Is Reduced

Production for December Fixed at 2,307,000 Barrels.

Stocks—Dividend news helped stocks and the market kept above water. The list regained the three-tenths of a point lost Monday. Sales volume dropped slightly to 870,010 shares.

Bonds—The market pursued an uneven course and further losses in utilities and secondary railroad loans were recorded. The average decline for the list was one-tenth of a point. Sales slipped to $12,233,000.

Curb—A mild rally was recorded in utilities, but the rest of the list was irregular. Oils and metals declined. Sales volume was increased in the final hour of trading.

Wheat—A burst of profit-taking caused a pronounced break in prices. Wheat lost around 2 cents per bushel and corn also dropped. December wheat sold at 99⅛; May, at 97⅞.

Dollar—The United States dollar was fairly steady on foreign exchanges. It stood in New York, with reference to other currencies, $4.98⅛ to the English pound; 6.95 cents to the French franc, and 40.23 cents to the German mark.

Sharp Upturn in U. S. Profits Called Fair Sign of Recovery

By G. A. Phillips.

New York, Nov. 20 (AP).—A sharp curve upward in the income of the American people in 1934 is indicated by estimates of leading trade analysts who place it around $9,000,000,000 more than last year.

This reversal of the pendulum, which swung steadily in the wrong direction from 1929, when the national income was roughly $86,106,000,000, to 1933, when it was about $49,560,000,000, is believed by some economists to form the groundwork of a broad concave base which will sustain a relative degree of prosperity over a number of years.

The drastic decline in the income of the Nation which began in the fall of 1929 was definitely checked in the second quarter of 1933, statistics indicate, although at the beginning the increase from month to month was barely perceptible. By the end of the year, however, the upturn had gained considerable momentum and unless something now unforeseen interferes, expectations are that it will be making major strides at the end of this year and may total about $58,500,000,000.

Profit Gain Aids Trade.

In support of their belief that the present gains form the basis for a new period of prosperity, economists point to the last two major depressions in this country which were broken only when an upward turn occurred in the national income, accompanied by an increase in general business activity which usually enters upon an important cycle of expansion shortly thereafter.

Statistics covering the severe depression of the 1870's indicate that aggressive recovery occurred during the midsummer of 1879. Since the panic of six years previous, business had been severely depressed and the national income took a sharp nose dive.

A well established index of industrial activity which seldom varies more than 10 per cent from normal was 10.8 per cent above normal in March, 1880, as compared with 11 per cent below normal in the same month in 1879. Thus, in a single year there occurred an increase of more than 20 per cent and the same kind of conditions prevailed during the exit from the depression in the 1890's.

Moves in Cycle.

This cycle of decline began in the second quarter of 1893 with a severe panic and lasted through the third quarter of 1897. During the ten-year period from 1890 to 1900 the national income rose from $10,800,000,000 to $19,100,000,000; in another decade it had amounted to $30,900,000,000 and continued a less spectacular upward trend until 1913, when it totaled $37,122,000,000.

In the following year there was a slight setback, but by 1915 it reached $39,322,000,000 and grew by leaps and bounds until by 1920 it had attained the staggering total of $74,599,000,000.

Postwar adjustments put a substantial dent in it the following year when it receded to $56,615,000,000, but recovery was quick and in 1922 the figures were $60,195,000,000. A steady upward trend ensued year by year until the all-time peak was reached in 1929 at $86,106,000,000.

Washington Business Angles

(Associated Press.)

The plea of privacy which some corporations are making to the securities and Exchange Commission in efforts to head off disclosure of data on gross business is being questioned carefully by the commission.

Corporations have claimed their right to privacy on the ground of keeping information from competitors, but some officials suggest they also may be keeping valuable information from stockholders and investors.

The commission has not decided what it will do about such data, but Commissioner James M. Landis recently touched on the matter in these words:

"Too often accounting practices have been employed for the purpose of concealing rather than of revealing the true situation to the investing public.

"Then again much of the concealment has been due to a certain secretiveness on the part of corporation executives based upon the theory that only their competitors would benefit from such disclosures as might be made by informative financial statements.

"Hardly 50 per cent of the listed corporations on the New York Stock Exchange, I am told, reveal anything more about the operating success of their companies than to give a general figure on operating income.

"Though, of course, in some instances there may be validity in this claim for privacy, there can be no doubt that in the majority of cases the idea can not be seriously entertained that to give a fair and full report or corporate assets and profits will give an unfair advantage to competitors.

"Certainly, except in the unusual instances, where such a claim is insisted upon, one may well doubt the desirability of encouraging or permitting public investment in the enterprise."

Cash Dividends Amounting to $57.50 Voted by Lord & Taylor.

New York, Nov. 20 (AP).—Directors of the Beech-Nut Packing Co. have ordered an extra dividend of 50 cents on the common stock together with the regular quarterly distribution of 75 cents. The extra is payable December 15 to stock of record December 1 and the regular January 2 to stock of record December 12.

Cash dividends amounting to $57.50 a share on the common stock of Lord & Taylor were announced today. The payments were classified as follows: Extra, $50; special Christmas distribution, $5; regular quarterly, $2.50.

The company is the principal New York department store unit of the Associated Dry Goods Corporation, which by ownership of more than 26,000 of the 29,980 outstanding Lord & Taylor common shares, is the principal beneficiary of the disbursements. The extra dividend is payable out of surplus.

The extra and Christmas dividends are payable December 17 to stock of record December 1. The regular distribution is payable January 2, to stock of record December 17.

Net profit of Maytag Co., excluding its wholly owned Canadian subsidiary, for the third quarter was $423,885 after ordinary charges, depreciation and taxes compared with $594,779 in the September quarter last year. In the first 9 months profit was $1,470,459, against $670,990 a year ago.

McLellan Stores Co. reports for the ten months ended October 31 profit amounted to $825,753 after ordinary charges, depreciation, etc., but before Federal taxes and employes' bonus. In the same period last year the company made a profit of $291,713.

Mesta Machine Co. declared a quarterly dividend of 37½ cents on the common stock, payable January 1 to stock of record December 17. This represents an increase in the company's total cash dividend distribution over the 50-cent quarterly payments made before the recently distributed stock dividend of 66 2-3 per cent.

Net income of the Louisville & Nashville Railroad in the nine monthes ended September 30 amounted to $1,950,709, after taxes and charges equal to $1.66 a share, compared with $1,621,840, or $1.38 a share, in the same period last year.

Norwalk Tire & Rubber Co. reports for the year ended September 30 net profit of $11,234, equivalent to $1.23 on the 7 per cent preferred stock, against $73,556, equal after preferred dividends to 20 cents a common share in the previous year.

Houston, Tex., Nov. 20 (AP).—The Humble Oil & Refining Co., at a directors' meeting today, declared its regular quarterly dividend of 25 cents a share to stockholders of record of December 1. The dividend is payable on January 1.

Building-Loan Information Office Planned

By Karl Von Lewinski.

Establishment of a central clearing house for the dispensation of building and loan information to be located at the National Press Building, was announced yesterday at the monthly meeting of the Columbia Building and Loan League.

With a central office to serve for the gathering of statistics it is felt that the activities of the league can be more effectively coordinated and its service to members and the public greatly increased.

It was pointed out that the District League in making this step, was following the example of the great majority of State League. Forty-five of these have central offices with a full-or part-time staff.

The office will serve as the headquarters for the national organization of building and loans, the United States Building and Loan League of Chicago.

Paid Insurance Business.

Paid business in excess of $3,250,000, for the first ten months of 1934, was reported yesterday by John F. Cremen, general agent of the Massachusetts Mutual Lie Insurance Co. in Washington.

The increase of 102 per cent in new paid business over the corresponding ten months of 1933, is the largest percentage increase made by any agency of the company.

Mr. Cremen stated that the gain over last year is due to a marked increase in production on the part of older representatives as well as more than $1,000,000 of business from agents appointed this year.

Outstanding in the list of older agents are Norwood Simmons, Dan J. Harrison, Lucetta W. Stockbridge, Leopold V. Freudberg, Graham E. Wilson, and Maybelle Raymond. Top notchers of the new organization, George H. Llewellyn, Alexander Wolf, jr., Harvey F. Ernest, and Raymond A. Du Four.

The Comptrolled of the Currency and the Federal Reserve System have lately begun a more careful check of the net worth of bank directors, the latest instructions sent the bank examiners, reveal.

The order applies to national banks as well as to State banks which are members of the Federal Reserve System.

Safe Deposit Meeting.

The regular meeting of the safe deposit section of the District of Columbia Bankers Association will be held in the board room of the American Security & Trust Co. on Thursday, November 22, at 8 p. m.

Richard E. Harris, chairman of the section, will preside and will lead a discussion on some questions of particular interest to vault custodians.

The following committees which have recently been appointed by Mr. Harris will give reports of their activities:

Standardized safe-deposit practices committee—W. Clarence Miller, chairman, National Bank of Washington; Mrs. Doris M. DeLozier, Second National Bank; James E. Wolfe, National Metropolitan Bank; Miss Marion E. Hartley, Hamilton National Bank; Mr. John M. Boetler, National Savings & Trust Co.

Standardized safe deposit forms committee—Hans W. Ireland, chairman, American Security & Trust Co.; Mrs. Helen R. Shapard, Bank of Commerce & Savings; James B. Skinner, Liberty National Bank; Samuel R. Baulsir, Security Savings & Commercial Bank; C. M. Ashton, Munsey Trust Co.

Educational and publicity committee—Miss Mary J. Pearce, chairman, Columbia National Bank; Ralph H. Norton, the City Bank; James M. Mason, Washington Loan & Trust Co.; Nelson Stokes, Lincoln National Bank.

Walt Mason

Another Dictator.

They had a rotten time in Rome, about 2,000 years ago; the empire had become the home of anarchy and crime, and woe. It was the scene of frenzied strife, of vicious butchery and gore; no citizen could say his life was safe for half an hour or more. Then came Augustus to the front, who said that he would boss the game, and straightway pulled so great a stunt that he acquired a deathless fame. He did not call himself a king, he did not ask a crown or throne, but regulated everything, and framed up statutes of his own. With Livia, his wife, he upset something every day; he cared no hoot for human life, if it seemed standing in his way. He hired assassins who were skilled in bumping off the useless skate, and every night some gents were killed to please the ruling potentate. His methods doubtless were at first uncouth and barbarous and wild; but, starting, he was at his worst, and later he became quite mild. He made the Roman name once more a thing of majesty and pride, 'twas heard with awe on every shore until the great Augustus died. The Roman trade, once beaten down, arose again to gorgeous heights; the merchant princes of the town were praising Gus, both days and nights. The Roman armies marched aboard, and knocked the stuffing from their foes; Dalmatian plains and German sod were strewn with bones and things like those. The Roman story was sublime, as golden years went rolling by; alas, that in the course of time the great Augustus had to die. If you would know what happened then read histories of ancient states; it seems the place of mighty men is always taken by cheap skates.

Vote Recount To Be Sought In Montgomery

Diamond and Chinn to Ask Circuit Court to Order New Talley.

Petitions asking for a recount of votes in the recent Montgomery County elections affecting John B. Diamond and Raleigh S. Chinn, Democratic candidates, will be filed in Montgomery County Circuit Court today.

Joseph C. Cissel and Roger Whiteford, counsel for the candidates, had planned to file the petitions yesterday, but were unable to complete them until late last night.

Official tabulation of votes for the second commissioner district showed Diamond 89 votes behind his Fusion opponent, while Chinn was 203 votes behind his successful opponent, Frank H. Karn, for the commissionership of the Third District.

Political observers, however, point out Chinn is but 18 votes behind King and the filing of the petition in his favor tends to strengthen rumors an attack on the election of commissioners by districts is contemplated by the Democrats. Should this move succeed, Chinn would have to gain but 18 votes to win the election and make safe the Democratic control of the board of county commissioners.

Irregularities in Judging.

The petitions, however, are not expected to go into this phase of the situation. They will contend the two commissioners failed to receive the proper credit for a number of votes because of irregularities in the judging and counting of the votes in the various precincts, The Post was reliably informed last night.

The petitions will state, The Post has learned, ballots which had been improperly marked were counted in favor of King and a number were rejected which should have been counted to the favor of Diamond.

The petition further will allege, it was learned, that a Republican judge in one precinct read all of the ballots and refused to permit the Democratic judge or the challengers of either party to see them and in this district King is alleged to have received a plurality of more than 50 votes.

It further will allege judges in one precinct found a number of ballots which were marked so indistinctly the judges could not determine for whom the ballot was intended and the judges are alleged to have marked the ballots themselves and counted them.

"Alleged Democratic" Judges.

Alleged Democratic judges in several precincts who in fact were fusion supporters also are named in the petition, it was learned. Four of those listed as Democratic officials actually had signed the Fusion Party petition in which they certified they intended to support the Fusion Party and its candidates, the petition will charge.

The petition further will point out that a number of persons voted on the same ballots for Edward T. Benton, Republican, and William H. Fulks, Fusionist, in the first commissioner district. It also alleged the judges did not throw out all commissioner votes on those ballots but merely the first district, where Richard H. Lansdale, Democrat, polled a majority of 1,127. The petition contends all votes for county commissioner should have been ignored on these ballots instead of only the first district votes.

It further will be alleged that one precinct judge refused to sign the return and tally sheet because he said ballots had been counted which had distinct identification marks.

The petition will allege that more than 200 ballots counted in favor of King were illegal because persons had voted for six commissioners instead of five.

Tally Sheets Off.

The petition further will allege, it was learned, that when there were discrepancies on the tally sheets in several precincts, the clerks failed to count votes for Diamond until the two sheets tallied, and that in one precinct two clerks left the polling place carrying with them ballots which were marked by four persons outside of the polling place and then deposited the ballots in the ballot box and that they were counted with other ballots cast legally. In one precinct seven ballots which had been marked in accordance with law were handed to the judge in charge of the ballot box but were not deposited in the box but on the cover and were not counted and that these same judges refused persons whose ballots they had held improperly folded to reenter the voting booth and properly fold the ballots, the petition will also allege.

It also will be charged that in the Darnestown precinct on the K to Z book, the tally sheet shows that 381 ballots were cast while the judges of election return showed that 368 persons voted. The same precinct was reported as having 393 qualified voters in the report of October 16, 1934, made to the board of election supervisors after registration and revision had been completed but the return of the judges of election made after the election to the board of canvassers showed a total of 424 persons, the petition will charge.

The petition will ask the Circuit Court to appoint judges to conduct a recount of the votes should a hearing reveal irregularities as charged in the petition.

John T. Burke, Editor, Dies.

Newark, N. J., Nov. 20 (AP).—John T. Burke, 71, associate editor of The Newark Ledger, and former New York and Boston newspaper editor, died today.

Unconventional Defense.

Good defense is not only a matter of memorizing conventional leads and discards, but is to an even greater extent dependent upon the player's ability to visualize a complete hand. The defensive player should remember what the opposing contract is and, by the simple process of subtracting, figure out the number of tricks needed to defeat this contract. He should then grope about for a method of obtaining these tricks, and he should make any play which seems to offer the best chance of so doing even though this play seems to contradict every well-known convention of card playing.

On the hand below, East was able to defeat a rather ambitious North and South contract by being farsighted enough to make a play which to a beginner would seem to be a form of suicide.

South, Dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.

♠ J 10 6 3 2 ♡ 9 ◇ A 9 7 ♣ A Q 10 7	N W E S	♠ Q 9 ♡ 6 3 ◇ K 4 3 2 ♣ J 9 5 4 3
	♠ A 8 5 4 ♡ K Q J 10 5 2 ◇ 5 ♣ K 6

4♠(2)	Pass	5♡	Pass
Pass(3)	Pass

1—A bad overbid. North should have bid only three hearts.
2—South can not be blamed for trying for a slam, not knowing that his partner's four-heart bid was most unsound.
3—I would not have seriously blamed South had he decided to bid six at this point. However, South must be admired for respecting his partner's sign-off, even though the sign-off came after the damage had been done.

West opened his fourth best spade, and South let the trick ride around to his Ace, which was forced by East's Queen. South immediately realized that he had arrived at a very dangerous contract, as from the bidding the Ace of clubs was almost surely marked in the West player's hand. He knew that his only hope of fullfilling his contract was to set up a diamond trick on which a club could be discarded, but realized that to do this he had to let the opposition in at least once, and that if West got in to lead through the club King, all would be lost. South finally adopted the line of play which would make the task of the defense the most difficult. He led the King of hearts from his own hand and then drew the second round of trumps by leading the ten and overtaking the dummy's Ace. He now led the diamond Queen from dummy.

Against a less astute defensive player than East happened to be, South's cleverly selected play would have succeeded. There is no doubt but that most players, seeing the practically solid diamond combination in dummy, would not have played the King, reasoning that to do so would set up the suit. However, East looked ahead. He realized that if South held the lone or singly guarded Ace of diamonds the diamond suit could eventually be set up, whether the King was played or not; and also that it was most important in case South did not have the diamond Ace that he, East, win the first round of diamonds rather than his partner. East accordingly played the diamond King on the Queen, and when this card held the trick, a club was led through South's King and West triumphantly cashed the setting trick.

Had East failed to play his diamond King, West would have been forced to win the trick, and now could have done nothing but cash the Ace of clubs. As a matter-of-fact, with any other play but the club, Ace South have been able to make six-odd. With three cards of reentry to dummy in the spade King and the two trumps, it would have been a simple matter for him to set up dummy's diamond suit by a lead through East, and the losing club tricks could have been discarded.

U. D. C. Considers Hero Memorials

Jefferson Davis Highway and Lee Home Subjects.

New York, Nov. 20 (AP).—Two memorials to heroes of the Southern Confederacy occupied the attention of the United Daughters of the Confederacy today at their first convention held north of the Mason and Dixon line.

The Jefferson Davis highway and the memorial restoration of Stratford Hall, birthplace of Gen. Robert E. Lee, in Westmoreland County, Va., were the subject of committee meetings.

A plan to extend beautification and development of parks along the highway, which runs from Washington to San Francisco and from Fairview, Ky., to Biloxi, Miss., was outlined at the highway committee session.

Two-thirds of the $50,000 sought as a gift from the U. D. C. to be used toward the restoration of Stratford Hall has been obtained, it was announced.

Girl Admits Guilt In Taking Jackie

Lexington, Ky., Nov. 20 (AP).—The girl who took 4-year-old Jackie Gibbons on a hitch-hiking trip southward last week while his parents frantically sought him, pleaded guilty today to enticing a child from home and went to jail in default of $10,000 bond.

Her plea to a State charge of "decoying and enticing and harboring a child under 10 years of age," was made upon arraignment before Judge Clyde O. Burton. He ordered her held for the Fayette County grand jury which meets in January. The enticing statute carries a penalty of one to three years.

Jackie, who is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Lawrence Gibbons, and the girl were found Sunday in Chattanooga, Tenn., and returned here. The girl first gave her name as Bernice Lou Givens, of Cincinnati, but later said she was Beulah Winchester.

Huey Ready to Leave On Tardy 'Honeymoon'

New Orleans, La., Nov. 20 (U.P.).—Senator Huey Long was ready to leave tonight on a trip "way out West."

Was he going to California? He couldn't say. Was he going to confer with Stanford and California University officials, perhaps suggesting that his adopted Louisiana State University football team be invited to the Rose Bowl. Certainly not. The Kingfish said it was a belated honeymoon trip.
